OPPOSITION GOING TO WORK AGAINST COURT PROPOSAL

Lines Drawn for Bold Counter-Offensive — Democrats Hardened in Resolve by Speech.

SERIES OF SPEECHES TO GIVE ANSWER

Judiciary Committee Will Start Hearings Thursday With Attorney-General Cummings on Stand.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senate opponents of the President's proposal to remake the Supreme Court today were marshaling their forces for a bold counter-offensive to Mr. Roosevelt's open attack on the court in his "Victory Dinner" speech Thursday night.

The Democratic opponents, such as Senators Wheeler, Burke, George and Van Nuys, all active supporters of the President in the two presidential campaigns, were particularly offended at the statement that the present hostility to his court scheme came from substantially "the same elements" of opposition that "roared" against the President's re-election.

This part of the speech definitely cemented the Democratic opposition and hardened their determination to fight to the "bitter end," according to Burke of Nebraska, and by implication it put several of the non-committal Senators in the embarrassing position of being unwilling to tell which side they are on. It also enabled the Republican Senators, who unanimously oppose the plan, to move further in the background to give room for the Democrats to fight publicly over the issue.

Patronage and Public Sentiment.

Partisans and opponents of the plan agree that patronage and public sentiment will be the deciding factors with the non-committal or lukewarm Senators whose votes will decide the question. On both these points, the President has the advantage. Although the opposition ranks contain such notable debaters as Borah, Wheeler, Vandenberg, Connally, Clark and George, none of these can match the President in radio technique; and, of course, the opposition has no patronage to offer.

The present lack of definite opposition strategy was apparent tonight as Senator Burke made a nation-wide radio address against the President's plan. In his 15-minute talk there was no direct mention of the President's Thursday night address. The nearest approach to a direct reference was Burke's statement that "no greater disservice was ever done to the cause of democracy than may well result from the diligent and surpassingly cunning and deceptive program to discredit the Supreme Court in the minds of the people."

Immediate Strategy.

For the immediate strategy, the opposition will carry out next week the program arranged before the President made his opening statement to the country Thursday night. The same is true of the administration forces.

On Monday, labor's Non-Partisan League will hold a meeting in Washington to make plans to arouse labor sentiment for the President's plan. The political influence of this organization, with John L. Lewis, Sidney Hillman and Maj. George L. Berry as the leaders, is not discounted by the opposition.

The President on Tuesday night will hold his "fireside chat" with the country via the radio. The opposition is elated over the fact that he has made the appointment of new Justices the sole issue of the controversy and has discarded the camouflage of the congested court dockets.

Hearings Begin Wednesday.

The formal hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on the White House bill will start Wednesday with Attorney-General Cummings as the first witness for the defense. There was a report that Senators Borah and Steiwer would take charge of cross-examining Cummings, but in view of the President's statement that the present hostility to his plan came from those who opposed his re-election, that task probably will be turned over to an orthodox Democrat such as King of Utah or Connally of Texas.

That night Senator Wheeler will give the "official" opposition answer to the President and the At-

MRS. ROOSEVELT CARRIES A PISTOL WHEN RIDING ALONE

She "Can Use It," Too, She Says, but Fear "Never Enters My Mind."

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 6.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt carries a pistol when she rides alone in her motor car and "can use it," she said here today.

"I am never accompanied by guards at New York or Washington, where everybody knows me," Mrs. Roosevelt said at a press conference. "I go about just as anybody else. However, when I travel there are usually special guards furnished me, but they are not detailed at my request."

"Don't you have fear of bodily harm?" she was asked. "It never enters my mind," she replied.

The President's wife said she had the same training with the pistol "that the New York National Guard has."

Mrs. Roosevelt opened a six-state lecture tour this afternoon with an address at Municipal Auditorium on "A Day at the White House."

AUSTRALIA DEFEATS TWO CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES

Amendments to Regulate Interstate Commerce Beaten on Face of Returns So Far.

By the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 7 (Sunday.)—Two constitutional amendments to regulate interstate commerce appeared today to have been defeated.

Majorities in all of Australia's six states opposed a proposal to change the interstate free trade provision of the constitution so as to permit Congress to prohibit the movement of certain goods across state borders. Late returns showed 662,824 voters favoring the amendment and 1,323,647 opposing it.

A proposal to regulate air transportation between the states brought an affirmative vote of 1,062,556 with 985,364 negative votes, but it held leads in only two of the states, Victoria and Queensland, and thus was beaten.

3 MINE FIELDS CHARTED OFF NORTHERN COAST OF SPAIN

Merchantmen Warned to Keep 40 Miles Offshore; Three Vessels Damaged.

MARSEILLES, France, March 6.—Marine authorities announced tonight three groups of floating mines had been charted six miles off the northern coast of Spain. Ship masters were warned to keep 40 miles offshore.

The lines of mines were mapped off Cape San Sebastian, Cape Creus and Cape Bregur.

The third ship to strike a mine in the shipping lanes off the coast of Catalonia was the Greek gasoline tanker Loukia, which blew up Thursday, killing most of its crew of 24. Earlier casualties were the British liner Llandovery Castle and the French freighter Marie Therese Laborgne.

CASKETS IN SAFETY PARADE

Each to Represent Traffic Death in Atlanta During 1936.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 6.—Eighty-six caskets mounted on trucks will be moved through Atlanta streets at noon Wednesday to the accompaniment of dirges played by bands. The coffins will represent Atlanta traffic fatalities of 1936.

In addition, 100 wrecked automobiles will be hauled through the streets. Floats will carry descriptions of safety methods.

ALUMINUM PLANT WORKERS LEAVE A. F. OF L. FOR CIO

Biggest Unit, at New Kensington, Pa., Goes Over to John L. Lewis' Side in Steel Drive.

COURT CONTEST OVER BREAK LIKELY

William L. Green's Aid in Pittsburgh Says He Will Sue for Funds of Seceding Group.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 6. — John L. Lewis' union drive in steel spread today to the aluminum industry, when the biggest unit of the Aluminum Workers' Union, at the nearby new Kensington plant of the Aluminum Co. of America, employing about 7000 workers, bolted the American Federation of Labor in favor of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

John Haser, vice-president of the unit, said a national convention of representatives from all locals would be held at New Kensington April 12 to draft a constitution for an international union to affiliate with the CIO.

W. B. Gravatt, president of the New Kensington local, announced the action was taken at a special meeting last night and involved dispute over the union's funds amounting to approximately $27,000. Other union spokesmen said the unit severed its financial relations with the A. F. of L. and voted to use the funds for an organization drive in the industry.

Definitely Aligned to C.I.O.

The steel workers' organizing committee, which precipitated an open fight with steel workers' employe representatives by winning recognition this week from Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, said the action "definitely aligned the aluminum workers with the Lewis forces, which have set out to organize the mass production industries." The committee said the aluminum local had placed its funds with it for safe keeping.

Indication that the aluminum union's break will lead to a court fight came from David Williams, A. F. of L. representative in Pittsburgh, who announced: "I have asked permission of William Green and the Executive Board of the Federation to go into court to compel the officers of the local to account for their funds."

Williams said that under rules of the Federation, all funds must be accounted for and turned over with the local's charter. He said the union had not paid anything to the Federation since last November, despite the provision that it turn over 35 cents of every dollar collected in dues and the $1 initiation fee for each new member. Williams said he would confer with Green Monday in Washington.

Bunch of Communists.

"A large percentage of the local want to remain in the American Federation of Labor," he said. ". . . We're not going to let a bunch of Communists destroy all of the things we've built up after months of work in the aluminum industry."

Approximately 40,000 workers are employed in the aluminum industry, 25,000 in plants of the Aluminum Co. of America at Alcoa, Tenn.; Badin, N. C.; Cleveland, Detroit, East St. Louis, Ill.; Edgewater, N. J.; Fairfield, Conn.; Garwood, N. J.; Massena, N. Y.; Niagara Falls, and Oakland, Cal.

A member of the steel organizing committte said the aluminum union's announcement today could be interpreted as Lewis' answer to Green's instructions this week to all labor councils to purge themselves of Lewis influence. He added: "This is only the beginning."

CAPT. RAMON TORRES KILLED IN FALL OF PLANE INTO SEA

Four Others With Noted Spanish Flyer and Amateur Bullfighter Lose Lives.

By the Associated Press.

BARCELONA, Spain, March 6.—The death of Captain Ramon Torres, noted Spanish aviator, amateur bullfighter and popular sportsman, was reported tonight in dispatches from Gerona.

The reports said Captain Torres and four others were killed when a Government airplane in which they were flying fell into the sea. Engine trouble was reported to have caused the plunge.

Captain Torres was ranked as Catalonia's most famous civilian pilot. In 1935 the national trophy of Spain was presented to him by the International League of Aviators in recognition of his flight in 1934 from Barcelona to the Sahara.

CARNEGIE-ILLINOIS STEEL RAISES PAY 10 CENTS AN HOUR

Increase Affects 111,000 Hourly, Tonnage and Piecework Employes of Concern.

FORTY-HOUR WEEK; EXTRA FOR OVERTIME

Philip Murray of CIO and President of U. S. Steel Discuss Pay Rises—Conference Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, March 6. — The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation announced tonight a 10 cents an hour increase for hourly, tonnage and piecework employes, effective March 16. The raise affects skilled and semi-skilled workers. The work week was set at 40 hours.

The announcement was made to a grievance committee of the corporation's employe representation group which has been conferring two days with the management. Committeemen said the raise will apply to about 111,000 of the concern's 120,000 workers.

On Tuesday the company announced a raise of 10 cents an hour for common labor, which had been receiving 42½ cents, and said an adjustment would be made for the higher paid men. Approximately 7 per cent of the workers are in this common labor bracket.

The company also agreed "for the present" not to hire any additional men in order to avoid payment of overtime for those working over 40 hours a week. Employes now are averaging 42 hours a week, and the company agreed to pay time and a half for all work over 40 hours.

Carnegie-Illinois, producing approximately 30 per cent of the country's steel, usually sets the pace for the rest of the industry in both prices and wages.

Murray Talks With Irvin.

The question of the amount of a raise for workers other than common labor, came up today at a meeting between Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee and William Irvin, president of the United States Steel Corporation, parent concern of Carnegie-Illinois.

Murray was understood to have suggested a flat increase of 10 cents an hour would be an easier way to settle the question. The two were discussing details of a meeting next Wednesday of a joint committee of union and company representatives.

This committee is to draw up a written agreement on working conditions, application of wage rates, hours, rules and a method of adjusting disputes which might arise from the recent agreement in which the company recognized the steel workers' committee as a collective bargaining agency for its members.

News of the Murray-Irvin meeting was withheld until tonight.

Under the new scale a common laborer now receiving 52½ cents an hour makes $25.20 for a 48-hour work week. If he continues to work 48 hours, as the company indicated he would, his pay would amount to $37.50, including the overtime.

Showdown Near in Steel.

CIO forces and employes representatives prepared over the week end for a showdown in their fight for leadership of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's 65,000 workers in the Pittsburgh district.

A four-man grievance committee, empowered by a majority of the employes' district council to reorganize their collective bargaining plan, based their strategy on the corporation's signed agreement to recognize the committee as a collective bargaining agency.

Meanwhile, Murray prepared to meet with union representatives from the same plants Tuesday to form a collective bargaining group to confer Wednesday with company officers on wage increases for skilled and semi-skilled workers in addition to the basic increase of 10 cents an hour and the 40-hour week announced by the corporation Tuesday.

Bethlehem Steel Strikers at Lebanon Enlist Other Workers.

By the Associated Press.

STEELTON, Pa., March 6.—Strikers, who caused the closing of the Lebanon plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, sought to enlist workers in the corporation's larger Steelton mills tonight. Organizers for the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization came to this suburb of Harrisburg, about 25 miles from the Lebanon plant, for a mass meeting.

Representatives of Lebanon employes conferred with company of-

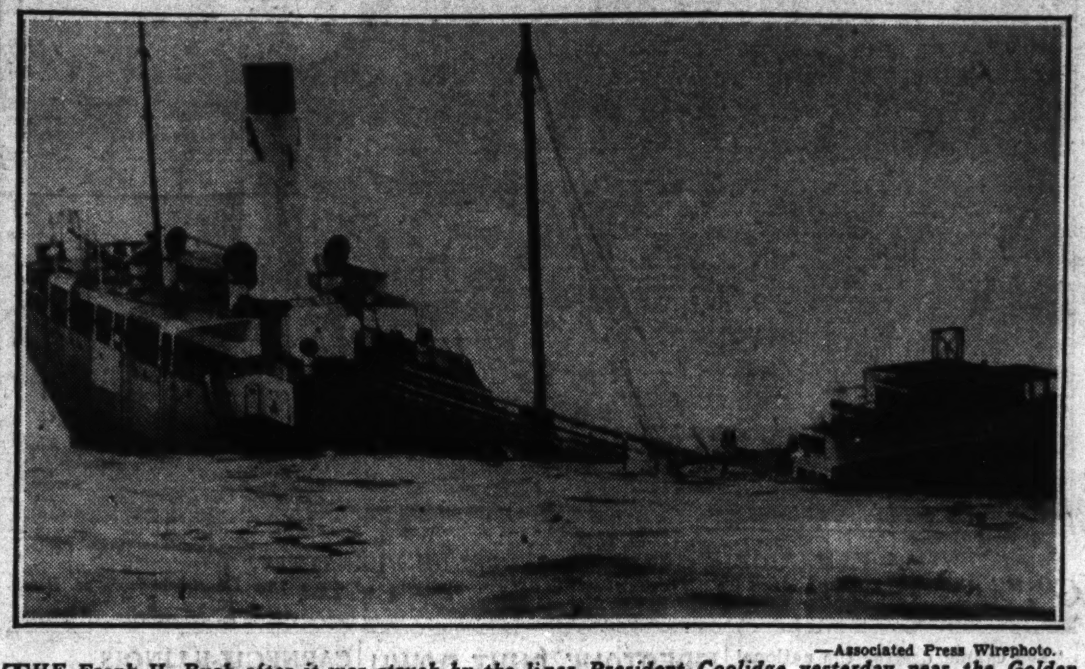
Tanker Barely Afloat After Golden Gate Collision



—Associated Press Wirephoto.

THE Frank H. Buck after it was struck by the liner President Coolidge yesterday near the Golden Gate bridge.

LINER AND TANKER COLLIDE IN FOG

The President Coolidge and Smaller Vessel Damaged at Golden Gate.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6. — More than 1000 passengers and crew members escaped with no more than a scare as the Pacific liner President Coolidge collided with the tanker Frank H. Buck today in a dense fog at the Golden Gate.

Both vessels were damaged but swift rescue work by the liner proved to have been unnecessary when the tanker remained afloat. All the 36 crew members of the Frank H. Buck were aboard the President Coolidge within 20 minutes after the crash but the captain and seven crew members returned later to their own ship while the liner limped back to port.

The tanker floated in the channel tonight, down by the head and half submerged, with a Coast Guard cutter standing by. The Coolidge, its forward pumps going, lay at its dock after discharging the 28 tanker crew members. Aboard the President Coolidge were 678 passengers and a crew of 350.

Ships Meet Bow to Bow.

The ships met almost bow to bow, in mid-channel about one mile west of the Golden Gate Bridge while the Coolidge was heading for Honolulu and the Orient and the tanker was carrying a cargo of petroleum here from Ventura, Cal.

"We had only an instant," said Chief Engineer Peter Peltret of the tanker as he walked ashore from the Coolidge. "We heard the fog horns, of course, but did not know we were going to be struck until a split second before the Coolidge hit.

"She struck right up at the forecastle head and our ship began to settle in 30 seconds. We lowered two boats and all took off. It took only a few minutes. Nobody was hurt."

Peltret said Tanker Capt. Robert Kelly and seven crew members returned to the smaller vessel on perceiving it was not going to sink at once. Both Peltret and John Novak, a tanker seaman, said the Frank H. Buck was not moving when struck.

Liner's Port Bow Stove In.

The port bow of the liner was stove in for a length of about 25 feet and from the water line half way to its rail. Its stem was bent far to starboard from the water line to a point about 15 feet up. The starboard bow bulged out from the effects of the impact.

Coolidge passengers included former Mayor George Puchta of Cincinnati, bound for Manila; American Consul-General and Mrs. J. K. Caldwell of Tientsin, China; American Consul and Mrs. W. A. Adams of Harbin, Manchukuo, and Miss Anne Southworth of Springfield, Mass.

The collision scene is known as a danger area for ships because the channel is relatively narrow, capricious and well studded with formidable rocks.

Less than a mile away lie the wrecks of the freighters Lyman K. Stewart, The Coos Bay and The Ohioan, all ground to pieces on these rocks within the last 12 years.

POLICE RADIO ON HIGH BUILDING

Two-Way Set Installed at Telephone Company.

A radio aerial and receiving equipment has been installed by the Police Department on the top floor of the Telephone Building, Tenth and Pine streets to facilitate reception of messages from scout cars using two-way radio sets.

It has been difficult to pick up messages from the cars, three of which are now in use. If the new installation proves adequate, it is planned to make about five more installations in high buildings at various points in the city.

Spanish Rebels Shell Refugee Boat; Two Women, Four Children Killed

Steamer Carrying Bilbao Residents Back to Their Homes Captured by Insurgent Cruiser.

By the Associated Press.

BAYONNE, France, March 6.—Two women and four children were killed when the Spanish rebel cruiser Canarias shelled and captured the steamer Galdames, advices reaching Bayonne said today.

The Galdames, carrying 180 passengers, was struck twice by eight-inch shells before the Canarias, fighting off a fleet of Government fishing boats, made the capture, the reports said. The 3337-ton Galdames is owned by a Spanish company.

Authoritative reports said the vessel was taken in tow to Pasajes, on the northern Spanish coast. While the passengers were being taken off at that insurgent-held port, the reports stated, a policeman tried to attack three Government counsellors from Irun who were in the group, but was held back.

The passengers—45 children, 65 women and 70 men—were refugees returning to their homes in Bilbao, from Bayonne. The adults were taken to a jail at Pasajes, pending investigation, the accounts related.

The fishing boats, vessels of about 80 tons each and armed with three-inch cannon, put up a dogged four-hour battle to save the passenger ship, but were driven off. There was one unconfirmed report that the Canarias was hit by a shell.

FASCIST RISING REPORTED AVERTED IN HUNGARY

Unofficial Statements Are That 50 Army Officers Have Been Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, March 6.—It was reported tonight that 50 army officers had been arrested in a Government campaign to suppress a Fascist movement in Hungary.

Reports that large amounts of money were sent from abroad presumably from Germany to finance a possible putsch are under investigation.

The reports, not officially verified, indicated high police officials faced dismissal for failure to stamp out Right Wing radicals.

Prime Minister Kalman Daranyi expressed confidence that the danger of a putsch had been averted.

Numerous former supporters of the late Premier Julius Goemboes were thought to be under observation.

Newspapers today reported the Government had thwarted a putsch of undisclosed nature. Daranyi, meanwhile, received a complaint from the independent Agrarian party leader, Dr. Tibor Eckhardt, that "foreign propaganda" was increasing. This was not explained.

NEW YORK BAR IS VOTING 10 TO 1 AGAINST COURT PLAN

In President's Home State Total So Far Is 2363 Opposed, 283 For.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—By a vote of almost 10 to one, the bar association of President Roosevelt's home State recorded opposition today in early returns to his Supreme Court reorganization plan.

The first report on a state-wide poll, conducted by the New York State Bar Association's executive committee, showed 2363 members against and 283 favoring the President's proposal to appoint an additional Supreme Court justice for each one who has not retired at the age of 70.

Two weeks ago, the executive committee voted 32 to 2 against the plan and decided to poll the organization's membership.

The present vote, the committee explained, "relates only to that part of the proposed legislation which affects the Supreme Court of the United States."

The committee mailed 4845 ballots last week to the association's membership.

Radio Debate on Court Plan.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7.—A debate on the Supreme Court is to be broadcast by WABC-CBS at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Ferdinand Pecora, Supreme Court Justice, will favor the President's proposals and Raymond Moley will oppose.

FATAL AIR CRASH LAID TO FREAKISH ACCIDENT

United Line Says Displaced Microphone Jammed Controls, Causing Death of 11.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6.—Controls jammed by a freakish accident caused a United airliner to plunge into San Francisco Bay Feb. 9, with a loss of 11 lives, officials of the line announced today.

A company statement said investigators had determined Co-Pilot Joseph de Cesaro's radio microphone apparently fell into the right "control column," locking the elevator controls and making it impossible for Pilot A. R. Thompson to bring the big ship out of a gradual descent.

In a statement released through S. A. Stimpson, district traffic manager, United officials revealed the evidence which prompted the investigating committee to make a unanimous report as to the cause of the accident.

"Reconstruction of the accident," the statement said, "shows that the co-pilot's microphone dropped into the space between the right seat rail supporting casting and the right control column in such a manner as to lock the elevator controls with the control column slightly forward of the neutral position.

"The casing of First Officer Joseph Decesaro's microphone was broken and the angle ring forming the frame of the microphone case had been squeezed by heavy pressure.

"This investigation, which recruited experts of the air line, airplane and engine manufacturers and a committee of transport pilots, definitely established there was no structural or mechanical failure prior to the accident.

"The accident was due to a unique situation which could not have been anticipated, but for which a preventive has since been invented."

Company officials explained the wedging of the microphone into the control column would have been similar to the blocking of the control stick in planes which have that type of handling gear. They said the evidence indicated De Cesaro was attempting to pull the microphone out of the column when the plane struck.

The last of the 11 bodies in the crash was taken from the bay yesterday.

HEAVY REBEL NIGHT ATTACK NEAR MADRID IS REPULSED

Gen. Miaja Gives Banquet for Officers Celebrating End of Fourth Month of Siege While the Big Guns Roar.

PART OF FORTIFIED HOSPITAL SMASHED

Defenders Now Surround Wrecked Building on Three Sides; 40 Reported Killed in Insurgent Air Raids After Dark.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 6.—The El Pardo sector, northwest of Madrid, was the scene of heavy fighting tonight, with the insurgents making their third attack in 24 hours in the Madrid area. Government guns bombarded insurgent positions, and enemy guns replied with counter-battery fire. An insurgent air raid in the El Pardo area added to the din.

Earlier today Government forces, by a suddent thrust, dislodged the enemy from a series of trenches on the western side of El Pardo town. Tonight the insurgents counter-attacked twice in force, but were repulsed.

While the furious artillery exchange roared on the northwestern outskirts, General José Miaja, commanding all Government forces in central Spain, gave a banquet for his officers to celebrate the end of the fourth month of the siege of Madrid. It was Nov. 6 that the onsweep of Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgent armies reached the outskirts of the city.

Gen. Miaja proposed a toast to an ultimate Government victory and urged all elements to co-operate with the Socialist regime "so that within another four months we may have driven the rebels from the outskirts of the captial."

Hospital Pounded Again.

Another big section of Clinic Hospital, where insurgents are fortified in University City, collapsed today under the pounding of Government artillery.

The insurgents appear to be losing their foothold in the huge building, where for months they have held a commanding position over the suburban area at the doors of Madrid.

A portion of the building for a length of 40 yards and a depth of three to four yards crashed in today's fighting, crushing an unknown number of the garrison, which is estimated to number 600 men.

A portion of the central section of the building collapsed three days ago, also trapping some of the garrison and exposing part of a basement redoubt.

The hospital, uncompleted when the siege began, was to have housed 2000 beds. It is seven stories high, constructed of steel and concrete. The framework resisted artillery pounding for many weeks, but the walls soon were shot to pieces. Insurgents once had 1600 men in the building, with machine guns mounted on upper floors.

Mines Cause Collapse.

A month ago Government militia set off two mines under the building, causing the collapse of one extremity of the structure. Infantry troops then swept forward and fortified themselves in the ruins, where they have maintained positions. A third Government mine exploded accidentally Wednesday night, bringing down the central part of the building.

Insurgents attempted to drive the Madrid defenders from the ruined end of the building with machine-gun fire but Loyalist artillery destroyed means of access to upper stories and forced them to retire to the basements.

Madrid troops now surround the building on three sides, leaving the insurgents only a narrow lane of communication with their nearest redoubts in the medical and agricultural school building of the university. The insurgents now often relieve the garrison under cover of night.

Dispatches from Santander, Spain, said Government authorities had announced that 900 insurgents were killed and wounded in a clash near Robledo de Chavela, northwest of Madrid.

Insurgent Air Raids.

Insurgent air raiders left a semicircle of havoc tonight in the wake of a bombing tour around Madrid.

DEMOCRATS OPEN RADIO ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT PLAN

Senator Burke, Nebraska, Declares President Seeks to Overpower the Supreme Bench.

ASSERTS PEOPLE'S RIGHT TO DECIDE

Copeland, in Statement, Replies to Executive—Congressman Flanagan, Virginia, Defends Plan.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Democratic opponents of President Roosevelt's court bill opened tonight a series of radio addresses to be continued during the week in reply to the Chief Executive's appeals for the nation's support in reshaping the Supreme Court. Senator Burke (Dem.), Nebraska, spoke tonight on the radio attacking the President's plan.

Senator Burke in his speech, declared: "No greater disservice was ever done to the cause of democracy than may well result from the diligent and surpassingly cunning and deceptive program to discredit the Supreme Court in the minds of the public."

He described the opposition campaign as a move to save democracy.

Sowing the Wind.

Quoting the scriptural warning: "For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind," Burke said the President and Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, had "sown the wind."

Increasing numbers of people, he said, were declaring: "We can't have everything we want, and as quickly as we want it, because the courts stand in the way. The President says so. Hopkins says the same. Then why wait? Away with the courts. Out with the judges. We will leave it all to the President."

The President's proposal, Burke said, "seems on its face to have for its purpose to overpower, awe, or influence the Supreme Court." If it should be approved, he said, judges in the future would serve "with the sword of Damocles in plain sight."

"Are the people willing to surrender, in exchange for some supposed and plausibly presented immediate advantages, that independent judiciary which every great student of our democracy has characterized as its crowning glory and strong fortress?

Rights of the People.

"I am certain that the people themselves want the right to decide whether, and to what extent, additional powers shall be granted to any of these departments of Government. Until the people have decided that question, I know that they want presidents and congresses, executives and law-makers of every class, to do their best with the powers they hold.

"That is all there is to this dispute about the courts. Shall the judiciary continue to do its part by upholding the will of the people as expressed in the Constitution, against encroachment from whatever quarter, no matter how powerful? If so, and surely it is so, the people must demand that the President be refused the right to name six additional justices of the Supreme Court merely because he is dissatisfied with decisions rendered and anticipated.

"We would still have a court, but what a travesty to continue to call it a Supreme Court. Every judge upon such a court would clearly realize that no longer could he be concerned solely with the exercise of judicial power. He would know that unless he gave heed to something other than the law of the case he might find tomorrow a new judge at his side appointed for the express purpose of rendering a certain kind of decision."

Copeland Replies to Roosevelt.

Earlier in the day, Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, chairman of the Commerce Committee, replied in a statement to the President's suggestion that the Supreme Court had cast doubt on the constitutionality of flood control legislation.

Paraphrasing the President's words, Copeland said: "When sweating men, piling sandbags on the levee at Cairo find time to study this question" they will find that failure to provide for flood control was "not the fault of the Supreme Court" but of "the President's own agent, the Director of the Budget."

Defends President's Plan.

Representative Flanagan (Dem.), Virginia, in a speech urging support of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal, said: "You cannot destroy the national conscience by judicial fiat. This was attempted by a divided court in the Dred Scott case. You know the result. The people overruled a Supreme Court decision by force of arms.

"With this experience of the past, like a red light flashing its warning, shall we again permit four or five judges, who are out of joint with our social and economic growth, to again embroil us in trouble?"

Supreme Court "Property Minded," Congressman Martin Says.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Representative John A. Martin (Dem.) Colorado, in a radio address tonight said the Supreme Court had blocked for a quarter of a century legislation designed to correct industrial abuses. Martin is chairman of a committee to steer the Roosevelt proposal through the House.

"The State of New York passed a law, to protect the health of men in the bake shops of New York, and in 1910 the Supreme Court . . . by a 5 to 4 decision held it invalid as denying freedom of contract," Martin said. "The State of New York passed a law to protect women from sweat shop wages and abuses, and in 1935 the Supreme Court . . . by a 5 to 4 decision held it invalid as denying freedom of contract.

"The Supreme Court has been characterized as property-minded. I think the charge is true, but that state of the judicial mind is bottomed on a much larger concept. The people themselves have been property-minded. This has been a property-minded country, and government and laws and the administration and interpretation of laws, have followed the bent of the national mind."

Contemporaneously with this system, he said, there had grown a perception that "the nation cannot endure . . . under an uncontrolled economic system which places them at the mercy of vast aggregations of wealth monopolizing every avenue of enterprise, and operated exclusively for private profit, and attended with poverty on a scale making necessary almost capital levies on the profits of the system to sustain the millions which the system does not feed."

Martin cited recent court decisions against the railroad retirement act, the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and the National Industrial Recovery Act as examples of Court action tying the hands of Congress in legislating against industrial abuses.

ROOSEVELT COURT SCHEME ISSUE IN TEXAS ELECTION

One Candidate for Congress for Plan, Another Opposed to It.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., March 6.—The Roosevelt court scheme will be an issue in the Tenth Congressional District in a special election called by Gov. James V. Allred for April 10 to choose a successor to the late Representative J. P. Buchanan.

Polk Shelton, former Travis County District Attorney, announced he would seek the office on a platform opposing the court plan. He said he had no criticism for President Roosevelt's previous acts but could not agree that "momentary chagrin and disappointment over a few Supreme Court decisions" was a basis on which to "smite down the independence of our last bulwark of democracy."

Lyndon B. Johnson, who resigned as State Director for the National Youth Administration to run for the Congress seat, stood squarely behind the Roosevelt proposal. Others among the eight candidates had not declared themselves definitely.

By the Associated Press.

DONALSONVILLE, Ga., March 6.—Seminole County today made plans to become the first in the nation to ballot on President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan. At the request of the Democratic Executive Committee of the county, Ordinary Gordon B. Garwood has called a referendum vote for March 19 on the proposal.

FIRESTONE SHUT DOWN AFTER UNION DEMAND

'Sole Bargaining Agency' Request Causes Suspension 'Until Further Notice.'

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., March 6.—The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. closed its plants "until further notice" today after United Rubber Workers voted not to work until the company recognizes the union as sole collective bargaining agent for its 10,000 production workers.

The rubber workers, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, adopted their demand in a resolution that included also abolition of the employes' conference plan, termed a "company union," and a demand for agreement by the company "to incorporate a settlement in a signed statement between the company and Local 7."

Firestone closed its No. 1 plant Wednesday, a company statement said, "due to the attempt of some employes to force other employes to join their organization." The following day workers in plant No. 2 and the company's steel products plant walked out in sympathy.

"In view of the uncertainty under present conditions, the company will not resume operations in any of its plants until further notice," a statement said.

"There will be another meeting with the committte representing the union tomorrow. Employes whose pay is due will be paid on their regular pay day at the employment office."

SMALL EUROPEAN NATIONS UNITE ON TRADE PROGRAM

8 Signers of Oslo Pact Agree to Co-operate; Details Not Disclosed.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands, March 6.—A program to promote international trade, it was announced today, has been adopted by a conference of economic experts representing the eight signatory nations of the Oslo convention.

Details of the program, which were not disclosed, will be submitted to the eight states—Norway, Sweden, Finland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Denmark and The Netherlands.

The effort to form the small nation bloc in international trade was launched by Prime Minister Hendrikus Colijn of The Netherlands. The Oslo convention, signed in 1930, bound its adherents to seek low trade barriers, abolish exchange restrictions, and revive international credit.

ficers most of today on workers' demands.

The Lebanon plant, which employs about 2500 men and manufactures nuts, bolts, rivets and other small steel articles, was closed indefinitely. The Steelton mill, with about twice as many workers, makes rails, bridge steel and other heavy products.

A majority of the Steelton workers are claimed by CIO as members of its organization, but Miles Sweeney, organizer, said there would be no strike at Steelton unless the workers themselves called it.

Bethlehem officers closed the Lebanon plant Thursday after a disagreement with employe representatives over wages and hours. Sweeney said the workers who quit demanded an agreement similar to that signed with the Carnegie-Illinois. A $5-a-day minimum for laborers and a 40-hour week were prominent points of the Carnegie-Illinois contract.

A wage increase, that increased laborers' pay 10 cents an hour and skilled workers 7½ cents an hour, was announced last wek by Bethlehem Steel but it is not to be effective until March 16.

CIO organizers called a mass meeting for tomorrow afternoon to rally the workers for picketing at the mill entrances Monday. General manager J. T. Edmonds said, however, the plant was closed for an indefinite time.

In addition to the main Bethlehem plant at Lebanon, the ore-concentrating plant on the outskirts of the city and the ore mines at Cornwall, six miles south of the city, have been closed by the strike. The CIO said it was lending its moral support to the strikers and that they would not receive relief payments from the union because a permanent organization had not yet been chartered.

Edmonds made this statement tonight:

"A committee of employe representatives and group of about 40 additional men from all divisions of the Lebanon plant met with me this morning to resume negotiations which have been going on for several days on the application of a new wage schedule to go into effect March 16.

"A satisfactory meeting was held, wherein it was agreed that all rates will receive the same increase. This treats all employes alike and cleans up the questions which have been under discussion with employe representatives for several days."

ALIMONY 'STRIKER' IN HOSPITAL

Rochester (N. Y.) Woman Seized With Attack of Hysteria.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 6.—Mrs. Mildred E. CUT IN WPA ROLLS SAID TO HAVE BEEN PUT OFF A MONTH

Gov. Benson, Minnesota, Makes Announcement After 6 State Executives Confer With President.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—A reduction in WPA rolls in March, which Administrator Harry Hopkins had said might total 150,000 men, was apparently averted by a conference today between President Roosevelt and the Governors of six states.

Gov. Elmer A. Benson of Minnesota, one of the six who talked for three and a half hours with the President this afternoon, said the effect of the discussions would be a month's postponement of contemplated reductions.

Whether the cut should be made in April will be studied in the interim.

Hopkins' Statements.

Hopkins told a House committee in January that continued recovery and a good agricultural year would permit reducing WPA rolls by 150,000 in March. He said at a recent press conference, however, that no arbitrary cuts would be made.

The Governors of New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota presented to the President a protest against any curtailment of WPA work, contending the states, counties and cities already were overburdened with direct relief costs. They told the President they could not stand the added cost of providing for employables dropped by WPA.

President Roosevelt's stand was not indicated.

Hopkins and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau attended the conference. Afterward the Governors had a brief talk with Morgenthau.

The WPA now is spending about $140,000,000 a month. Hopkins has estimated an average of $65 is needed each month for each worker. On Feb. 20 there were 2,162,000 on the rolls.

To Meet President March 25.

Gov. Lehman, in whose New York City apartment the Governors formulated their protest last Sunday night, told newspaper men the group would see the President again when he returns from Warm Springs, Ga. He will leave Thursday night and will get back to Washington about March 25.

"We have had a long conference with the President," he said, "and discussed with him the matters contained in our telegram which we sent to him last Sunday, to the effect that:

"1—Workers now on PWA actually in need be cut off only when they can be absorbed in private industry.

"2—That these workers be replaced with other needy employables taken from home relief rolls."

Lehman said the President promised to give the protest his very careful consideration.

Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois said: "We are opposed to any cut. We can't stand it." He gained the impression, he said, that "the President has a very great sympathetic concern about the entire matter."

Some of the Governors said they buttressed their arguments to the President with quotations from recent statements by Mr. Roosevelt and Hopkins.

Gov. Horner quoted excerpts from a recent talk by Hopkins in attempting to show the President that a curtailed WPA program would provoke a crisis in many states.

Gov. Benson called the President's attention to his Supreme Court speech Thursday night, quoting the following passages: "We will provide useful work for the needy unemployed. And for all these things we have only just begun to fight. Here is one-third of a nation ill-nourished, ill-clad, ill-housed. Here are thousands and thousands of farmers wondering whether next year's prices will meet their mortgage interest now."

The President intends to take with him on his trip, the results of a preliminary study made to assist in formulating estimates for the next fiscal year's relief appropriation. He has indicated this appropriation would have to be kept within $1,500,000,000 if the budget is to be balanced by June 30, 1938, excepting statutory debt reduction.

Hopkins told a House committee that the reduction of WPA rolls might cut off 600,000 between February and June, leaving the following totals on the rolls for each month affected: February, 2,200,000; March, 2,150,000; April 2,000,000; May 1,800,000, and June 1,600,000.

GERMANS HIT BACK AT U. S.; LIKEN HITLER TO WASHINGTON

Paper, Citing La Guardia, Says No One in Reich Would Insult a Great American.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 6.—Dissatisfied with United States regrets for the La Guardia incident, Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff, returned to the attack today and compared Adolph Hitler to George Washington.

"Official apologies lose in value when the reprimanded party is allowed to go on barking as he pleases," said Der Angriff.

Asserting Hitler was to Germany what Washington was to America, the newspaper contended no German speaker would "be so lacking in good taste" as to "insult" a great American.

Courtesy in such matters, Der Angriff added, has been inherent in Germans for 2000 years, "which may seem strange to people who put their feet on the table, keep their hats on indoors and spit chewing gum past people's faces."

This week Mayor La Guardia of New York brought forth an official German protest when he suggested, before a meeting of Jewish women, that New York's 1939 world fair have a "hall of horrors" with "that brown-shirted fanatic" in it. Yesterday the United States State Department expressed formal apologies, while pointing out it had no control over the Mayor's freedom of expression.

OPPOSITION GOING TO WORK AGAINST COURT PROPOSAL

torney-General in a debate with Chairman James L. Landis of the Securities and Exchange Commission in Chicago.

On Friday night the controversy will be "taken to the country," when Senators George of Georgia, representing the South; Copeland of New York, representing the East; Walsh, of Massachusetts, representing New England, and Burke of Nebraska, representing the Middle West, will appear at Carnegie Hall, New York, in united Democratic opposition to the plan.

Walsh has been classified as noncommittal on the plan, but privately leaning toward opposition. His appearance Friday night will be his first public utterance on the plan. He and George were members of the Resolutions Committee at the Philadelphia convention and approved the "clarifying amendment" proposal in 1936 Democratic platform.

On Monday, March 15, the opposition will have their inning before the Senate Judiciary Committee. One outstanding Democrat has agreed to appear before the committee on this day. The opposition Senators, however, decline to disclose the identity of his witness. Burke has announced he will demand that the committee invite Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard, one of the President's legal advisers, to testify. There is no assurance, of course, that Prof. Frankfurter would accept the invitation if offered. He has declined to make any public comment on the President's recommendations.

Although the opponents of the measure feel that they have enough votes already pledged to block the plan by a Senate filibuster, sentiment is divided as to the efficacy of that plan. The argument among the Democrats against the filibuster is that the President has announced that he has just begun to fight. If his plan is blocked at this session, the issue would be carried over to the 1938 elections, with possible Democratic losses in close districts. From a purely political standpoint, the officeholders would prefer to have the question put out of the way this session so that it might be glossed over in 1938.

REBEL NIGHT ATTACK NEAR MADRID BEATEN OFF BY DEFENDERS

Unofficial reports placed at 40 the dead in the raid last night, with 120 wounded.

Twenty were reported killed in Aranjuez, some 30 miles south of Madrid, and six at Tarancon, southeast of the city. The raiders struck also at Vilanueva del Pardillo, west of Madrid, and Alcala de Henares, to the east.

Military authorities ordered immediate distribution of all available gas masks among the troops in and near Madrid at points where insurgent concentrations were thought to preface a new violent offensive.

Two insurgent planes, operating off Spain's east coast, dropped bombs near the steamer Le Gazpi, just off Rosas, Tarragona Province. The crew swam ashore but the craft was not hit. She drifted ashore.

The Government, meanwhile, asserted its own planes had made 67 air raids in February, losing only nine planes. The insurgents, the announcement said, lost 32 planes in 65 raids.

A usually reliable source at Gibraltar reported Italian volunteers had arrived recently at Cadiz, Spain. Italy agreed, with other nations, to ban volunteers after Feb. 20.

William Travis, part-owner of the Travis Coal Co., was found dead yesterday, apparently of natural causes, in his mine on Highway 13, four miles west of Belleville. He had been inspecting pumps about 100 feet from the shaft when he collapsed.

JOHN E. MARTINEAU, FEDERAL JUDGE, DIES

Former Governor of Arkansas Succumbs to Influenza at Little Rock.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 6.—United States District Judge John E. Martineau, former Governor of Arkansas, died here today of influenza, complicated by a heart ailment, which he had suffered since January. He was 63 years old.

The last celebrated case Judge Martineau heard was that of Paul D. Peacher, Earl (Ark.) City Marshal, who was convicted at Jonesboro in December of violating the Federal anti-slavery statutes in the false arrest of Negroes who were sentenced later to work on Peacher's land.

Judge Martineau served as Federal Judge for nine years and was Governor for 15 months before his appointment by President Coolidge.

In 1926 Judge Martineau, a Democrat, made the race for Governor and by his victory became the first man ever to defeat an incumbent for a second term.

The principal achievement of his activity in State politics was his successful sponsorship of the road law under which the $100,000,000 highway improvement program was carried out. The Martineau road law wiped out road district boundaries, and extended the powers of the State Highway Commission to give it complete charge of construction of a State highway system.

His appointment to the Federal judgeship by a Republican President was the climax of a long fight which had split the Republican ranks over recommendation by the State organization of a successor to the late Federal Judge Jacob Trieber. It was as much a surprise to the Republicans as to the Democrats.

Judge Martineau was born in Clay County, Missouri. He came with his parents, when two years old, to Lonoke County, Arkansas.

MOVE TO PAY ONLY HALF OF BACK OLD AGE PENSIONS DUE

No Enforceable Legal Obligation of Legislature to Comply With Provision of Present Law.

BILL HOUSE PASSED RAISES NEW ISSUE

Time of Eligibility, Application and Approval Involved; Compromise a Possibility.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 6.—Representative V. E. Phillips of Kansas City, in charge of the Administration's Social Security program in the House, has indicated that there is a movement under way to pay only half of the back pensions now due persons on the old age pension rolls.

The present pension law states such payments shall be paid in full, although there is no enforceable legal obligation of the Legislature to comply with that provision, and the amount of back pension to be paid will be determined wholly by the amount of money appropriated for that purpose by the Assembly.

At present there are about 58,000 persons receiving pensions, but only 16,000 of them have been given retroactive benefits in full. The claim for these payments arose under the present statute, which provides assistance be paid on the first day of the month following the date of application. Because of early administrative difficulties, several months assistance became due before the first pensions could be paid and in most instances these accumulated pensions were never paid.

Bill for $10,000,000.

In addition, there are about 26,000 persons who have made application for the pensions, but have not been approved by the State Old Age Assistance Board. It has been estimated by the board an appropriation of about $8,500,000 would be required to pay all claims for back pensions, including the claims of those now on the rolls and those with pending applications. A bill is pending in the House calling for the appropriation of $10,000,000 for this purpose.

Some legislators, however, are opposed to any payment of back pensions on the ground it would be contrary to the purpose of old age assistance legislation. It is their opinion the benefits are given to meet the current needs of aged persons, and the payment of any lump sums would be a mistake. If $10,000,000 is available for such payments, they argue, the funds should be used in providing larger pensions to meet the regular current needs of the aged.

Because of this opposition, it is possible that a compromise may be reached for the payment of only a certain percentage of the total amount due. It is difficult at this time to ascertain the strength of this movement; for legislators who personally oppose the payment of back pensions probably will make no active fight against full payment for political reasons.

Pending Applications.

Added to the problem is the question whether, under the bill recently passed by the House revising the present old-age assistance law, the 26,000 persons with pending applications would be entitled to claim the back pensions.

That measure provides that payment of pensions will begin on the date the application is approved rather than the date of application. It is the opinion of some legislators that, because these persons made application under the present law, the present rule would apply and they would be eligible for the back payments. Others contend the applications of these persons will be approved under the proposed law, which is certain to pass, and therefore the new regulations would rule and retroactive payments would be denied them.

VOLUNTEER SOCIAL WORKERS WANTED FOR PART-TIME WORK

Fifteen With Automobiles Sought; Other Types of Assistants Needed.

The need for volunteer social workers who would give a few hours of their time each week is still greater than can be supplied. Mrs. D. K. Rose, chairman of the department of volunteer service of the Community Council, said yesterday.

Sixty-six volunteers were placed in various social agencies last month. Thirty-five of them were used to make emergency automobile trips to hospitals and other institutions. Five were placed as part-time case workers, three in health service, two for recreation work, five as clerks and 12 in miscellaneous service.

Fifteen volunteers are being sought to give one-half day a week driving social workers on their rounds. Among other types of positions open to volunteers are dramatics teachers, tap-dancing instructors, guitar teachers and Negroes to aid in finding suitable foster homes for dependent children.

BEVERLY ANN PAGE,

BOY, 5, DROWNED GIRL HE SAYS, PAL HELPED

Child on Sheriff's Knee Tells Story; Older Lad Denies Charge.

By the Associated Press.

WINDSOR, Vt., March 6.—State's Attorney Albion Parker tonight announced a 5-year-old boy, sitting on the knee of a Sheriff, told police how Beverly Ann Page died after a riverbank tussle with himself and another boy "just a few years older."

The youngster informed investigators that while the 4-year-old girl lay in the shallow water of the mill stream where her body was found yesterday, he "held her down by the hair for a short time" while the other boy "stepped on her stomach."

The State's Attorney said the older boy had denied the other youngster's charges after being questioned for an hour.

"I can't believe," the prosecutor added, "that a child of that age could imagine such a story. On the other hand, I do not like to see any person incriminated on a 5-year-old child's story.

Parker did not identify either of the two boys, nor would he divulge the exact age of the older boy. Both boys, he reported, were allowed to go home after questioning.

Murder by Drowning.

Sheriff Ernest Schoenfeld announced earlier after autopsy that Beverly Ann's death was a case of "murder by drowning."

The younger boy, the State's Attorney said, declared that his companion hit Beverly with "a piece of brick, knocked her out," and rolled her into the stream.

Parker quoted the boy as saying: "Me and Beverly Ann were playing near the river when the other boy came along. He pushed her down and pulled off her overshoes. She cried some. He hit her with a piece of brick. He knocked her out. He rolled her in the river. Then—threw one of her overshoes out into deep water about 50 feet away and I threw the other one in beside her.

"Then—stepped on her stomach while she lay in the water and I held her down by the hair a short time.

"The—boy ran away and I picked up an iron hoop and tried to pull her out by putting that around her neck. I couldn't move her because she was too heavy."

Discovery of Body.

When Beverly Ann's body was found by searchers yesterday, five hours after she disappeared from the home of her aunt, her jaw bone was broken and an iron hoop was around her chest.

OZANAM SHELTER RESIDENT, 79, ENDS LIFE AT BRIDGE

Police Think Moses Moyer Shot Self Before Fall Under Municipal Span.

Moses Moyer, 79 years old, a resident of Ozanam Shelter, 3225 Montgomery street, was found dead yesterday on Second street at Chouteau avenue, under the Municipal Bridge. His head was crushed and he had apparently fallen from the bridge.

Beside the body, police found a .32 caliber revolver containing one discharged shell. They expressed the opinion Moyer had first climbed the bridge railing, fired a shot into his head and then tumbled to the street below. The condition of the body, however, made it impossible to determine immediately whether there was a gunshot wound in the head.

On the bridge deck, police found a note stating the writer was "sick and tired of living." He was identified by an emloye of the shelter, who said Moyer had lived there for two years. He had no permanent home.

WOMAN, 65, DIVORCES 26-YEAR-OLD MECHANIC

Pair Married Two Years Ago After Romance That Began When He Repaired Auto.

Mrs. Margrait Anderson Kampman, 65 years old, obtained a divorce at Belleville yesterday from Edward Kampman, 26, a mechanic, whom she married two years ago after a romance that began when he repaired her automobile. She charged adultery.

Judge Maurice V. Joyce granted restoration of her maiden name and allowed her title to real estate held by her before the marriage. They were separated Jan. 28, 1936.

When they were married, she told reporters Kampman won her over by a six months' period of persistent courtship. He had been polite to her when he first repaired her car and she had returned every time it needed to be fixed, she said. After a 12-day trip to the West, she agreed to the marriage. She was the widow of Guy Anderson, trucking company employe.

MAN SHOT ACCIDENTALLY IN CLEANING ATTIC DIES

Robert Robyn of Maplewood Thought to Have Been Wounded When Moving Shotgun.

Robert Robyn, 26 years old, 3116 Barthold avenue, Maplewood, died last night at County Hospital of a gunshot wound in the abdomen, apparently inflicted accidentally yesterday afternoon.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Robyn, said he was cleaning the attic of his home at 1 p. m. They said they thought he was moving the shotgun when its trigger caught on something, causing it to fire.

"Miss Great Britain" of 1936 Denies Story of Man Shouting, "Marry Me or I'll Jump."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 6.—Scotland Yard is seeking to solve the mystery of the disappearance at sea of Frank Vosper, 37-year-old British actor and playwright, during a champagne party on the liner Paris in the cabin of an English beauty queen early today.

The Paris was two hours out of Plymouth at 3 a. m. today, when Vosper stepped onto a darkened veranda off the cabin of his hostess, 23-year-old Muriel Oxford, the Miss Great Britain of 1936. He has not been seen since.

Miss Oxford rejected tonight the suggestion he might have jumped overboard because she spurned his love.

"We were only friends," she said, and denied vigorously the statement of another passenger, quoted by ship officers, that he heard a man shout, "Marry me, or I'll jump overboard!"

Peter Wiles, an English friend, was certain the actor was dead but that he had been drowned accidentally; that he might have slipped while trying to climb down to the veranda on the deck below and thence make his way to his own cabin.

Got Him Out of Bed.

Vosper, Wiles related, had gone to bed before the party started. A group of friends "went around and dragged Frank out of bed and made him come to the party.

"Later he told me: 'I am bored and want to go back to bed.' I am convinced it was pure accident," said Wiles.

Wiles said those at the party included "the Marquis de Polignac, Ernest Hemingway, the novelist, and an American matador."

(Hemingway and Sidney Franklin, Brooklyn-born bullfighter, sailed from New York Feb. 27, on the Paris. Marquis de Polignac is a Paris sportsman.)

Scotland Yard began its investigation when the ship reached Plymouth and Miss Oxford made a statement to the detectives. The French line was believed pursuing a separate inquiry.

Miss Oxford, who was returning from New York where she had appeared with a group of chorus girls, related her story of the party when the boat train from Plymouth reached here.

"Everybody was celebrating the final night on shipboard," she said. "About 2 or 3 a. m. I threw a small party for some of my friends in my cabin. Vosper was one of the party.

"Talked for Some Time."

"Several people were there all the time. We were drinking champagne and everybody was happy. I talked for some time with Mr. Vosper on the veranda outside my cabin. Then I returned to the cabin and joined the others.

"After a time, I missed Vosper. He was not on the veranda. We could not find him in his cabin. Then I told the steward that Mr. Vosper was apparently missing. It is impossible to say what happened."

Vosper was returning from Hollywood, where he was said to have done film work. Generally regarded as one of England's "brilliant young men" of the theater, he was well received for his interpretation of Henry VIII in "The Rose Without a Thorn." He produced his own play, "Spellbound," in New York in 1927.

PUBLIC SERVICE CO. EMPLOYE IS KILLED BY STREET CAR

Carter B. Huff Ran in Front of Trolley, Operator Says; District Poorly Lighted.

Carter B. Huff, 65 years old, 2167 Grove avenue, electrical worker employed by the Public Service Co., was killed at 8:30 o'clock last night when struck by an east-bound Manchester street car at Manchester and Mitchell avenues. He suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

The car operator, James F. Allen, 7564 Ellis avenue, Maplewood, told police Huff was running across the street and was in the north track when he first saw him. Two witnesses in an automobile corroborated the statement that Huff was running, police reported.

At the point where the accident occurred, both street car tracks are on the south side of Manchester. The street is poorly lighted and many accidents involving street cars and automobiles, several of them fatal, have taken place there.

Union dues receipts in Huff's pockets led to his identification. He had been an employe of the Public Service Co. 33 years. His wife and a son, Bernard, survive.

BOY, 11, SHOOTS SELF TRYING TO PROVE PISTOL IS "EMPTY"

Albert Baltrum Seriously Wounded in Chest at Home in East St. Louis.

Albert Baltrum, 11-year-old son of Mrs. Demytro Hladyhewski, 945 North Twenty-fifth street, East St. Louis, accidentally shot himself in the left chest yesterday, after pulling the trigger several times and pointing the revolver at his half-brother to prove it was empty. He is in St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

The half-brother, Dan Hladyhewski, said he was washing about 2:30 p. m. when Albert came in the bathroom flourishing the revolver, which belonged to their mother. Dan, who is 16, said he warned Albert to put it away. Instead, Albert pulled the trigger several times say, "See, it won't go off." The older boy said his half-brother then went out in the back yard, still flourishing the revolver.

Dan related he finished washing and went outside, chasing Albert around in the back yard in an attempt to get the revolver away from him. He said the weapon suddenly was discharged and Albert collapsed, shouting, "I'm dying; get me a priest." He was removed to the hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

HARLEY CLARKE'S OBJECTIONS OVERRULED BY COURT

Present Utilities Power Management Continued, But Special Investigator Is Named.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6. — Federal Judge William H. Holly today ordered the present management of the Utilities Power & Light Corporation continued and appointed James L. Houghteling, investment banker, as a special investigator to examine operations of the holding company.

Harley L. Clarke, former president of the company, had filed objections to continuance of the present management. He charged a conspiracy between Floyd B. Odlum, president of the Atlas Corporation of New York, the Chase National Bank of New York and a "subservient board of directors" to "ruin the company."

TWO YOUTHS CAUGHT AFTER STORE HOLDUP

Run Into Saloon on Seeing Police Car; One Admits 9 Other Robberies.

Two 17-year-old boys, arrested last night after they dashed into a saloon at Broadway and Withers avenue on seeing detectives pull up at the curb, admitted, according to police, that they were the pair who had held up and robbed Sam Militana 30 minutes before in his grocery at 2062 De Soto avenue. One boy admitted nine other holdups of North St. Louis establishments since Jan. 30.

The two said they were James Owens, residing in the 3700 block of St. Louis avenue, and Carl Boettcher, with an address in the 4900 block of North Broadway.

Detective Sergeant John Sinclair and Detectives Harold Bohlen and James Ogden, cruising in North St. Louis streets after getting descriptions of the grocery robbers, stopped in front of the saloon as the boys walked out. Recognizing the police car, the two darted back in and Owens crawled behind the bar, attempting at the same time to rid himself of a .38-caliber revolver. The officers arrested the pair and took the revolver, together with a small caliber automatic they found on Boettcher.

Admit Grocery Holdup.

At Central District both readily admitted holding up Militana, from whom they took $7, and agreed that it was Boettcher's frist "job." Owens, who is 5 feet, 2 inches tall and of slight frame, described with apparent satisfaction his other robberies, in which he obtained a total of $525 from a variety of places, including a theater, liquor store, drug stores and meat markets.

His most profitable holdup, he said, was Feb. 23, when he obtained $219 from the Arnold Koehler Market, 1434 Bremen avenue. On Feb. 5, he related, he held up the Salisbury Theater, 2504 Salisbury street, fleeing with $15.

Police records show no previous arrest of either youth. While Owens airily recounted his accomplishments, his principal interest being "where they're going to send me," Boettcher sat with a dazed expression, as if not yet really aware of his predicament.

"Clothes and Women."

Owens said he bought his pistol, of a cheap make, at an East St. Louis pawn shop a month ago, at the same time throwing away a small automatic he had used previously. He said he decided on robberies after being laid off at a boiler works, where he said his father was a foreman.

"The family wondered where I was getting my money and I told them I had a job, but they didn't believe me," he said. Most of the money he stole went for "clothes and women," he explained. His usual custom in holdups was to rent an automobile and park it a block away from the place he intended to rob.

Robbers Tie Hands of Seven in Grocery; Flee With $70.

Three women customers and four employes were ordered to stand with their hands tied behind them in the rear of a Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. store at 3803 Meramec street, yesterday afternoon by two robbers who escaped with $79, of which $10 was taken from one customer.

The robbers entered the store at 3:45 o'clock ordering the manager, Arnold Cobb, two clerks, the butcher and the three women to walk to the rear of the building. The women were Mrs. Bertha Pertle, 4434 South Thirty-eighth street; Mrs. Laura Asbury, 4238 South Thirty-eighth, and Miss Viola McGuire, 2349 Tennessee avenue.

The robbers, one of them armed with a revolver, picked up a roll of cord which they used in binding the hands of the seven persons. They then ordered the employes and customers to face the wall and took $10 from Mrs. Pertle's purse and the remainder from two cash registers.

Mrs. Katie Burton Suffers Skull Injury and Broken Leg.

Mrs. Katie Burton, 55 years old, a widow, 3304 Caroline street, suffered a skull injury and a fractured right leg last night when she was struck by an automobile while attempting to cross Sidney street at Jefferson avenue. She is in City Hospital.

The driver, August Ulrich, 1910A Penn street, told police an electric signal at the intersection was in his favor. He was west-bound in Sidney street. Police reported a taxicab driver, standing on the curb, saw Mrs. Burton step out in the path of the machine and tried to grab her, but failed to reach her in time.

BURGLAR FIRES SHOT AND RUNS

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Woodery Awakened by Apartment Intruder.

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Woodery were awakened last night by a burglar in the living room of their first-floor apartment at 3121 Maury avenue. When Mrs. Woodery screamed the burglar, who was armed with a revolver, fired a shot, which imbedded itself harmlessly in the wall, and fled out the front door, dropping the revolver, a .32-caliber automatic, on the floor.

Police reported that the robber gained entrance to the apartment by using a duplicate key or because the front door was insecurely fastened. Nothing was stolen.

HIS DESIGN DEFENDED BY SCULPTOR MILLES

Published Pictures of Model for Aloe Fountain Misleading, He Says.

The pictures of clay models of figures to be incorporated in the Aloe Plaza fountain, as published recently in a pictorial magazine, are "completely different" from the way they will look in final form, Carl Milles, Swedish sculptor, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday by telephone from his studio at Cranbrook, a suburb of Detroit, Mich.

Publication of the pictures has led to a controversy between members of the Aloe Plaza Commission over the propriety of the design. Francis D. Healy, art dealer, disapproves of the unrelieved nudity of the figures and thinks the design should be more typical of the Middle West. However, Meyric R. Rogers, director of City Art Museum, and Luther Ely Smith, attorney, find no fault with the design.

Milles declared the magazine presentation gave a most unfortunate view of the figures. "I didn't want any pictures published, but the photographer was so insistent that I finally let him take a picture of the group from another room, so that the view would be distant," the sculptor said. "But the photographer used a telescopic lens, making the picture appear to have been taken close up."

Milles said he did not wonder that Healy received an erroneous impression and added he wished the objector would visit the studio and view the work at first hand.

Healy has complained that the sculpture, as it appeared in the magazine, did not conform to the approved plan. Rogers, the only member of the commission who has seen the figures, is for the design "101 per cent," but has been unable to convince Healy. The commission acts only in an advisory capacity, the Municipal Art Commission being charged with final approval.

The fountain, to cost $60,000, will symbolize the union of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers by two heroic figures, with several smaller statues representing tributaries. Sprays of water will alternately reveal and obscure the figures.

AUTOS PARKED ON STREETS MUST HAVE CITY LICENSES

Summonses to Be Issued to Owners by Order of Police Chief McCarthy.

Automobile owners, who fail to obtain city licenses by Thursday, will be ordered to appear in City Court, whether they are driving their machines or leave them parked at the curb, Chief of Police John J. McCarthy announces. Arrests for failure to have State automobile licenses, after expiration of the deadline several weeks ago, were made only if the machines without licenses were in motion. The deadline on State licenses did not apply to parked cars.

Chief McCarthy issued orders yesterday to all members of the department that beginning Thursday summonses should be issued to all owners of cars on the streets without city licenses whether parked or in motion.

REMMERS SAYS MAYOR 'FRONTED' FOR VOTE BOARD

Republican Candidate Alleges Dickmann Asked Pendergast to Keep Park From Acting.

ASSERTS ALLIANCE WAS TO BE REWARD

Speaking Before Women's Group He Assails 'Ominous Silence' at City Hall on Election Frauds.

Declaring that clean elections and honest government were the issue in the municipal campaign, Oliver T. Remmers, candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor, said in a speech yesterday that Mayor Dickmann's silence in the face of recent election frauds was "ominous."

Remmers asserted that, while the press and public were demanding removal of the "discredited" Election Board headed by James A. Waechter, Dickmann was "using his official position to keep the board in office." It was charged, in substance, by Remmers that Dickmann asked Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City unavailingly to prevent Gov. Park from removing the Waechter board.

Mayor Dickmann, reached last night at a testimonial dinner to Sheriff James Fitzsimmons, flatly denied Remmers' assertion he had requested Pendergast to intercede for the board. The Mayor added "that's the sort of a campaign I would expect from Remmers."

Boss Pendergast Speaking.

"Not a word of truth in it," Pendergast said to a Post-Dispatch reporter, discussing Remmers' speech in a telephone conversation from Tucson, Ariz., where the Kansas City boss is taking a vacation.

"Mayor Dickmann never asked me to do a thing in his life of any kind or description," he added. In fact, I never saw him but twice in my life. The first time was at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia last June and the other time was last fall when I was in the hospital in Kansas City. It was during the horse show and Mayor Dickmann just came in the room and shook hands. That was all."

Pendergast observed that he was a friend of Waechter and "liked him" personally but that he had never approached Gov. Park or anyone to retain the election board.

First Important Speech.

Remmers' speech was delivered before an audience of 200 at a luncheon at Hotel Statler of the new Presidents' Council of Republican Women's Clubs. It was the first major address of the mayoral campaign. The primary will be held next Friday, with Dickmann and Remmers unanimously indorsed for nomination by the city committees of their respective parties.

Election frauds, Remmers declared, were as great a crime as treason, because vote thieves and the "higher ups" directing them were "traitors and tyrants."

Tells of Mayor's Visit.

Concerning the members of the Waechter Election Board, Remmers explained that he referred to their official acts, not their personal character. As to the visit which he said Dickmann made to Pendergast at Kansas City, he asserted that the Mayor said to Pendergast, in effect, that his chances of reelection would be spoiled by any further exposures of election frauds. In return for the favor sought, Remmers declared, Dickmann promised political allegiance to Pendergast. However, the speaker noted that Gov. Park removed the board, but that Dickmann still received political advice from Waechter and another member of the same board, Joseph W. Hannauer.

When "Pat" Dunlavy, suspended chief examiner of the city Drivers' License Bureau, was indicted for fraudulent voting in the primary of Aug. 4, Dickmann commented, "The dumb head—and he holding such a good job," Remmers said. Dunlavy was convicted Feb. 4, with punishment fixed at two years' imprisonment.

Mongrel at Mayor's Door.

"What was the present Mayor's state of mind," Remmers continued, "when dozens were indicted by grand juries and a petit jury convicted Dunlavy, a chief lieutenant of the Mayor? Every guilty person should be punished. But in our zeal let us not just seek the little fellow and let the big guys get away.

"The snarling, vicious mongrel identified as election frauds has now been found at the Mayor's office door, and if the Circuit Attorney and a grand jury at last succeed in opening the ballot boxes, the citizens may be able to trace the mongrel's parentage. This much desired information so far has been denied the people through delays and the marvelous and mysterious power provoked from legal technicalities and the aid of a sinister and paid for plaintiff.

"Will the present Mayor shoo the mongrel away from his office door, or must be forever remain silent?

"It, of course, would be a coincidence that subordinate officials, as well as judges and clerks, could, without a directing head, carry on so widespread and so well organized wholesale election frauds. If it is not a coincidence, then the public would like to know the identity of this master-mind who organized and directed these nefarious plots against the lawful rights of the citizens.

Mayor's Peremptory Command.

"Could it be possible that when the present Mayor issued his peremptory command prior to the bond issue election in 1935, that the city employes were to deliver or else be replaced, that some of the workers on the inside of the polls may have misunderstood the purpose and meaning of this command."

Remmers, who in the past has been head of the election and police boards and the Republican City Committee, announced that he sought the votes of Republicans, independents and "civic minded Democrats who believe in clean politics and good government." He said the campaign would be virtually of non-partisan character, as far as the Republican party was concerned, and would deal only with municipal affairs.

It was announced yesterday by Thomas F. Quinn, State chairman of Labor's Non-Parisan League, which supported President Roosevelt for re-election, and a Democratic candidate for the Board of Education, that the New Nonpartisan Union Labor Remmers-for-Mayor Organization was not connected with his group.

Henry P. Schroeder, a member of the Board of Education and Remmers' only opponent for the mayoral nomination, spoke briefly at the luncheon. He said he would like to run the city as it had been run by Henry W. Kiel, Henry Ziegenhein, Frederick H. Kreismann and Cyrus P. Walbridge, Republicans who were Mayors during the last 44 years.

Why Nolte Is Running.

Comptroller Louis Nolte, unopposed for nomination for a sixth term, told the gathering he had thought of retiring recently, but changed his mind on reflecting on the party's kindness to him and on "the condition of things." He said he could render better service in the future than the past because of his long experience.

Expressing gratification that the city's credit was sound and its finances safe under his fiscal management, he said that the annual cost of the city government was $37.49 per capita, or $17.22 less than the average of American cities exceeding 500,000 in population.

St. Louis' public debt for general departments and municipal service was $86.39 per capita, the lowest of any large city and $89.53 less than the average for the other large cities, he continued. The Comptroller drew the foregoing figures from census reports. He quoted a Dun & Bradstreet commercial report on municipal credit, which said: "Comptroller Nolte has lent stability to the financial policies of the city and has been responsible, in large part, for the conservative policies which have prevailed."

"The security of the city's credit and the amount of the people's taxes," Nolte concluded, "depend on the ability, courage and integrity of the Comptroller. I have never played petty politics; I have conducted my office with an eye single to the welfare of the city and the best interests of the whole people; I have labored diligently to administer the affairs of this office so as to preserve the sound credit and the economical financial administration which the city now enjoys. If I am re-elected I sincerely pledge myself to continue these policies."

Chairman Fred W. Pape of the Republican City Committee declared that the committee was in closer harmony and better organized than at any time in the last six or eight years and expressed impatience with Republicans who thought the party had no chance to win this election.

Nine of the 15 Republican candidates for the 14 nominations for Aldermen addressed the meeting briefly, and a spokesman appeared for another one.

Mrs. Haymer Lowenhaupt, a Democratic member of the Board of Education, seeking election to a full term on the board, and Mark D. Eagleton, Republican candidate for the board, also spoke. Mrs. Lowenhaupt, the only woman running for the board, pleaded for feminine representation in the administration of the schools. Eagleton pledged himself to oppose introduction of ancient or modern "isms" in the schools or infiltration of public utility propaganda.

Spokesmen appeared for four other board members seeking reelection — Richard Murphy and Thomas F. Quinn, Democrats, and Emil J. Barth and Dr. Solon Cameron, Republicans. Murphy's representative was Mrs. Frank Becker, Thirteenth Ward Republican committeewoman.

Among Republican leaders at the luncheon were Jesse W. Barrett, the nominee for Governor last year; Edmond Koeln, former Collector; Miss Cleta Smith, vice chairman, and Louis J. Reidel and Barak T. Mattingly, members, of the Republican State Committee; Mrs. Lon O. Hocker, former national committeewoman, and several former Circuit Judges.

400 PANTS WORKERS SIT DOWN

Pay Rise and Shorter Week Demanded at New Castle, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 6.—Four hundred men and women in the National Pants Co. plant resorted to a "sit-down" strike today in an attempt to enforce their demands for shorter hours and wage increases ranging from 15 to 25 per cent.

Manager L. B. Pilser said he would stay in the plant with the strikers and would make no attempt to settle the dispute until company officials arrived from Washington. Workers' representatives said they wanted their work-week reduced from 44 hours to 40.

DR. W. T. HORNADAY, NATURALIST, DIES

First New York Zoo Director, Wild Life Conservation Leader, 82 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

STAMFORD, Conn., March 6.—Dr. William T. Hornaday, the first director of the New York Zoological Park and a widely known naturalist, died at 7:30 o'clock tonight at his home here. He was 82 years old. He had been ill for the last six months and confined to his bed for several weeks.

His daughter, Mrs. George Temple Fielding of Stamford and Chicago, and three grandchildren, Temple Hornaday Fielding, George Temple Fielding Jr. and Loraine Hornaday Fielding, survive.

Dr. Hornaday, whose concept of wild life conservation transcended the mere placing of animals in cages for adults and children to look at, saw one of his ideas realized when the Federal Government enacted measures to protect ducks, geese and other migratory fowl.

Fought High Bag Limits.

For years he had fought against the high bag limits on ducks and geese. In some states these at one time ranged as high as 25 ducks and 10 geese and Dr. Hornaday and other conservationists warned that America must curtail its hunting or see these birds disappear.

Today the 48 states set their limits within the Federal restrictions of 10 ducks and four geese per season and in addition there exist pacts of co-operation with Canada and Mexico on waterfowl conservation.

He was a leader in the fight for creation of Federal game refuges which has recently brought results. After his retirement as head of the New York Zoological Gardens in 1926, Dr. Hornaday supported Federal efforts to conserve waterfowl.

Studied to Be Farmer.

He was born at Plainfield, Ind., Dec. 1, 1854. After attending Iowa Agricultural College, Dr. Hornaday on his graduation decided that he did not want to be a farmer, but a taxidermist. He pursued that subject and thereafter devoted virtually his entire life to the study, collection of spicimens and protection of wild animal and bird life.

After completing a course of study at Ward's Natural Science Establishment at Rochester, N. Y., Dr. Hornaday started in October, 1874, on his first collecting expedition to the Bahama Islands, Cuba and Florida. In the latter state he clearly established the existence there of the Florida crocodile by the capture of two large specimens. In January, 1876, in the interest of Prof. Ward's establishment, he went on a six months' tour of the West Indies and South America and returned with a large collection.

The most extensive collecting tour taken by Dr. Hornaday was begun in October, 1876, and during three years he visited the jungles of India, Ceylon, the Malay Peninsula and Borneo. He returned with what was said to be the richest, most varied and valuable zoological collection ever made by one man up to that time.

Work for Government.

Dr. Hornaday founded the National Society of American Taxidermists in 1880, and two years later was appointed chief taxidermist of the United States National Museum at Washington. In 1888 he induced the authorities of the national museum to establish a department of living animals, of which he was made curator. The success of this undertaking led to the establishment of the National Zoological Garden at Washington, which was originally planned by Dr. Hornaday.

When the zoological park was placed under the supervision of the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution such radical and sweeping changes were ordered in the plans submitted to Congress by Dr. Hornaday that he resigned.

Leaving the Government service Dr. Hornaday went to Buffalo, N. Y., where he engaged in the real estate business for six years. He was appointed director of the New York Zoological Gardens in 1896. Under his supervision New York City's wild animal and bird family grew until it became one of the most extensive collections in the country.

ORGANIZATION DRIVE BY ELECTRICAL UNION

CIO Unit Seeks to Enroll 12,000 Workers in 20 St. Louis Plants.

A campaign to organize 12,000 employes of more than 20 electrical manufacturing concerns in St. Louis and St. Louis County was announced yesterday by the United Electrical and Radio Workers' Union of America, affiliated with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

The union recently demanded recognition as the sole bargaining agency for employes of the Emerson Electric Co., who will meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Carpenters' Hall to discuss their situation.

Handbills distributed to electrical company workers last week carried this announcement: "Workers in Emerson are on the march. They have organized and have placed demands for a 10-cent hourly increase and a 50-cent hourly minimum wage before the company. They now call on you to organize your plant and join in this great crusade to establish a living wage in the electrical manufacturing industry of St. Louis."

Purported salaries of officers of the Wagner, Century and Knapp-Monarch electric companies and 1936 profits of Knapp-Monarch and the Emerson Co. were listed in the announcement, which added—"it is time that workers got a little of the increased profits, the steel and auto workers have done it."

Wages paid by the companies were discussed as follows: "Emerson pays 42.3 cents an hour average; Wagner pays 32 to 35 cents an hour, with skilled workers getting 40 and 50 cents; Century pays as low as 28 cents an hour to beginners, with 50 cents for skilled work; Knapp-Monarch and the others pay about the same. These firms are able to pay their officers fat salaries, but have not seen fit to make any substantial increases in wages."

The United Electrical and Radio Workers' Union is represented here by two locals, No. 1102 at the Emerson Electric Co., and No. 1104 composed of employes of the Wagner Electric Co. William Sentner, a C. I. O. organizer, has been advising the members.

4 REALTY DEALERS ON CITY BOARD OF EQUALIZATION

They Will Sit for 30 Days, Beginning March 15, to Adjust Assessments.

The appointment of four real estate dealers to serve on the City Board of Equalization, which will convene for 30 days March 15, to hear applications of property owners for adjustments of assessed valuations, was announced yesterday by Mayor Dickmann.

They were Rudolph A. Buermann, 6229 Pershing avenue, vice-president of Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co.; William P. Lighthouse, 3601 Lindell boulevard, vice-president of the William J. Murray Realty Co.; James M. Rohan, 4431 McPherson avenue, president of the Land Title Insurance Co. of St. Louis, and Arthur H. Schneider, 4146 Holly Hills boulevard, president Frank J. Frick Real Estate Co.

The sessions will be held in the office of City Assessor Ralph W. Coale, ex-officio member and chairman of the board.

FUNERAL OF EMIL BERNS, 70; ONCE HAD LAND IN WELLSTON

Derived Good Income From Properties, Particularly Empire Building of World's Fair Days.

Funeral services for Emil Berns, pioneer property owner in the early Wellston business district, who died Wednesday of infirmities at City Infirmary where he had lived for several months, were held Friday at Immaculate Conception Church. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

Mr. Berns, about 70 years old, once derived substantial income from Wellston properties, particularly the Empire Building which housed dancehall, saloon and gambling rooms in World's Fair days and earlier. His later years were less prosperous.

The establishments in the Empire Building were widely patronized by St. Louisans, being situated near city limits and unhampered by city police supervision. He became a resident of the Infirmary after he had been treated at City Hospital for illness due to advanced years. Surviving are a son, a brother and sister.

HOTEL STRIKE LEAVES 650 GUESTS WITHOUT SERVICE

Elevators Stop in 11-Story Building in Detroit, After Wage Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., March 6.—Employes of the 11-story Webster Hall hotel struck tonight, leaving 690 guests without service.

Elevators ceased running at 10 o'clock.

Waiters, waitresses, kitchen employes, bus boys, bellmen and maintenance men joined in the strike. A spokesman said that 62 employes were on strike, exclusive of the bellmen, demanding wage increases and an adjustment of hours.

Guests accepted inconveniences philosophically, as the clerks, who did not strike, did their best to meet the more pressing needs of the patrons.

Several hundred persons were in the dining rooms when the strike was called. All service was suspended. In a night club operated by the hotel, an orchestra carried out a scheduled radio broadcast although there were no patrons.

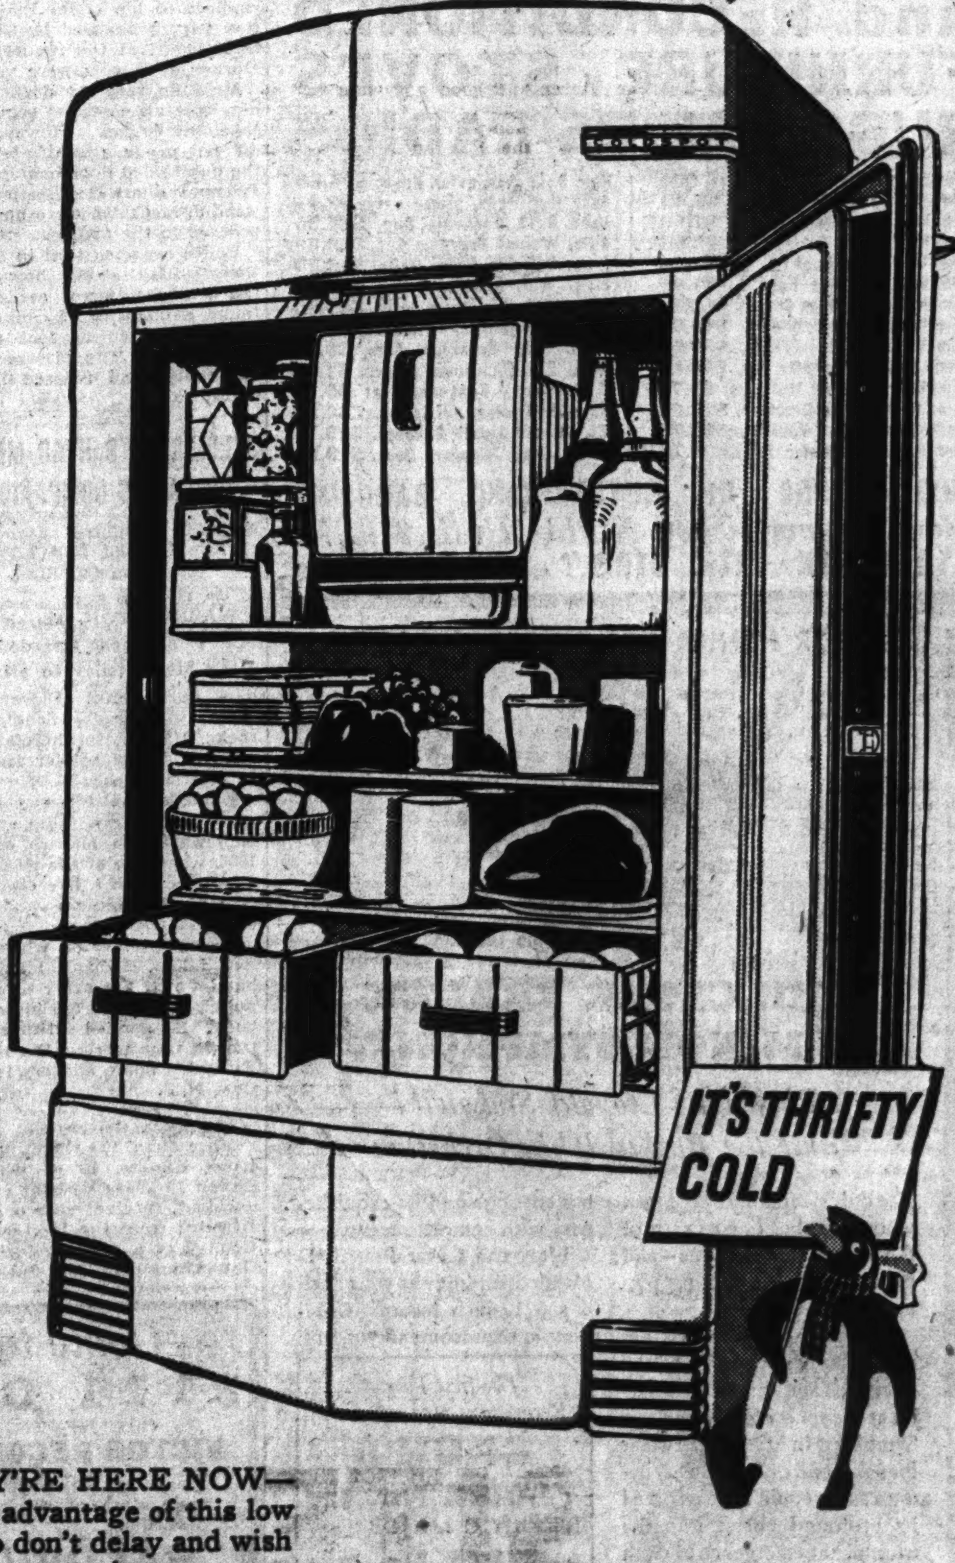
It's Just Plain Horse Sense!
There Must Be a Reason Why!

In 1931 . . .
Sears pioneered the country with first low priced, quality refrigerator, yet out of every refrigerator sold in country—
1 out of 62 was a COLDSPOT

In 1932 . . .
The infant COLDSPOT was growing up to be quite a baby which is just a rather trite way of saying that yearly sales showed that—
1 out of 40 was a COLDSPOT

In 1934 . . .
No longer a baby but growing into quite a youngster and causing its elders in the whole industry to wonder why—
1 out of 22 was a COLDSPOT

In 1936 . . .
Still experiencing "Growing Pains" and becoming bigger and healthier every day so as to record that—
1 out of 10 was a COLDSPOT



In 1937?
Surely a rosy future ahead when the infant of '31 becomes the giant of '37. And little wonder! Look at the value that Sears gives you in our March Value Demonstration Sale. A big 6.3 cubic foot job with mechanical and convenience features of the future and yet look at the price:—

Two sisters, Mrs. A. A. Thompson, of Long Beach, Cal., and Mrs. Ida P. Newell, of Austin, Tex., survive. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock from the Church of the Unity, 5015 Waterman avenue, with interment in Oak Grove mausoleum.

CANADIAN PRIME MINISTER WINDS UP WHITE HOUSE VISIT

W. L. Mackenzie King Refuses to Say What He and Roosevelt Talked About.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Canada's Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, wound up a visit at the White House today, but was reticent about his conversations with President Roosevelt.

He was invited here by the President for a stopover on his way to an undisclosed vacation spot on the Atlantic seaboard.

It was said at the Canadian legation this morning that King's visit here was "purely personal."

HABEAS CORPUS HEARING FOR 3 BROTHERS CONTINUED

Men Accused of Burglary in Alton Grocery Allege Faulty Requisition Papers.

Hearing of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of three brothers, Peter, John and Harvey Miller, who were arrested Feb. 24 in connection with a burglary in an Alton chain grocery, was continued yesterday in St. Louis Court of Appeals for one week. The prisoners were in court in custody of officers.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Joseph M. Walsh stated that John and Harvey Miller were prisoners of the Sheriff on a warrant charging larceny of an automobile in this city. The habeas corpus was laid over in order to afford W. T. Robert McMillin, attorney representing the petitioners, an opportunity to furnish the court with evidence in support of his claim that extradition papers honored by Gov. Stark of Missouri at the request of Gov. Horner of Illinois were void.

McMillin said the documents did not have all essential requirements specified by law. However, as he did not produce certified copies of the questioned documents Appellate Judges William Dee Becker and Edward J. McCullen were unwilling to proceed in the matter.

Police reported that in the North Twenty-fifth street house, where the brothers were arrested, they found a quantity of canned goods, later identified as loot from the Alton store. The prisoners denied the theft and refused to waive extradition.

SOLDIER GETS HERO MEDAL FOR SAVING COMPANION'S LIFE

Private Insulated Hands With Sweater and Pulled Electric Wire Off Man.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The War Department awarded the Soldier's Medal today to private William D. Eubank, Eleventh Field Artillery Brigade, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, for heroism in rescuing a fellow soldier from death by electric shock.

Eubank and three companions were installing a radio antenna at Haliewa Beach, Hawaii, on July 25, 1936, when one of the wires became entangled with a live electric wire. One of the soldiers was electrocuted.

Seeing another on whom the wire had fallen, Eubank insulated his hands with his army sweater and pulled the wire from his comrade's body. He applied artificial respiration in time to save the man's life. Eubank's home address is Atlantic City, N. J.

SPECIAL VOTE INQUIRY URGED IN KANSAS CITY

County Grand Jury Reports—Asks That Another Go Into Frauds.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 6.—Summoning of a special Jackson County grand jury to investigate election frauds in the November election was recommended to Judge Allen C. Southern today by a grand jury which made its report to him.

The grand jurors declared they were "convinced" of "innumerable violations" of State election laws in Kansas City.

In their report, the grand jurors told Judge Southern they had not had time, in a week of routine investigations, to study violations of election laws in detail, but suggested a "thorough investigation" after a Federal grand jury, now in session, releases evidence in its hands.

"In view of the charge to the grand jury to investigate violations of election laws, the grand jury desires to report that it is obvious that this jury did not have time to secure the evidence necessary to properly consider such cases," the jury report said. "The members of the jury had no personal knowledge of such violations.

"We did, however, make sufficient investigation to convince the jury that innumerable violations of the State laws have occurred and that complete evidence can be obtained when the Federal courts are finished with such evidence."

The Federal jury has indicted 75 persons on vote fraud conspiracy charges. Seven have been convicted and are free on bond pending appeals from jail or prison sentences. Four others are on a year's probation after making pleas of no defense.

ST. LOUISAN TO SPEAK FOR CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT

Members of Committee Supporting Proposal to Attend Legislative Hearing Wednesday.

The Missouri Child Labor Committee, organized to work for ratification by the Legislature of the Federal child labor amendment, will be represented by a delegation at a House Committee hearing on the amendment at Jefferson City Wednesday.

Prof. Ralph F. Fuchs of the Washington University School of Law is chairman of the child labor committee. Fifty-eight St. Louisans are members, including heads and representatives of many patriotic, civic, welfare and professional organizations.

TROOPS PATROL JERUSALEM AFTER STREET SHOOTINGS

Native Killed and Another Wounded in Quarrel Between Jewish and Arab Promenaders.

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, March 6.—Truckloads of British troops armed with rifles patrolled streets in a tense atmosphere today after the shooting of a Jew, the killing of one Arab and the wounding of another.

A curfew order effective between 9 p. m. and 5 a. m., was proclaimed as a result of renewed Arab-Jewish disturbances.

Excitement in the city increased with the appearance of army trucks with steel-helmeted troops en route to guard duty.

A young Jew shot in the shoulder as he walked to the wailing wall to pray, said an Arab shot him.

Subsequently, an Arab was shot to death and another wounded in the leg during a quarrel between Arab and Jewish promenaders in a residential section of Jerusalem.

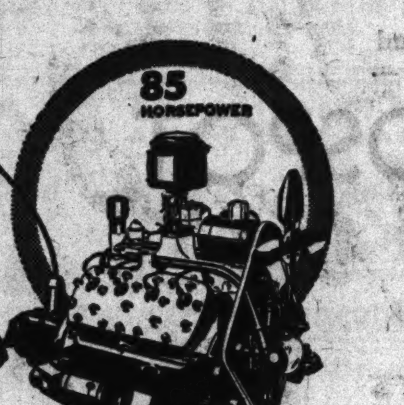
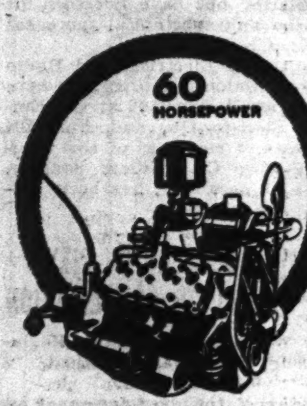
WHY FORD USES ONLY
V-Type
8-CYLINDER ENGINES





FORD CARS have always been built around a basic idea. The Ford became famous because it filled a fundamental need—"Dependable, economical transportation."
As roads and cars improved, Ford kept ahead. In 1932, a new fundamental step was taken—the introduction of the V-type 8-cylinder engine in a low-price car.
The V-8 engine was not new. It had been used for years. But always in expensive cars. Ford found the way to produce this superb power plant in a really low-price car.
Today, more than three million owners are enjoying brilliant Ford V-8 performance on the road. Their cars are set apart from other cars by a fundamental principle—the V-type 8-cylinder power plant—not just changing styles.
Eight cylinders give smoothness, performance and flexibility that a lesser number of cylinders, naturally, cannot give. And V-type is the most advanced power-plant construction—on land, water, or in the air.
Still pioneering, Ford provides for 1937 a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engine sizes. The famous 85 horsepower for top-notch performance. The new 60 horsepower for rock-bottom economy.
Each is built into the same big, roomy car, with the same modern features. Each will prove to you, in its own way, how much the modern V-8 engine contributes to make the Ford V-8 THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD. See it at your nearest Ford dealer's.

Three Settlements Restore 2500 Men to Jobs—New Wage Agreements Are Arranged.

CONFERENCES GO ON TOMORROW

General Motors and Chrysler Prepare to Resume Negotiations With Union Officers.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., March 6.—Agreements reached by automotive parts concerns with the United Automobile Workers of America, affiliate of the Committte for Industrial Organization, ended three sit-down strikes here today.

The settlements opened the way for more than 2500 wage earners to return to their jobs Monday.

The Timken-Detroit Axle Co. plant, held since Feb. 23 by nearly 400 strikers, agreed to hourly wage minimums of 75 cents for men and 65 cents for women. The union was recognized as bargaining agent for its members and the company agreed not to negotiate with any other group for six months.

The Detroit Stamping Co. agreed to recognize the union as representing its members, established a 40-hour week and granted wage increases.

The Allied Products Corporation, manufacturing screw products for automobile producers, granted hourly wage increases ranging from 8 to 12 cents.

The Handy Governor Corporation, the plant of which is held by 70 sitdowners since Feb. 24, applied to Circuit Judge Allan Campbell for an injunction against U. A. W. A. officials and the strikers, and a "show cause" order returnable next Thursday was obtained.

Executives of two major automobile producers—General Motors and Chrysler—considered union proposals pending the resumption of bargaining conferences with the United Automobile Workers Monday.

At General Motors the question was a national hourly minimum wage—the only issue remaining after more than two weeks of conferences. Tentative agreements on all other differences have been reached, and Monday Homer Martin, union president, and William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president of General Motors, will join the conferees.

The issue at Chrysler, where conferences started this week, is recognition of the union as the sole bargaining agency for 67,000 workers. Union leaders insist that this question be disposed of before other demands are discussed.

Negotiations started today to settle the strikes closing three plants of the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corporation and its subsidiary, the Michigan Smelting & Refining Co. Other plants kept idle by strikes are the Zenith Carburetor Co. and Michigan Mallable Iron Co.

A tear gas bomb broke up an informal United Automobile Workers' meeting in a beer tavern at Saginaw, Mich., last night, where the union is engaged in a membership campaign among employes of the Saginaw Malleable Iron division of General Motors. No one was injured by the bomb, tossed from an automobile containing four men.

W. J. B. Macaulay Marries Mrs. N. Brady, New York—To Live in Rome.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—William J. Babington Macaulay, 49-year-old Minister to the Holy See from the Irish Free State, and Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, widow of a multi-millionaire utilities financier, were married today at the early morning mass. Soon after noon they sailed for Rome. They will live in the Irish embassy there. The wedding ceremony was performed by Archbishop John Gregory Murray of St. Paul, Minn. A special dispensation permitted the mid-Lenten wedding. The bridegroom is 44 years old, the bride 52.

At an informal reception aboard ship, given by Mrs. John J. Cavanagh of Norwalk, Conn., a sister of the bride, a pianist played a wedding march and the ship's crew joined in toasting the pair.

The former Mrs. Brady is a Papal Duchess and has been active in Catholic charity. Recently she gave a part of her Long Island estate to the Jesuits for a house of study.

She was a nurse in the World War and was decorated by the Belgian Government. In 1928 she became chairman of the national board of directors of the Girl Scouts.

Brady left a fortune which, in 1930, was estimated at $12,000,000.

LEO F. FAUST, PAINT DEALER, DIES FOLLOWING OPERATION

Former Partner in Phelan-Faust Manufacturing Co. to Be Buried Today.

Leo F. Faust, paint dealer and former partner in the Phelan-Faust Paint Manufacturing Co., died yesterday at St. John's Hospital following an operation for removal of gall stones. He was 51 years old and lived at 4062 Flora boulevard.

Frank W. Phelan formed a paint business in 1902 and shortly thereafter made Mr. Faust a partner. In 1918 the latter sold his interest in the firm to the four sons of Phelan, William J., Frank W. Jr., Leo M. and David Phelan. Later he opened the Faust Paint Co. at 3625 Salena street. In 1932 he and Charles M. Faust, secretary of the concern, requested the firm be placed in receivership. Two years later the business was liquidated.

In recent years Mr. Faust operated a paint company at 3228 North Broadway. Surviving are his wife, three brothers and three sisters. The funeral will be held at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday at the Peetz Mortuary, 3029 Lafayette avenue, and St. Margaret's Church. Burial will take place in SS. Peter and Paul's Cemetery.

ST. LOUIS FLOOD RELIEF FUND REACHES TOTAL OF $382,648

$12,213 Received From Mayor Dickmann's Benefit Show at City Auditorium.

Gifts to the flood relief fund of the St. Louis chapter, American Red Cross, reached $382,648 yesterday with the receipt of $12,213 from Mayor Dickmann's benefit show at the Municipal Auditorium Feb. 6, P. H. Byrns, executive secretary, announced.

Additional contributions of $1037 have also been received from employes of the Public Service Co., making their total $3399. Additions to the fund are expected when money taken in at benefits in the city and county is turned in.

POLICE QUIZ SOUNDED LIKE BOXING CONTEST

Witness at Trial of Pennsylvania Officer Describes What He Heard.

By the Associated Press.

SOMERSET, Pa., March 6. — A young automobile salesman compared today the police questioning of Frank C. Monaghan with a prize fight, as he testified against State Policeman Anthony Sanute, charged with beating the 64-year-old Uniontown hotel keeper to death.

Ralph Simon, an "ear witness" to what the State called Monaghan's "third degree" to force a confession to the killing of Detective John C. Wall, said he heard sounds of thuds, scraping and moaning from the Fayette County detective's headquarters. He testified:

"Well, I've been to boxing shows, and it sounded just like that—like someone hitting someone."

Trooper Stacy Gunderman, Sanute's 25-year-old junior officer, has already been convicted of second degree murder for Monaghan's death, and five other Uniontown law officers are awaiting trial on murder charges.

Several other "ear witnesses" who had testified for the State against Gunderman, took the witness stand to repeat their descriptions of cries of pain heard in the detective's Bertillon room the morning of last Sept. 12.

That morning, Monaghan's body was carried out of the room in a basket, bruised and broken.

J. S. Albright, a Uniontown newspaper man, testified 15 or 20 persons stood outside the room while he heard Monaghan's cries.

Former Assemblyman Harry Cochran said he heard the sounds. Supreme Court Justice George W. Maxey, presiding on a change of venue order, asked why he had not summoned help for Monaghan. Cochran replied:

"Because he was already in the hands of the law."

The Justice questioned:

"The hands of the law, or the hands of the lawless. . . . I want to know whether the noises this man neard were sufficient to warrant action on his part."

Assemblyman Matt Welsh, George Sherbon, J. Fred Shean, George Miller and Joseph Dickson, newspaper man, testified to hearing talk and noises in the room.

Old St. Louis and Development.

Old St. Louis and its development will be discussed by Dr. R. H. Fuhrmann in an address before the Electrical Board of Trade Tuesday noon at Hotel Statler.

SENATOR HOLT ON ROOSEVELT THREE-HORSE TEAM SIMILE

Runaway More Dangerous Than Animal That Lies Down in Traces, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senator Rush D. Holt, West Virginia Democrat, referring today to President Roosevelt's statement there is "no definite assurance the three-horse team of the American system of government will pull together," declared a "runaway" more dangerous.

"It is more dangerous to have one horse that will run away and tear down the fences in plowing than it is to have one horse who will "lie down in the traces," Holt said in a statement.

"A smart horse cannot be driven into dangerous places where a wreck is certain. He will lie down in the traces to prevent it. A steady horse is needed many times to calm one that is frisky ano wants to run."

EDWARD WILL SOON HAVE MOVIES OF MRS. SIMPSON

Her Host at Cannes Says He Will Take Them and Send Copies to Duke in Austria.

By the Associated Press.

CANNES, France, March 6.—Edward, Duke of Windsor, who has only still pictures of Wallis Warfield Simpson, soon will have new motion pictures of her.

Herman L. Rogers of New York, host of Mrs. Simpson, said today he would take the pictures himself. Copies, he said, would be sent to the Duke in Austria.

Rogers has not permitted Mrs. Simpson to be photographed since her arrival here.

NOMINATING PAPERS FILED FOR MARK D. EAGLETON

Lawyer Seeking Election to Board of Education as a Republican.

Nominating petitions for Mark D. Eagleton, lawyer, for election to the Board of Education as a Republican were filed with the Election Board yesterday. They were signed by about 30,000 voters.

Eagleton, who resides at 4608 Tower Grove place, was connected with the late Edward W. Foristel, Republican politician, in his early career as a lawyer. One of his law partners now is James A. Waechter, Democrat, who was removed as chairman of the Election Board by Gov. Park last September "for the betterment of the public service."

ZEKE COLVAN SIGNED FOR MUNICIPAL OPERA

Stage Director to Return Here for Fourth Season, George Hirst for Third.

Zeke Colvan has been engaged for his fourth consecutive season as stage director of the Municipal Opera in Forest Park and George Hirst for his third season as musical director, the Municipal Theater Association announced last night.

In more than 20 years as a stage director, Colvan has staged many of the musical triumphs of the Shuberts and the late Florenz Ziegfeld and has directed such stage and screen stars as Eddie Cantor, Ed Wynn, Joan Crawford, the late Marie Dressler, Al Jolson, Nancy Carroll, Barbara Stanwyck, Irene Dunne, Jack Oakie, Allan Jones and Helen Morgan. Among productions which he staged originally for Ziegfeld and later in Forest Park were "The Three Musketeers," "Whoopee," "Bitter Sweet," "Kid Boots," and "Show Boat."

During the last three winter seasons Hirst was musical director for "The Great Waltz," which will open the nineteenth season at the open-air theater in Forest Park on Friday night, June 4. He began his musical career as a boy soprano soloist in the choir of St. Stephen's Church, Providence, R. I., and studied later in the Conservatory of Music at Leipzig, Germany. Subsequently he was associate conductor of the Montreal Opera Company and, later, of the Boston Opera Company.

After serving 23 months in the Canadian army during the World War, he returned to this country and, at Victor Herbert's request, conducted the composer's musical play "Angel Face." Continuing in the lighter musical field, he conducted for Elsie Janis in "Puzzles," for Mitzi Hajos in "Lady Billy," for Fred Stone in "Tip Top," for the Marx Brothers in "Cocoanuts," for Will Rogers and Dorothy Stone in "Three Cheers" and for Ziegfeld's original "Show Boat."

Following presentation of "The Great Waltz" which will run 10 nights, the summer's productions at Municipal Theater, each to run seven nights, will be, in order: "The Fortune Teller," "Music in the Air," "Louie the Fourteenth" (new to Municipal Opera), "The Mikado," "Salute to Spring" (world premiere), "Prince of Pilsen," "The Bartered Bride" (new to St. Louis), "Pink Lady," "Robin Hood," "Babes in Toyland" and "Wild Violets" (American premiere).

The season will close Aug. 29. Season reservations may be made at 1876 Arcade Building.

ASKS POLICE TO HOLD HIM TILL HE DISPROVES BIGAMY

Case of Mistaken Identity in Granite City, Ill., Troubles Cincinnati Man and Wife.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, March 6.—Thomas Gilliland, 39-year-old engineer, walked into Central Police Station today and asked that he be held until he could prove to his wife, Ethel, that he had not been married before.

"My wife believes I am a bigamist after reading in a detective magazine that I was arrested in 1921 on a charge of killing my wife in Granite City, Ill., and that my wife later showed up alive. That was a girl I went with, but I was not married."

Police wired Granite City officers for details of the 1921 case.

Thomas Gilliland was held at Granite City in 1921 after the body of a murdered woman, found buried in a wheat field on the East Side, was erroneously identified as that of Serena Morris Gilliland, described as the estranged wife of Gilliland. She was found working in Cincinnati and returned to Granite City, effecting Gilliland's release. Newspaper accounts of the case quoted her as saying she was "through with Gilliland."

The crime later was solved when the body was identified as that of Mrs. Nora Dorman, whose husband, Arthur, admitted killing her. He was sentenced to an indeterminate term in the penitentiary on a plea of guilty of manslaughter.

CHAIN LETTER CRAZE BEGINS TO CROP UP AGAIN IN DENVER

District Attorney to Confer Tomorrow With Manager of Safety on Stopping Spread.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, March 6.—Chain letters again are forging links of dimes, quarters and dollars in Denver. Two years ago the money-mailing craze, started on a send-a-dime basis, reached epidemic proportions.

William E. Gunthner, manager of safety, said today police have taken cognizance of the rebirth of the chain letter here within the past few days, and said he and District Attorney John A. Carroll would confer Monday on steps to combat growth of new operations.

The chain plans of sending anything from a dime to a dollar to a fellow participant and receiving dimes or dollars in return reached its peak here in April and May, 1935.

Under a typical chain letter method two years ago, a person would receive a letter containing six names. He was supposed to mail a dime to the person heading the list, scratch off this name, add his own to the bottom and mail copies of the list to six other persons. As a person's name worked to the top of the list by the process of elimination, he was supposed to reap a harvest of dimes.

CZECHOSLOVAKIAN PRESIDENT FREES 400 GERMAN PRISONERS

Political Offenders Released in Commemoration of 87th Birthday of Ex-President Masaryk.

By the Associated Press.

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, March 6.—President Eduard Benes liberated 400 Germans imprisoned for political offenses today in an amnesty decree commemorating the 87th birthday of former President T. G. Masaryk.

However, it was announced at the same time that eight youths, members of the outlawed Nazi party, had been sentenced to terms up to 15 years for military treason.

All eight are students from Germanic sections of the republic who had been studying in Praha.

European commentators have expressed recurrent fears of trouble in Czechoslovakia, due both to its militant German minority and to its strategic position in any conflict between Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia.

MOUNT HOLYOKE ROW ENDS

Opposition to Naming Man President Is Dropped.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass., March 6.—Organized opposition to appointment of Dr. Roswell G. Ham of Yale, as the first man to be chosen president of Mount Hokyoke College for Women, ended today when the Alumnae Council unanimously adopted a resolution saying: "Nothing can be accomplished by further discussion of the presidency."

IDAHO AFTER DIVORCE BUSINESS

New Law Cuts Residence Requirement to Six Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

BOISE, Ida., March 6.—Idaho lined up today for some of the Reno, Nev., divorce business.

Gov. Barzilla W. Clark signed a law to reduce from three months to six weeks the time divorce-seekers must reside in Idaho before starting legal proceedings. The measure becomes effective 60 days after adjournment of the Legislature, still in session.

STUDEBAKER DARES YOU TO PRODUCE A SIX TO EQUAL IT
BIG 1937 DICTATOR
America's greatest 6-cylinder car!

ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH
A FEW CENTS A DAY MORE THAN A LOWEST PRICED CAR!
AND HOW STUDEBAKER'S LOW 1937 PRICES ARE SELLING IT!
WE know we're going to step on a lot of toes with this sensational challenge. But we feel it's our duty to the public to make it.
We guarantee to convince you conclusively that this big superbly styled 1937 Studebaker Dictator is a better car than any higher priced six.
And more than that—we'll match this Dictator, even on a low cost basis, with any lower priced car because the Dictator's sounder, longer-lived construction plus its sensational Fram oil cleaner and gas-saving automatic overdrive will even up any apparent price difference!
Moreover, the roomy, powerful Dictator is the world's first six with the triple safety of a steel-reinforced-by-steel body, automatic hill holder and feather-touch hydraulic brakes: It's the world's only six with non-slam doors that close lightly, tightly and silently on rattle-proof rotary latches. Its steering halves the effort of parking.
It's styled inside and outside by famous Helen Dryden—and its beautifully air-curved lines glisten in a paint finish twelve coats deep! See it and drive it and you'll understand why we say no six in America, regardless of price, can equal it.
STUDEBAKER'S C. I. T. BUDGET PLAN OFFERS LOW TIME PAYMENTS

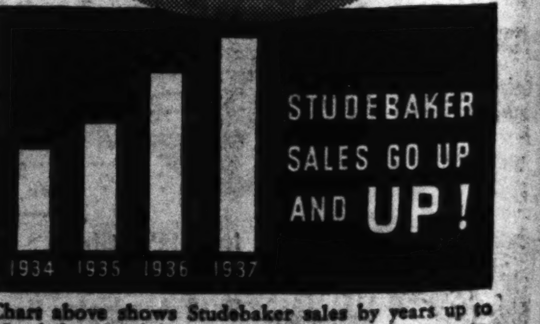

Chart above shows Studebaker sales by years up to March first. Look how 1937 Studebaker sales are soaring above even record-breaking 1936. You buy a popular favorite when you buy a Studebaker!

SHIP STRIKERS RENEW BORDEAUX BLOCKADE

Reoccupy Vessels After Once Evacuating Them, Pending Wage Negotiations.

By the Associated Press.

BORDEAUX, France, March 7.—(Sunday)—French shipping was tied up in port here early today as maritime workers resumed their strike after once abandoning their occupation of docked vessels and removing their barricade of tugs across the channel.

Foreign vessels were able to leave the harber when the strike was called off last night following the Government's threat to use warships to break the blockade and a promise by employers to increase wages and grant dock workers a 40-hour week.

Later, however, amid the blare of sirens, the workers reoccupied vessels in the port and re-formed their barricade across the Garonne River pending the outcome of wage negotiations.

Negotiations were said to be progressing favorably and, while the Government maintained its threat to send warships to break the blockade, a settlement was expected to be reached during the day.

Thousands of persons jammed the docks early today, but kept well out of range of water hoses manned by the strikers.

Two thousand men started the strike yesterday by occupying 12 ships and barricading the harbor.

YOUNG PREACHERS GIVEN THE SOUND OF OWN SERMONS

Theological School Uses Phonograph to Cure Them of Mumbling.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 6.—To let them know how they sound, student preachers are having their sermons played back at them from phonograph recordings in a course on voice culture recently added to the curriculum of the theology school (Methodist) at Emory University here.

"Less boring talk from the pulpit will result in less wriggling in the pews," Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, professor of fine arts, tells them.

The course is designed to put new appeal into the reading of such things as the Twenty-third Psalm.

"Too many mumble through it," says Dr. Dewey. "In this course we show young preachers how to put feeling into the Psalm."

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD INDICTED AS REBATER

Fresno (Cal.) Shipper Accused at Same Time With Accepting $10,000 From It.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. was indicted today by a Federal Grand Jury on charges of granting freight rebates to a shipper.

The Midstate Horticultural Co., Inc., Fresno, Cal., and its general manager, Arpaxat Setrakien, were indicted on charges of accepting $10,000 in rebates from the railroad for grape shipments from the California vineyards.

Separate indictments, each containing 26 counts, were returned against the two companies and Setrakien.

TWO KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Illinois Soldier One of Victims Near Panama City.

By the Associated Press.

PANAMA, March 6.—Two American soldiers were killed this afternoon as the private training plane in which they were flying crashed near Panama City. The men killed were: Private Beriet Simeoni, Mansfield, Mass., and Corporal John E. Roll, Springfield, Ill. The bodies were identified by representatives of the Eightieth Service Squadron, Albrook Field, in which the men served.

DELAY TO JUNE LIKELY IN TAX LEGISLATION

Continuance or Changes Depending, in Part, on Income Levy Revenue.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Congressional tax experts said today that revenue legislation probably would be delayed until June.

They gave two major reasons for holding off a measure to continue the so-called nuisance taxes:

1. They think that by waiting until shortly before these levies expire in June and July, they can put through extension legislation in a hurry without danger of long controversy over amendments touching other parts of the tax structure.

2. They want to learn whether March 15 income tax returns produce enough money so that some of the nuisance taxes, like those on admissions, furs and sporting goods, may be dropped or lowered.

The administration is counting on the nuisance taxes for $452,580,000 in the next fiscal year, the gasoline tax supplying $190,000,000 of the total, automobiles $48,300,000, electrical energy $34,060,000 and tires and inner tubes $29,750,000.

The question of general tax revision also is in abeyance, pending formulation of a report by the joint Senate-House Tax Committee.

Chairman Doughton (Dem.), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he was going to confer soon with Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee concerning the preparation of the report.

The joint committee started the study of the tax structure in August after Doughton, Harrison anad Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had conferred with President Roosevelt and announced they thought no additional taxes would be necessary.

Ways and Means Committee members have been considering the possibility of altering the tax on undistributed corporate earnings to give more favorable treatment to corporations with deficits and debts and to those desiring to retain some of their earnings for plant improvements.

Doughton said the committee would take up the question of amending the Social Security Act separately.

MORGENTHAU IN CONFERENCE ON FRENCH MONETARY STATUS

Discusses With Envoy Bonnet and British Counselor Effect on International Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau canvassed the possible effects of current French monetary developments on international exchange at a conference today with Georges Bonnet, French Ambassador, and V. A. L. Mallet, counselor of the British Embassy. Wayne C. Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Archie Lockhead, manager of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, and Frederick Livesey, Assistant State Department Economic Adviser, also attended the meeting.

Morgenthau refused to discuss what was said.

BOBBY WILSON, ALL-AMERICAN QUARTERBACK IN 1935, TO WED

Will Marry Miss Betty Bailey, His College Sweetheart, at Southern Methodist.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., March 6.—Bobby Wilson, 1935 all-America quarterback with the Southern Methodist University Mustangs, will marry Miss Betty Bailey, his college sweetheart, here April 14.

The parents of the bride-to-be, Mr. and Mrs. Layton W. Bailey of Dallas, announced the engagement today. Miss Bailey accompanied the S. M. U. band when it performed in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena two years ago.

After a season of professional football with the Brooklyn club of the National League, Wilson has entered the oil business.

EX-COMMANDER OF VATICAN ARMY DIES AT AGE OF 102

Count Louis de Courten Served Nearly 50 Years in All; Retired in 1909.

By the Associated Press.

NANCY, France, March 6. — Count Louis de Courten, who served the Vatican as military commander nearly 50 years, died today at the age of 102.

He joined the pontifical army in 1852 and served until 1870 when it was disbanded. He was called back to Rome in 1878 by Pope Leo XIII and commanded the Vatican's Swiss guards until he retired in 1909.

TAXI DRIVER IN FATAL CRASH GETS 6 MONTHS

Sent to Workhouse—Pleads Guilty of Manslaughter in Passenger's Death.

Pleading guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of Amer Aubertin, a passenger in his taxicab, in a collision last July 19, Robert Leonard, Negro, was sentenced yesterday to six months in the Workhouse by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt.

Ordinarily the punishment in such cases has been a year's imprisonment, but the Circuit Attorney recommended the shorter term in view of the fact that Leonard has been in jail awaiting trial for more than eight months since the accident. Leonard, who is 25 years old, changed lawyers recently and the new counsel advised him to plead guilty.

The accident occurred at Nebraska avenue and Chippewa street at 4:30 o'clock in the morning. Leonard told police at the time that he was driving his Calumet cab east in Chippewa and did not make a boulevard stop, running into a car driven by Victor Kinsella, 4000 Lafeyette avenue. Aubertin, 14, 2744A Osage street, died of injuries several days lated and several other persons in the two machines were hurt.

Woodson Barnhart, 50, who gave his address as 330 Orchard avenue, Webster Groves, pleaded guilty before Judge Joynt of driving while intoxicated and was fined $50 and costs on recommendation of the Circuit Attorney. He was arrested by police who pursued him after his car knocked down a Negro in front of 817 Delmar boulevard last June 2.

Metal Refining Plant Raises Pay.

By the Associated Press.

CARTERET, N. J., March 6.—The United States Metals Refining Co. announced today its hourly base rate would be increased from 43 to 53 cents an hour, effective Tuesday. Salaried employes will receive a 5 per cent increase. Between 1700 and 1800 employes will be affected.

7000 IN 4 HOURS FILE U. S. INCOME RETURNS

Deadline on Both Federal and State Reports Is a Weak From Tomorrow.

About 7000 persons filed Federal income tax returns in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue during the four hours before the office closed at 12:30 p. m. yesterday. It was the largest crowd in any day since blanks were sent out in January, and marked the beginning of the rush to file returns before the deadline midnight, March 15.

Attaches estimated that approximately 50 per cent of returns filed were taxable. Out of 75,000 personal returns in the Eastern District of Missouri last year, only about one-third were taxable, and of 10,000 corporation returns, only 2200 were taxable.

The greater part of the crowd, which kept 201 deputy collectors working at top speed, was composed of persons working a five-day week, with yesterday off.

7 Days Left for Filing.

There are seven business days remaining in which to file returns at the office, on the second floor of the Federal Building. The office will remain open its regular hours, 8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m., from Monday through Friday, but it may be kept open next Saturday afternoon, when it would normally be closed. The law requires it to remain open until midnight Monday, March 15, the last day in which returns may be filed without penalty. Returns, sworn to before a notary public and accompanied by the required payment, may be mailed, and will be accepted without penalty if the postmark is March 15 or earlier.

At least one-fourth of the tax must be paid at time of filing. The rest may be paid in quarterly installments. All single persons with an income for 1936 over the $1000 exemption, and all married persons with a joint income of more than their $2500 exemption, are required to file returns, even though their deductions will make their returns non-taxable. There is a $400 deduction from the taxable income for each child under 18 years old, or any other relative, physically or mentally incapable of supporting himself, who derived more than half of his income from the taxpayers.

Penalties for Failure to File.

For failure to file a return, there is a new penalty of 5 per cent of the tax for a delinquency of from one to 30 days, 10 per cent for from 31 to 60 days, 15 per cent for from 61 to 90 days, and 25 per cent thereafter. The entire amount becomes immediately due and payable, and 6 per cent interest on the unpaid balanc is charged. For willful failure to file a correct return for the purpose of evading the tax, a penalty of 50 per cent is added, with a criminal penalty running to a maximum of five years in the penitentiary and a $2000 fine on conviction.

The deadline for filing State income tax returns without penalty at the office of the Assessor at City Hall is also midnight, March 15.

DEMOCRATIC FACTIONS MAKING PEACE IN CITY

Groups Trying to Present United Front in Campaign for Mayor.

Rival Democratic factions in various wards have begun making peace, in the movement to present a united front in the mayoral election and avoid splits in next Friday's primary.

A notable instance was the settlement of differences Friday night in the Thirteenth Ward, at a meeting at Rubicam Hall, Grand boulevard and Potomac street. Alderman Phelim O'Toole of this ward, seeking renomination with Mayor Dickmann's backin, was warmly received in an address before the Jefferson Club, representing the Hendy J. Phelan faction. The club unanimously indorsed O'Toole, and Phelan announced that O'Toole's opponent, Charles P. Conrath, would receive no organization support.

Phelan's contest of the re-election of James H. Stewart, a city employe, as Democratic committeeman of the ward was taken under advisement in Circuit Court yesterday.

A motion to indorse O'Toole was made at the meeting by John J. Phelan, Hendy's brother and a retiring member of the Police Board, and by Miss Mary Belle Sherry, Democratic committeewoman, who is allied with Hendy Phelan. Other speakers were Hendy Phelan and Richard Murphy, a member of the Board of Education, who was reported to have incurred the Mayor's displeasure by backing Phelan for committeeman. The Mayor has announced support of opponents of Murphy for election to the board.

Earlier in the week the opposing factions in the Twelfth Ward joined forces, in a demonstration of the old political adage: "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em." The group headed by Raymond R. Tucker, Mayor Dickman's secretary, and Michael J. McGee, former committeeman, joined the organization of James McAteer, who defeated McGee last August for the place on the committee. The fusion occurred Wednesday at McAteer's headquarters, 7212 South Broadway.

Leaders of both the Dickmann and anti-Dickmann factions formerly at odds, appeared last night at the dinner at Hotel Jefferson in honor of Sheriff James J. Fitzsimmons, Eighth Ward committeeman, counted by the Mayor as an ally.

The Mayor will address the Young People's Dickmann-for-Mayor Club at dinner at Hotel Statler at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday. William K. Gardner is general chairman and Al J. Haemmerle acting chairman.

The Fourteenth Ward Democratic Club will open new headquarters at the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Arsenal street with a tea from 2 to 4 o'clock this afternoon.

WOMAN VOTERS TO SERVE ON JURIES AT MOST TRIALS

Members of Senior Law Class at Washington University to Act as Attorneys.

The League of Women Voters, which has advocated a constitutional amendment to permit women to serve on juries in Missouri, will have an opportunity to demonstrate the merits of women in such service in a series of moot trials to be conducted by the Washington University Schoolof Law for its senior students beginning Tuesday evening.

The juries will be composed of members of the League. The senior law class has been divided into two groups, one to represent the plaintiffs' case, and the other the defense. Petitions in hypothetical cases will be drawn by the students and filed in the regular manner in the office of a circuit clerk. A circuit judge will be selected to preside and a jury commissioner will summon the panels. The trials will be held in Division No. 5 of the Circuit Court in the Civil Courts Building.

A series of lectures on practical court procedure, delivered by Robert M. Crain, head of the Circuit Clerk's legal staff, will be completed by the trials. In charge of the trials will be Dean Joseph McClain of the law school and former Circuit Judge John W. Calhoun, representing the university, and Circuit Judge J. Wesley McAfee and Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest, representing the Circuit Court.

TO SUE OVER CAHOKIA FILLS

Zerweck Seeks to Make Terminal Drain Stagnant Pool.

Louis P. Zerweck, State's Attorney of St. Clair County, said yesterday he would file suit to force the Terminal Railroad Association to remove fills which have dammed up the Old Cahokia Creek in East St. Louis and made it a health menace.

Zerweck said the odor from the stagnant water was causing residents to complain.

FLOOD CONFERENCE INCLUDES 23 STATES

All Middle West and South to Be Represented at Meeting in St. Louis Friday.

Each of the 23 Middle Western and Southern States will be represented by delegations at the flood control conference Friday at Hotel Statler, called by the Mississippi Valley Association.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark has called a conference of Governors of States in the flood area on the same day and at the same hotel. Governors who will attend personally or send representatives are: A. B. Chandler of Kentucky, Henry Horner of Illinois, Homer A. Holt of West Virginia, M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana, George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, Carl E. Bailey of Arkansas, Martin L. Davey of Ohio and Gordon Browning of Tennessee.

The Governors and their representatives will be guests of the Mississippi Valley Association at a luncheon at 12:15 o'clock at the hotel.

Several Controversial Phases

Several controversial phases of the flood control program are expected to be brought up for debate at the conference of State delegations, called to develop and coordinate the best possible plan of flood control for the entire Mississippi watershed.

One proposal is that the Federal Government should assume full cost of lands, easements and rights-of-way and full responsibility for damages, maintenance and operation after completion of flood control works, where downstream benefits of an interstate nature occur.

Many delegates are understood to be opposed to creation of a new Federal authority to take over flood control construction from the United States Army Engineers, Lachlan Macleay, executive vice-president of the Mississippi Association, said.

Other delegates, he continued, have indicated they favor a flood control program which will include benefits to navigation, river channel stabilization and national defense measures.

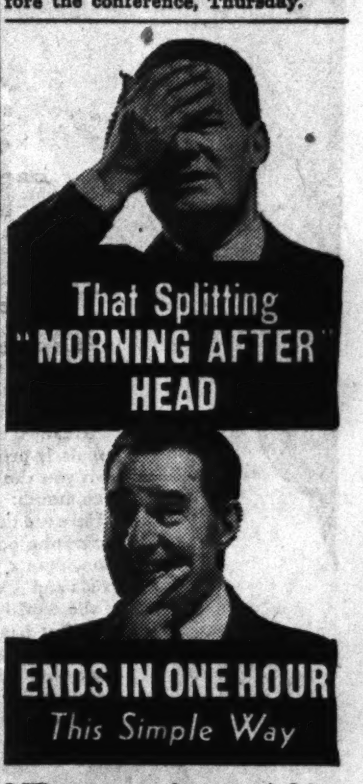
The conference will begin at 9:30 a. m. with former Gov. Arthur J. Weaver of Nebraska, head of the association, presiding. Speakers during the morning session will include Mayor Dickmann, Gov. Stark, Major-General Edward M. Markham, who as chief of the United States Army Engineers directs all flood control work; Congressman Orville Zimmerman of Missouri, member of the House Committee on Flood Control, and Congressman Wesley E. Disney of Oklahoma.

Principal Speaker.

The principal speaker at the luncheon will be Congressman Will M. Whittington of Mississippi, chairman of the Committee on Flood Control.

At the afternoon session, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Congressman W. J. Driver of Arkansas and Mayor William H. Dress of Evansville, Ind., one of the cities damaged by the recent flood, are scheduled to speak. Discussions will follow.

Weaver has designated the association's committee on use of water resources as the resolutions committee for the conference. Its chairman is Wade O. Martin, who also heads the Louisiana Flood Control Commission. The committee will hold an all-day meeting the day before the conference, Thursday.



That Splitting "MORNING AFTER" HEAD
ENDS IN ONE HOUR This Simple Way

Whenever you have overindulged in food or drink, do this quick, and that "morning after" head will be gone before you realize it. Simply mix 1/5 of a glass of Pluto Water with 4/5 of a glass of hot water. Drink—and excess poisons in the intestinal tract will be carried away in one hour, or less. When this happens, your head will clear, your stomach will settle, your energy will return. Pluto Water is an efficient saline mineral water—bottled at famous French Lick Springs, Indiana. Get either the 25c or 50c size, which contains three times as much, from your druggist. Have a bottle handy. An effective way to end a "morning after" head.

INDICTED AGENT HIRED BY UNION UNTIL 1945

Harry J. Hagen's Job Is Extended at "Vote of Confidence" Meeting.

Harry J. Hagen, $100-a-week business agent of Local Union 73, Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union, who was elected to a five-year term in 1935, had his job extended an additional five years, to 1945, at a "vote of confidence meeting" held by the membership Friday night at the union hall, Marcus and Easton avenue.

Hagen is one of four union representatives scheduled to go to trial in Federal Court on April 26 with five plastering contractors under an indictment charging them with conspiracy to defraud the United States by collusion in fixing excessive prices on public works in St. Louis and St. Louis County financed in part by PWA funds. The indictment charged that the defendants, by obtaining control of the lathers' and plasterers' unions and setting up their own contractors' organizations, extended their domination in the plastering industry here.

Statement by Union Officer.

George Stroup, vice-president of the union, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that the resolution expressing confidence in the business agent was presented to counteract unfavorable publicity resulting from the indictment. Because of the reports that coercive methods were used in 1935 to elect Hagen for five years, associates of the business agent sent him out of town on a fake call, in order that he would not be at the meeting. An election extending Hagen's term of office another five years from 1940 was held, and the resolution, expressing the utmost confidence in Hagen, was unanimously adopted by the 75 members present, Stroup said. There are about 100 members in the union, some of whom are working out of town.

Union membeers, addressing the meeting, recalled that during the recent depression Hagen "hled the organization together through payment from his own pocket of the per capita tax to the international union, that he had paid the coal bills, medical bills and other bills of men who were "broke" and had worked without pay for about two years. Hagen yesterday said he had spent and lent more than $6000 of his own money during the depression ,taking a loss of $3000 as a result.

Union to Finance Defense.

Stroup said the union would finance Hagen's defense at the conspiracy trial and that on April 3 the business agent would be the honored guest at a banquet of union men and contractors at Hotel Jefferson. Last New Year's day the officers of the union gave him a dinner at the Park-Plaza Hotel at which they presented his mother, who resides in Bound Brook, N. J., with an oil portrait of her son.

Hagen resides at 4750 Highland avenue. Besides his salary he receives an automobile from the union, which pays his business expenses.

On July 9 union lathers will receive a wage increase of $2 a day, to $13. The increase was agreed on during recent negotiations between the union and contractors in which William F. White, Federal labor conciliator, participated.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FOR 17 BILLS, AGAINST 20

Approves Three Unemployment Insurance Measures in State Legislature.

The most recent list of recommendations, by the Chamber of Commerce board of directors, as to bills pending in the Missouri Legislature, shows 17 bills approved and 20 disapproved. The directors acted on recommendation of the Chamber's Legislation and Tax Bureau.

Among the measures approved by the directorate are three unemployment insurance bills, House Bills 2 and 61 and Senate Bill 36. These provide for a tax on the total payroll of employers of eight or more persons, at rates of 1.8 per cent in 1937 and 2.8 per cent in 1938-9.

In approving these bills, it is urged that any state unemployment insurance law be so worded as to be inoperative if the corresponding Federal law should be held invalid. Other recommendations are that employer reserve accounts with merit rating systems be authorized; that only employers contribute to the fund; and that the merit system be included if the "pooled fund" plan is adopted.

Among the measures opposed are House Bill 22, the "shotgun motion" bill as to criminal cases, which is held to give defendants an undue advantage in seeking new trials; House Bill 116, to create a state board of movie censors; and Senate Bill 80, making new bonding requirements for credit agencies.

PROSECUTOR'S AID RESIGNS

Frank E. Mathews to Return to Private Law Practice.

The resignation of Associate Prosecuting Attorney Frank E. Mathews, who will return to private practice, was announced yesterday by Prosecuting Attorney James P. Finnegan, effective April 1.

Mathews, as chief assistant, has prepared most of the important informations issued by the office and has handled prosecutions in Court of Criminal Correction. He obtained convictions on charges of conspiracy to violate adoption laws against the baby hoax defendants, Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, Attorney Wilfred Jones and Mrs. Helen Berroyer.

SHAWNEETOWN STUDYING NEW PLAN TO MOVE CITY

SHAWNEETOWN, Ill., March 6.—Flood-stricken Shawneetown does not want to lose its identity. As a precaution against this, citizens drafting preliminary plans for moving the city three miles inland from the Ohio River to escape further floods are studying a plan which would merely extend the corporate limits of the city to include the proposed new site.

However, the original proposal to raise funds through friendly condemnation proceedings and turn over the present site for a State park is being seriously considered, members of the committee said.

Al Lowe, a member of the committee, said the funds obtained through the proposed condemnation action would be used to aid individual citizens on an equitable basis. Mayor William Brinkley said the committee had until the last of April to decide on definite action.

About 200 residents of the city had returned to their homes today, but authorities said "conditions are not conducive to good health."

"REM is the quickest thing in the way of cough relief I have ever found."

Mr. Cosimo Pecoraro
884 Niagara St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Right!

Once you use REM, you too will know you've found the right cough medicine. REM is no ordinary remedy. It is different! There are definite reasons why REM is so remarkably effective for relieving coughs:

(1) REM is a real cough medicine, not just a "tickle stopper."

(2) REM clings—and clings—and clings to the throat, soothes the irritation, quiets the cough.

(3) REM works two ways . . . not only in the throat, but also systemically. That's what makes it so very much more effective.

So if you have a cough, resulting from a cold, don't fool around with it! Go after it with a real cough medicine like REM.

BIG OPIUM CARGO SEIZED IN RAID ON SHIP AT NEW YORK

U. S. Agents Arrest Eight, Two With Torn Halves of Delivery Order Written in Chinese.

SHIPMENT'S OUTLAW VALUE $200,000

Bookmaker, Two East River Junk Boatmen and Three Members of Crew Among Those Held.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Torn halves of a paper bearing Chinese writing, one in the possession of an oriental carpenter aboard the British freighter Taybank and the other half held by an East River boatman, landed the two men in jail today charged with trying to smuggle into New York opium which officers said had an outlaw value of $200,000 to $500,000.

Federal agents announced the seizure, 600 tins, one of the largest in the port's history, the arrest of eight men in all, and the questioning of the Taybank's chief officer, Roland R. C. Jones, and nearly 30 members of his crew. Jones aided in questioning prisoners. Gregory O'Keefe, assistant port collector, emphasized that no suspicion attached to the officer.

Those arrested included: Willie Bonanzi, described as a bookmaker, with headquarters in a Brooklyn social club; Dominic and Tizio Buda, brothers and East River junk boatmen; Ah Man, Chinese carpenter aboard the Taybank; Sam C. H. Rosip, Malay storekeeper aboard ship, and A. C. Gam, Malay second boatswain.

Pieces of Paper Fit Perfectly.

The torn slip was something like a laundry ticket but really was a delivery order in Chinese, the agents said. One-half was found, they said, in Bonanzi's pocket, along with $1400 in cash, when he was arrested. And the other half, the tear fitting perfectly, was in the possession of the carpenter, Ah Man. When fitted together, they said, the ticket represented that the opium was being delivered to the person to whom it was intended.

The opium was found hidden on the Taybank, a small steamer, and was packed in small cans, much like tobacco tins, fitting easily in a persons' pockets. It was in a form about the consistence of molasses, and was ready for use. The tins were in six bags, four ostensibly for potatoes, one for rice and one for sugar. The bags were hidden among supplies of paint, rope and sawdust.

The raiding party, headed by Joseph Flynn and eight Federal agents, was composed of 60 Federal and city officers, resulted from three months of investigation by a squad headed by John W. Roberts, in charge of smuggling investigations in Washington.

Three Trailed by Officers.

The agents said they had shadowed the Buda brothers and Bonanzi and had found evidence that they were smuggling narcotics from the Far East ships to importers here for a ring. The officers said they waited until the men started visiting the Taybank frequently before making the arrests. Those arrested will be arraigned before a United States Commissioner Monday.

A libel for $90,000 was filed against the Taybank preventing the scheduled sailing of the vessel tomorrow for Shanghai and other Far Eastern ports.

GEISHAS OF OSAKA CELEBRATE VICTORY, GO BACK TO WORK

Sing-song Girls Win Recognition of Independent Guild by Teahouse Owners.

By the Associated Press.

OSAKA, Japan, March 6.—Geisha girls and teahouse owners prepared tonight to celebrate the successful termination of the sing-song girls' strike for the right to unionize. Welcoming parties were arranged along the gay white way for the return of the 300 entertainers who withdrew to a mountain-top temple and stayed away from work for eight days until they won recognition of the Geisha Guild.

The geishas won a compromise victory after police helped them negotiate their demands, and they accepted it after a long conference before the altar of Buddha to whom they had prayed for support. The girls' employers agreed to recognize an autonomous geisha guild, but stipulated that Tomi Ando, a leader of the strike, could not be an important officer of the guild.

In the meantime another strike continues and threatens to prevent Prince Chichibu, eldest brother of Emperor Hirohita, from attending the coronation of King George VI in London. The Prince Chichibu had arranged to sail from Yokohama March 18 on the Heian Maru of the Japanese Mail Ship Line, but the line's ships' officers remained on strike as a patriotic protest. They quit their ships because, they charged, the line was disrespectful of the Emperor last Oct. 29 in failing to order the Rising Sun flag flown from all its vessels when he reviewed the grand fleet.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH PACTS WITH WORKERS ANNOUNCED

Agreements for Collective Bargaining Arrived At, Officer Announces.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The Postal Telegraph Co. announced today "agreements for collective bargaining" had been executed with employe representatives at a conferences in Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit.

The announcement was made by R. A. Gantt, operating vice-president of the company here. He declined to elaborate on the terms of the agreement.

Frank B. Powers, president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, said his organization was representing the Postal Telegraph employers in the negotiations.

He said that the union was asking a 20 per cent wage increase and a 40-hour week for all employes except linemen and that bargaining would start with company representatives in Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit simultaneously Wednesday.

STAY-IN STRIKE OF MONKS NEAR RED SEA CONTINUES

Others Consider Joining 100 Who Are Protesting Against Unpopular Abbott.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 6.—The stay-in strike idea among monks threatened today to spread to a second monastery as disgruntled brothers at a retreat on the Red Sea watched the progress of a "sit-down" by Coptic monks at Deir-el-Moharrak, reported relenting a little in their demands.

Two delegates from the ancient Coptic Monastery at Deir-el-Moharrak reached Cairo and informed police they would permit any public official to enter their desert stronghold. No churchman, they declared, would be allowed to investigate their high-wall, windowless refuge, where more than 100 brothers maintained their vigil of protest. The monks are on strike against restricted social privileges and an unpopular abbot.

If the strike is successful, the dissatisfied band of monks at Deir-el-Antonious on the Red Sea indicated they, too, might try the same tactics.

$1000 REWARD FOR ARREST OF ANNOYERS OF WORKERS

Douglas Aircraft Head Establishes Fund to Protect Non-Strikers at His Plant.

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—Donald W. Douglas, president of the Douglas Aircraft Corporation, announced today the creation of a $5000 fund to protect non-strikers at the plant.

Simultaneously Mayor Edmond Gillette of Santa Monica issued a statement attributing the reported throwing of stones through the windows of homes and automobiles of some of the workers to "bums and chiselers." He praised the strikers for their "peaceful picketing."

Douglas said rewards of $1000 would be paid in each case for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons molesting employes going to or from the plant.

STOCK BROKER CONVICTED

Found Guilty at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., of Larceny.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 6.—William H. Milne, Albany and Schenectady, N. Y., stock broker, was convicted today of first and second degree larceny by a county court jury.

Judge J. Gordon Flannery ordered the broker, charged with misrepresenting the value of stock of the Television Corporation of America which he sold, held in jail for sentencing next Tuesday. Lewis G. Duell, Poughkeepsie securities dealer, a co-defendant, pleaded guilty to similar charges Tuesday and testified for the State.

Let Canute Water
re-color your
Gray Hair
SIMILAR TO NATURE'S OWN YOUTHFUL SHADE

23 YEARS WITHOUT INJURY TO A SINGLE USER

Canute Water is a pure, colorless liquid of wonderful properties. When you apply this crystal-clear fluid to your gray, faded or streaked hair, it will again appear youthful, lustrous and uniform in color.

Not a single person has ever been injured by the use of Canute Water in over 23 years. This exceptional record is your guarantee that it is perfectly safe to use.

Easy to Use
Because of its safety, cleanliness and dependability, you can use Canute Water alone, in the privacy of your own room. No previous experience is necessary. Simply wet your hair with it and allow to dry.

The time of day or the state of the weather makes no difference when using Canute Water. Apply it at your convenience. And since it does not alter the texture of your hair, you may curl, wave or set it—or get a permanent—as usual.

Speedy Action
It requires between one and three applications to re-color hair to its proper shade. The treatment can be completed in a single day.

And when your hair has once been re-colored, a single treatment, given only once a month, is sufficient to keep it that way. No more attention is necessary.

Never Fails
No matter what caused your hair to become gray, Canute Water will positively overcome it. There are no exceptions.

Even if you have used some other hair coloring, it will be a revelation to you to see what Canute Water can do for your hair.

Amazing Results
Canute Water is neither sticky nor greasy. It leaves your hair clean and natural to the touch. There's not even a suggestion of "dye". Neither is it just a hair "darkener". Canute Water imparts a color similar to nature's very own.

Lasting Color
Even your most intimate friends will be unable to distinguish the re-colored hair from your natural. And the new color remains in your hair, permanent against sun, air, salt-water and shampooing.

So, if you are still young — if you still care what others think — and if you are not quite ready to be classed with the "old folks" get a bottle now. It will solve your problem so completely that you, yourself, will be astonished.

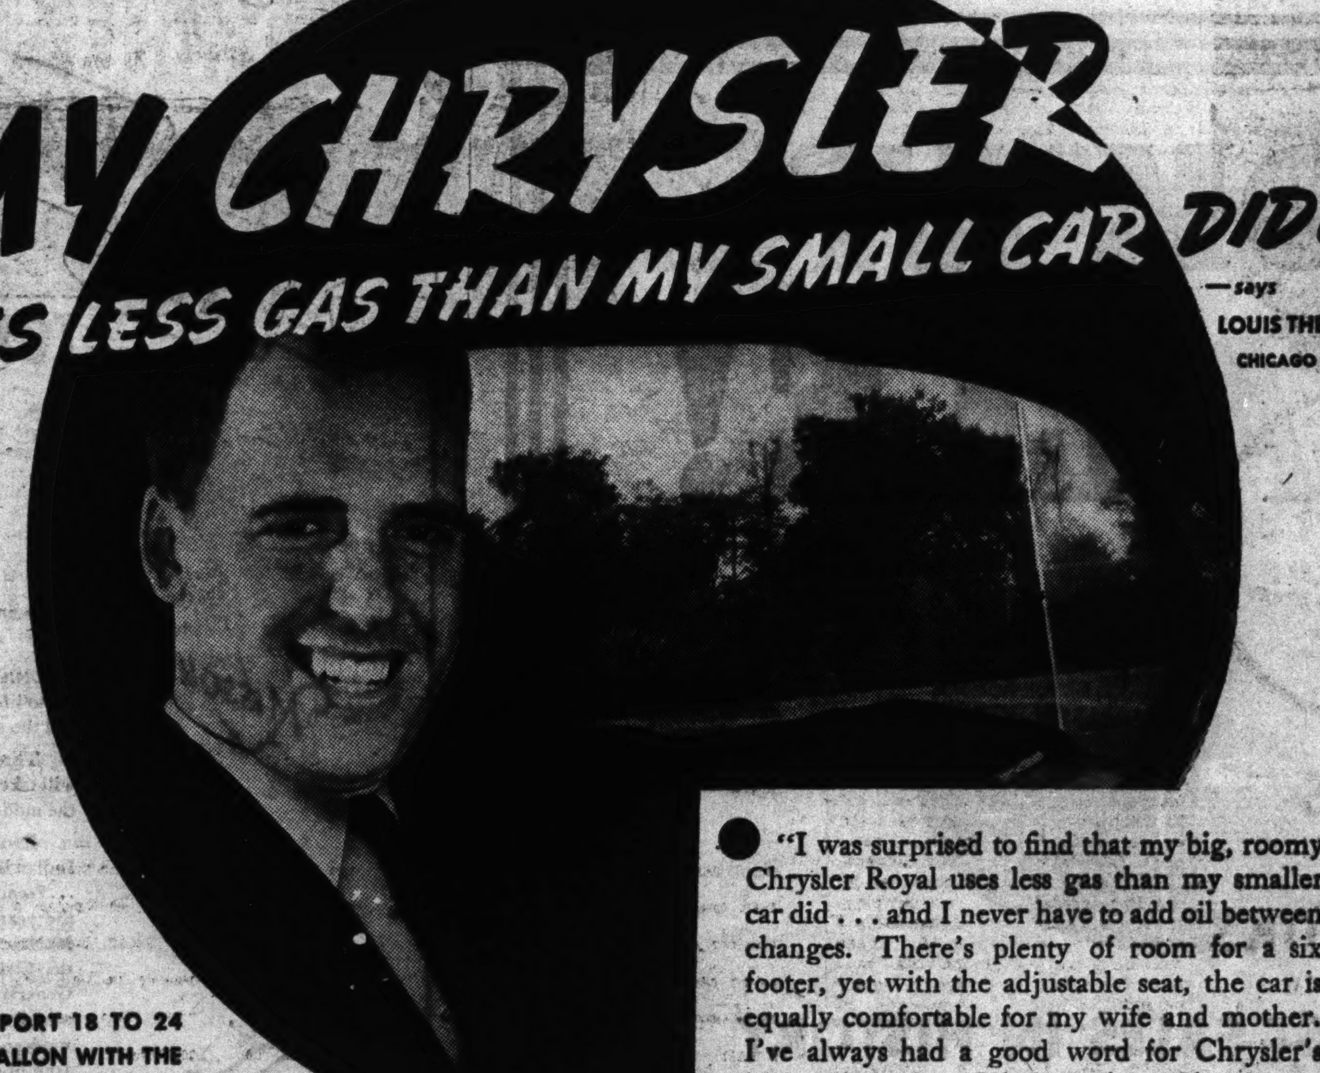
"MY CHRYSLER USES LESS GAS THAN MY SMALL CAR DID!"
—says LOUIS THEBAULT, Jr. CHICAGO



"18 TO 24 MILES PER GALLON," says Arthur W. Widman of Detroit. "It is amazing to find that this big, roomy, comfortable car is actually more economical than cars of much less size and ability."

"THE RIDING COMFORT IS OUTSTANDING," says Mrs. F. A. Schreiner of Cleveland. "The smart, sleek lines and the beautiful, roomy interiors are other factors that are especially appealing to me."

"I GET 18 MILES PER GALLON IN CITY TRAFFIC," says Miss Lois Brandt of New York, "and I love the feeling of effortless freedom that the automatic overdrive provides in country driving."

● "I was surprised to find that my big, roomy Chrysler Royal uses less gas than my smaller car did . . . and I never have to add oil between changes. There's plenty of room for a six footer, yet with the adjustable seat, the car is equally comfortable for my wife and mother. I've always had a good word for Chrysler's hydraulic brakes. We have three Chryslers in the family . . . two Royals and an Imperial!"
LOUIS J. THEBAULT, JR.

☆ OWNERS REPORT 18 TO 24 MILES PER GALLON WITH THE BIG NEW CHRYSLER ROYAL

☆ WHEREVER you go you'll find that owners of 1937 Chryslers are the happiest motorists in town.

Reports of 18 to 24 miles per gallon come from all parts of the country.

Experiences with oil economy are equally outstanding.

Many owners speak of the amazing quietness of the new Safety All-Steel Bodies.

Everyone agrees that there are no brakes like Chrysler's famous hydraulics.

Room . . . safety . . . riding ease . . . low upkeep . . . reliability . . . dashing beauty . . . all these things and more!

The plain fact is that Chrysler has invaded the low-priced field with an entirely new kind of low-priced car . . . bringing advantages no low-priced car ever had before.

See the 1937 Chryslers today . . . the Royal . . . Imperial . . . the Airflow. You'll agree . . . for 1937 Chrysler tops 'em all!

1200 CONVICTS STUDY IN STATEVILLE PRISON

Trade and Correspondence Schools for Convicts Part of Rehabilitation Plan.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6.—State Superintendent of Prisons Joseph E. Ragen reported today that more than 1200 convicts in Stateville Penitentiary are attending classes in the vocational and correspondence schools.

"Our men have surprised even the most optimistic of us in their enthusiasm for the vocational school," he said. "There are more than 700 men enrolled now and we are planning added facilities for those who are seeking to enroll."

The school rooms are in the basements of various buildings within the 67-acre prison yard. Woodworking, printing, electric and automobile mechanical trades, mechanical drawing, salesmanship, public accounting, poultry husbandry, blacksmithing, music and barbering are taught.

The correspondence pupils—who have frequent classroom sessions, too—study a general high school course, including French, German, Latin and higher mathematics. Six hundred are enrolled.

College-trained instructors teach the prisoners. T. J. McNeil, a graduate of the University of Illinois, is director of the vocational school. The correspondence school was established seven years ago with Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, the murderers of Bobby Franks, as the directors. Loeb was killed in a razor fight a year ago. Leopold now serves as an assistant to Paul Fitzgibbons, school director.

Smaller vocational units have also been established at Menard, Pontiac and Vandalia penitentiaries.

Increase in Russian Birthrate Outruns Plans to Provide for It

Big Family Decree Effective in Urban Centers —Prison for Illegal Operations, Bounties for Children.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, March 6.—The Bolshevists now admit, and seriously criticise, grave fundamental defects in the elaborate plans of 1936 to double the population within 25 years.

As the first step toward putting the Soviet Union squarely into the population race already far advanced in Germany and Italy, the Kremlin last summer issued the famous "big family decree" which strengthened family ties, severely penalized divorce, forbade abortion and established heavy bounties for the parents of big families.

Simultaneously the governmental public health organizations were supposed to launch a building and training program in order to provide hospitalization, doctors and nurses for the expected increases in population.

Now the birthrate is rising in all urban centers, but the health organizations have failed almost completely in the program to provide beds, doctors and nurses for child-bearing mothers.

"We must acknowledge," G. N. Kaminsky, people's commissar of health said, "that we are poorly prepared for the great increase in the birthrate with which we are already faced as a result of the government decree forbidding abortions. We must make up for time lost and rectify the position by all measures by an enormous effort."

He was addressing the first scientific session of the Institute for the Protection of Mother and Child called to cope with the birthrate problem.

More because information on the dilemma was provided by the newspaper Izvestia, which pointed out that the program called for 5512 new beds in lying-in hospitals to be finished during 1936, whereas actually only 561 were provided.

The government did not stop with simple passage of the no-abortion decree. It provided drastic penalties for its enforcement. Hundreds of mid-wives have been sentenced to long terms for illegal operations. Eighteeen women were given terms of from one to 10 years in prison in a single case recently in Kharkov.

Bootleg operations continue but at prices far beyond the reach of the common people. The bounties and promised decline in cost of living, promised at the time of the passage of the decree, have not wholly materialized.

Instead of declining, the cost of living advanced about 10 per cent in the Soviet Union in 1936, according to statistics gathered by unbiased observers. Two thousand rubles a year for each child over 6 in the family was promised at the time of the decree, and indeed was paid for some time. Some families drew handsome bounties.

The financial drain on the state was heavy, and early in 1937 the bounties were reduced by executive decree so that parents are not paid bounties on each child until it is 5 years old, as was originally provided.

No publicity was attached to the bounty reduction and many families are not yet aware their child-bearing rewards will be greatly reduced.

It was recently announced that officials estimate Moscow's birthrate will soon treble that of 1936. In Stalingrad one clinic reported that doctors in November, 1936, were caring for 824 women awaiting babies as compared with 78 the previous November. A four-fold increase of expectant mothers was reported from Baku.

Izvestia pointed out that in many cases hospitals and rest homes supposed to have been finished in 1936 have not even been begun yet.

Bus Fare Cut Deferred.

WASHINGTON, March 6. — The Interstate Commerce Commission ordered deferred until June 3, proposed fare reductions by the De Luxe Motor Stages of Illinois on interstate passengers. The line's petition was referred to Examiner A. E. Later for hearing.

WALLACE ADVISES CONSUMERS TO UNITE

He Says They Will Have Larger Share in Government When They Are Ready.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said today that consumer groups would play a larger part in the "national scheme of things" after they got together to "work out for themselves a clear understanding" of what they wanted.

He spoke of a department which at some future time might be devoted more exclusively to representing the consumer in Government, and later explained he was referring to President Roosevelt's proposal for a consumer-representative agency as part of a reorganized Federal Government. Such an agency, he declared, could not of itself protect the consumer; it would require support and co-operation.

Wallace outlined his hopes for improving the consumer's position in an address at a conference sponsored by the consumers emergency council and attended by delegates from 50 State, interstate and national organizations.

Country Producer-Minded.

At present, he said, the country was producer-minded, not consumer-minded but "all of this can change very rapidly in case the cost of living should rise another 20 or 30 points."

"When the day finally arrives that consumer groups have bargaining power as effective as that of the producer groups," he said, "I trust the bargaining power will be used with the thought in mind that most consumers are either themselves producers or are closely affected by those who are producers. . . .

"We want increased balanced production of those goods which we all need and want, at prices low enough to pass such increased production into consumption, but at prices high enough to keep such production coming without destruction of our natural resources or of our democratic processes.

"As a functional part of this formula, it is obviously necessary—either by inter-industrial planning by business itself, or by Government pressure at key spots at the right time—to bring about a sufficient distribution in the national income so that consumer purchasing power will more continuously equal producing power.

Balance Needed.

"The problem of increased production is one of continuous progressive balance, not only between such producing groups as business, labor and agriculture, but also between what we produce and what we consume."

Consumer groups, Wallace said, must not lose sight of the fact that "lower prices, of themselves alone, unless other things also are brought to pass, will not benefit consumer welfare, because sometimes lower prices mean lower wages and less income for farmers and reduced business profits.

"In like manner, producers must realize that higher prices taken by themselves alone can easily bring about a situation where the increased income to the producer as a producer will be more than offset by the increased cost to themselves as consumers."

Wallace added: "When the day finally arrives that consumer groups nave bargaining power as effective as that of the producer groups, I trust the bargaining power will be used with the thought in mind that most consumers are either themselves producers or are closely affected by those who are producers."

St. Louis Firm Files Tax Appeal.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—H. L. Ruppert & Co., Inc., St. Louis, asked the Board of Tax Appeals today to set aside a $2783 income tax deficiency assessed by the Internal Revenue Commissioner for 1933. The appeal is based on the disallowance of several deductions, including $42,854 claimed as bad debts.

O. H. SHAW OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BOARD DIES

Member Since Organization in 1926, Death Due to Pneumonia; 50 Years Old.

Orin H. Shaw, a member of the State Workmen's Compensation Commission since its organization in 1926, died yesterday afternoon at Missouri Baptist Hospital of pneumonia. He was 50 years old and had been ill for about a week.

Mr. Shaw resided in Jefferson City. Shortly after the Workmen's Compensation law went into effect, in 1926, he was appointed by Gov. Baker as a member of the commission, representing the labor organizations and employes generally. He was a linotype operator by trade, a member of the typographical union, and a former vice-president of the State Federation of Labor.

A Democrat, he was re-appointed to the commission by Gov. Park in November, 1934, for a six-year term, which would have expired in November, 1940.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ecce Shaw; two sisters, Mrs. J. H. Phillips and Mrs. A. B. Huffstutter of Columbia, Mo., Mr. Shaw's former home, and two brothers, J. N. Shaw of Jersey City, N. J., and C. D. Shaw of Phoenix, Ariz. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

1000 LIGHTS FROM 1 MATCH

A new scientific invention that is making all present day matches and lighters old-fashioned and obsolete has recently been announced, and is already sweeping the country. This one amazing "match" gives 1000 lights, and is entirely different from any other kind of match or lighter. It strikes like a match, works like a match, yet there are no burnt-out match sticks strewn around. Contains no wood, sulphur, phosphorus or other poisons. Guaranteed safe around children. It works every single time, without fail. It beats all mechanical lighters, for there are no screws, no wicks, no moving parts of any kind, and there is nothing that can get out of order. Everyone who sees it is simply astounded and wants several immediately. This sensational product—called CAN-O-LITES—sells for the amazingly low price of only 25c. It never needs to be refueled or refilled! In every state of the union, men and women introducing CAN-O-LITES are reporting staggering earnings. Individuals, restaurants, hotels, clubs, almost everyone orders six to several dozen at a crack! Excellent territories are still open, and a postcard addressed to the CAN-O-LITES MFG. CORP., Dept. G158, Youngstown, Ohio, will not only bring complete money-making details, but also a free sample offer. Write today.

WESTINGHOUSE TO RECOGNIZE UNION AS AGENT FOR MEMBERS

Labor Leaders Want to Be Sole Bargaining Representative, Claiming Majority of Employes.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 6. — Representatives of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America, an affiliate of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, claimed partial recognition today from the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Union leaders said T. I. Phillips, general works manager of Westinghouse, assured them at a conference the company was willing to deal with the union as a collective bargaining agency representing its members only. The union, which is co-operating with the company's employe representatives in negotiating a demand for a 20 per cent wage increase, declared it would continue its request for recognition as the sole bargaining agency on the basis that its membership represented a majority of the company's 12,000 employes in the Pittsburgh district.

Both sides agreed to continue their conference.

CRAFTS CONSIDER USING BOYCOTT IN FIGHT ON CIO

Building Trades, It Is Suggested, Might Refuse to Handle Steel Produced by New Group.

MAY FORM RIVAL INDUSTRIAL UNIONS

A. F. of L. Leaders Say Campaign of Reprisals Against Lewis' Organization Has Just Begun.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Craft union leaders hostile to John L. Lewis considered tonight using the boycott as a weapon in their conflict with Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

The boycott, if adopted, would apply to capital goods produced by workmen who are members of Lewis' unions. The Building Trades Union, for instance, might refuse to handle steel produced by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The craft unionists, members of the American Federation of Labor, told friends that they had only begun their campaign of reprisals against Lewis and his associates.

Despite Lewis' victories of the last few weeks in the steel, automobile and electrical manufacturing industries, the craft leaders said they were still confident their unions would prevail as the backbone of the American labor movement.

Small Hope of Compromise.

They expressed belief, however, that peace with Lewis by compromise was all but impossible and said they were prepared to fight him every time he poached on what they consider their territory. They added that they still expect to bring Lewis back into the Federation on their terms.

Lewis has instituted a campaign to bring every worker in large mass production industry into one big union. The craft unions insist that highly skilled workers, no matter where they are employed, should belong to the union of their craft.

Because Lewis organized the Committee for Industrial Organization to accomplish his ends, the Federation suspended his United Mine Workers and nine associated unions last September.

Another reprisal some A. F. of L. men are considering would call for craft union members to refuse to recognize the label of Lewis unions on consumer goods.

This would be tantamount to a boycott.

The Federation's Tampa, Fla., convention last November took a step in this direction by voting not to recognize the label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one of Lewis' principal allies.

Rival Unions Considered.

Still another proposal would call for formation of rival unions in Lewis' territory. William Green, American Federation of Labor president, repeatedly has said that the Lewis unions would have to be expelled before the federation could take that step.

However, the American Federation of Labor already has chartered an International Union of Spinners in territory claimed by the United Textile Workers, and Green intimated this week he might consider sanctioning establishment of a rival union in steel.

The fourth section of the craft unions' program calls for a craft organization campaign in territory claimed by both the crafts and Lewis. The craft unions would insist that no agreement between Lewis unions and industry keep the old line unions out of the picture.

Attitude in Auto Strike.

The crafts have adopted this course in the automobile industry. While Lewis was negotiating with General Motors officials, Green sent a telegram to the corporation insisting that the crafts be recognized for their membership. Lewis at the time was asking to be exclusive bargaining agent for all General Motors employes. General Motors assured Green his wishes would be respected.

Since Lewis won an agreement for his members in General Motors plants the crafts have started an organization campaign among skilled workers in the Fisher Body plant at Cleveland. Members of the Lewis union drove the craft organizers away from the plant's gates, but the organizers said they would be back.

HELD FOR THREATENING MAN

Frank Toarmina Said to Have Admitted Extortion Attempt.

Frank Toarmina, 23 years old, unemployed, was taken in custody yesterday on complaint of Frank King, clothing salesman at Famous-Barr Co., who said Toarmina had threatened to harm him unless he received money enough to go to California.

The detectives followed King to a downtown corner where he had promised to meet Toarmina and turn over $50 to him. The prisoner admitted attempting extortion, they reported. The men became casually acquainted a few weeks ago, King related, when Toarmina begged a dime from King on the street.

WOMAN SAYS SHE SAW VIRGINIA EX-TROOPER KILLED

Questioned by Richmond Police in Supposed "Murder" of E. N. Hawkins.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., March 6.—Police questioned Violet Merryman today in an inquiry into the death of Edward N. Hawkins, former State policeman. They said she had told of witnessing Hawkins' "murder" in a Chesterfield County cabin last August.

Laban B. Howard, former sea captain, was charged in a warrant with killing Hawkins.

Police continued efforts to determine whether bones dug from a pauper's grave were those of Hawkins. The woman told them that a ring removed from a body found in a clump of honeysuckle vines near Petersburg last August was worn by Hawkins.

Order for 141 Army Plane Motors.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The War Department awarded a $1,099,729 order to the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J., today for 141 motors to be installed in army observation airplanes now being constructed by North American Aviation, Inc., Inglewood, Cal. The motors are of the single row radial type capable of developing 1000 horsepower.

TAXI STRIKE SPREADS, FIGHTS IN CHICAGO

Most of Machines Off Streets, Roving Pickets Halt Those Operating.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6.—The swift spread of a drivers' strike put most of the city's taxicabs off the streets today.

About 20 men were seized by police after roving bands of strikers halted operating taxis. Oscar Hofkin, a leader in the walkout of Yellow and Checker Cab Co. chauffeurs was arrested for questioning.

Scattered clashes ensued between strikers and drivers who refused to quit work. A crowd of loop shoppers watched a fight between a chauffeur and three pickets who forced the taxi to the curb at Wabash avenue and Randolph street.

Cab stands in front of hotels were virtually deserted. Only a few taxis were in the parking lanes at railroad stations where usually many are lined up.

Some auto owners turned their cars into makeshift cabs and offered rides at fares somewhat above the rate.

Officials of the Yellow Cab Co., said 500 of the 1000 vehicles were in service while the Checker said 500 of their 1500 were still active. Strikers alleged, however, more than 2000 drivers had quit, and that one Yellow Cab official had offered to pay $7 a day to any chauffeurs willing to drive the idle machines.

The unheralded walkout started Friday. Mass meetings were held. The Midwest Taxicab Drivers Union was formed and split into two units—one for Yellow Cab employes, the other for Checker.

From the office of Joseph Jacobs, attorney for the strikers, a request for a conference and demands for higher commissions were sent to the company offices.

Between 400 and 500 strikers voted at a meeting to ask affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Thomas J. O'Grady Dies.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Thomas J. O'Grady, 48 years old, recently named superintendent of lodging houses and hotels in Chicago, died today of heart disease. He served six terms in the Illinois Legislature, where he sponsored numerous labor laws, including the eight-hour law for women. In 1926 and 1932 he led the fight to repeal the State's prohibition search and seizure law. His wife and two children survive.

"I found I could Switch to the Big Dodge
AS 'EASY' AS I COULD BUY A SMALL CAR!"
says WILLIAM E. KERSTEN, NEW YORK CITY

"I SAW that the new low 'delivered' Dodge price was just a trifle more than a similar model of the smaller car I had been considering," explains Mr. Kersten. "And now the money Dodge is saving on gas alone will easily offset that small difference in price. I'm averaging 20 miles to the gallon. What's more, I know the higher price this Dodge will bring me when I trade it in will also more than offset the difference in original cost."

Just as enthusiastic as Mr. Kersten are thousands of new Dodge owners who have switched from smaller, competitive-make cars to Dodge—and have discovered that the bigger Dodge actually costs no more in the long run to own and drive! 18 to 24 miles to the gallon of gasoline, they report...along with substantial savings on oil, lubrication, tires, and upkeep!

See this big, new Dodge today! Drive it! Learn how you, too, can switch to Dodge and save money!

"20½ miles to the gallon of gas," says C. B. Edwards, Glendale, Calif. "That's what I click off in my big, new Dodge. I never drove a car so economical to operate."

"We'll save $70 before the year is out," says Gladys McGill Barron, Chicago. "Using our old smaller car for comparison, we're getting 8 miles more to the gallon from our new Dodge. Our oil costs are much lower, too."

"It didn't take me long to notice that; compared to other cars in same price range, Dodge delivered prices are lower," says J. Edward Gragg, St. Louis. "In fact, the new Dodge I switched to cost only a little more than a small car I was considering."

Chevrolet Co. Expects Million-Car Year in 1937, Doran Declares

Summary of Outlook Given at Presentation of "All-America Selling Team" Awards.

Production and sale of more than a million cars in 1937 is the outlook for the Chevrolet Motor Co., now that production has been resumed, Felix Doran Jr., assistant general sales manager, said Tuesday. He was in St. Louis to attend a banquet for the Chevrolet wholesale personnel at Hotel Chase at which he presented "All-American Selling Team" awards to 134 members of the organization.

The awards, consisting of diamond-set gold keys, were in recognition of outstanding ability as reflected in the record-breaking sales of Chevrolet cars and trucks in 1936. Since the All-American Selling Team was organized by W. E. Holler, Chevrolet vice-president and general sales manager, three years ago, the achievement of the awards symbolizing such membership has been the most coveted honor in the Chevrolet organization.

Doran said that Chevrolet had led the auto industry in sales seven out of the last 10 years, and that it expected to make 1937 its second consecutive million-car and truck year. Orders on dealers' books total 100,000, he said, and production in the Chevrolet manufacturing and assembly plants throughout the country is accelerating at a pace which will enable the company to approximate last year's performance, which resulted in the sale of 1,168,000 units.

Quick Deliveries Now.

"Dealers will soon be in a position to make quick delivery of any model and color," he said. "Plants are swinging back into normal production very rapidly, and a production of 6000 units a day will soon be reached.

"Chevrolet's abiltiy to exceed the million mark again in 1937 depends on two factors. One is the production capacity of the plants. The other is the selling capacity of the sales organization. The latter, of course, hinges to a great extent on the country's economic condition.

"Observers estimate that there will be a four-billion dollar increase in the public income this year—from 60 billions in 1936 to 64 billions in 1937. There are numerous other indexes pointing to expanded markets, but none that sums up the outlook more completely than this.

Production Speeding Up.

"Since the dealers' ability to sell in large volume is assured, Chevrolet's abiltiy to set new records in 1937 narrows to getting out the cars. Here the production departments have done a monumental job. Manufacturing and assembly operations in our plants throughout the country have already accelerated to a point approaching production of 6000 units a day. As it is, dealers are in a positon to take orders for prompt delivery, which in itself is proof that a remarkable production job has been done."

Nash 1937 Car Sales Exceed 1936 Model Year

More 1937 Nash automobiles already have been produced and shipped than in the entire model year of 1936, according to C. H. Bliss, vice-president and director of sales of the Nash Motors division.

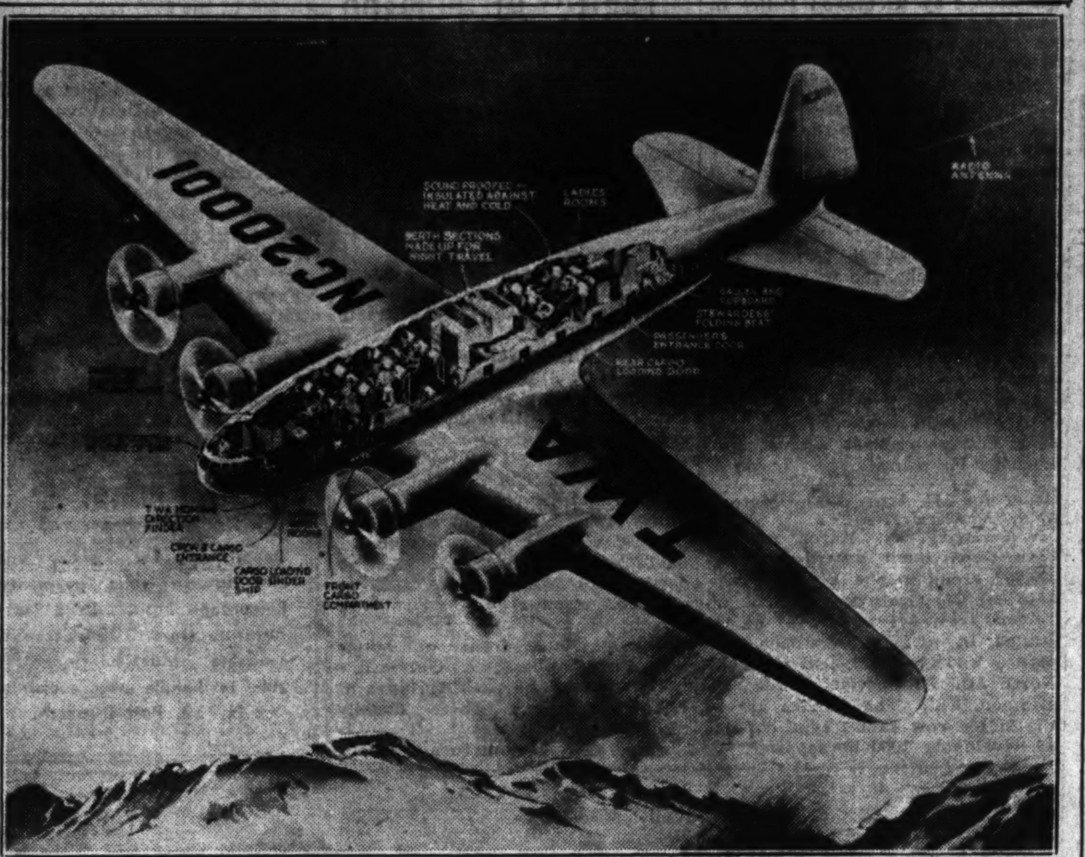
"All three factories of the Nash Motors division are operating at capacity," Bliss said.

"Despite speeding up production, shipments have kept pace. As the spring selling season starts, we already have delivered more cars to dealers than were delivered from Oct. 1, 1935, to Sept. 30, 1936."

Willys Production Up by 30 Per Cent

With February production 30 per cent over January's, production of new Willys cars since the current models started off the assembly line on Nov. 30 reached 19,207 on Feb. 27, David R. Wilson, president of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., said yesterday.

Planned as Largest Passenger Plane in U. S.



Scale drawing of a four-engined airplane, under construction for Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., in the Seattle plant of the Boeing Aircraft Co. It is designed to be the largest passenger plane to go into service in this country. Six of these ships will be built at a cost of $2,043,000 for TWA, which has an option of 17 more of the same type.

The passenger cabins of the new planes are structurally designed and built for supercharging. When cabin pressure equipment is added, TWA expects to fly the new planes at 20,000-foot levels. At the higher cruising levels, the new ships will fly at 250 miles per hour.

The transports will have berths for 18 and seats for eight when flown on night schedules and 32 seats when operated as day planes. In addition, cargo space for 3750 pounds is provided. In the drawing one of the berth sections is shown made up for night flying.

Cords Made of Rayon Used in U. S. Tires for High Speed, Heavy Work

A new U. S. Royal tire which features the use of Rayon cords has been developed by United States Rubber Products, Inc., for high-speed, heavy-load truck and bus service.

The new carcass material is said to retain more of its strength than cotton at the temperatures of high-speed, heavy-load tire operation and so to add measurably to tire life.

More than 100,000,000 test miles were run in developing the rayon cord tire.

Dr. Sidney M. Cadwell, director of U. S. tire development, says: "The part rayon will play in influencing future tire performance should not be under-estimated."

Service Plaque Award to Each of 682 of Studebaker's Dealers

In recognition of loyal business association, 682 Studebaker dealers throughout the country will soon receive awards in the form of bronze plaques designating their periods of dealership in excess of five years.

"Two hundred and eighty-one of these dealers have been associated with the Studebaker Corporation for 15 years or longer," Louis K. Manley said. "Fifty have represented Studebaker for 25 years or more. Sixty-one are in the 20-year group, 176 in the 15-year group, 146 in the 10-year group, and 255 in the 5-year group."

At Regional and Zone Meeting

Pontiac Car Plant Production Capacity 400,000 Autos Yearly

W. L. Murray Tells Local Zone Meeting Output Possibility Is 30 Per Cent Greater.

V. L. Murray, assistant general sales manager in charge of the West for Pontiac Motors, spoke at a meeting here Friday of the zone organization staff headed by W. P. Winslow, zone manager. The meeting was one of a series being held by Pontiac sales executives in 22 cities to start a campaign for increased business the balance of 1937 and in 1938.

"Pontiac sales are larger than ever before," Murray said. "Every month since the 1937 car announcement last fall has shown an increase in sales. The first two months this year were 50 per cent ahead of the same months last year. And dealers have sold more cars than they have been able to get.

"These continual increases in sales are right in line with the trend of the times. But I am sure that even such increases do not begin to represent maximum possibilities for the sale of Pontiac cars in this country.

"We are able to produce more cars than at any time in our history, and a considerable increase over previous months since the 1937 announcement.

"Our modern plant was built to handle an output of about 400,000 cars annually. All that is required to obtain that production is the necessary tooling up of the machine shops, foundry, sheet metal plants and assembly lines.

"Accordingly, after the acceptance Pontiac experienced the first three months of the current car model year, advantage was taken of the period when no cars were assembled, due to a shortage of materials during the strike, to make changes in our plans and assembly lines. The immediate result is a productive output 30 per cent greater than it was before. This will mean months when production should exceed 30,000 cars.

Visitors to Ford Rotunda Million in First 8 Months

All Records for Inspections of Main Rouge Plant Broken During 1936.

Nearly one million persons visited the Ford Rotunda in the eight months since the building was opened to the public, the Ford Motor Co. announces.

First opened for visitors on May 14, 1936, the building was inspected by 944,513 persons up to Feb. 8 of this year. From the opening date to January, 1937, the attendance was 900,976.

At the same time, the company announced that the number of visitors to the Rouge plant in 1936 broke all records. The total number of persons who went through the plant last year is 132,507. The previous record was set in 1929 when 121,811 visitors were received.

Guests from foreign countries also toured the Rouge plant in record numbers in 1936. Virtually every country in the world was represented among the 4147 persons who came to see the Ford operations.

For the Rotunda, the largest attendance for any single month was in August when there were 193,786 visitors. The biggest single day attendance was on Nov. 15 when 30,064 persons inspected a display of new 1937 Ford V-8s. Memorial day, 1936, had the second largest single day's attendance—28,202; and on Sept. 7 an attendance of 25,885 was recorded. Crowds in excess of 20,000 were entertained on several occasions.

The largest number to go through the plant in any month of 1936 came in August, when there were 33,832 visitors in the 27 days the plant was open for tours. The largest single day's crowd on Nov. 7 when 6600 Ford dealers from all parts of the United States and Canada came here to see the new 1937 Ford V-8 cars and go through the plant.

"WHAT! NO GEAR SHIFT LEVER?"

No! Not in a Hudson or Terraplane with Selective Automatic Shift! And there's never any need to push a clutch pedal when shifting, either!

Instead, you flick a finger up at the steering wheel ; ; ; lift a toe from the accelerator ; ; ; and gears shift themselves! Nothing new to learn ; ; ; the same familiar gear positions are there. The difference is that the car now does all the work for you, while you still control every shift.

And right along with all this marvelous new driving ease, there is the added advantage of a clear front floor. No hand shift lever there ; ; ; and no brake lever! More foot room! The parking brake is up at the instrument panel and it's a new type brake ; ; ; releasing at a finger touch.

Is this interesting? It's only the beginning of all that makes Hudson and Terraplane No. 1 CARS of their price classes! Come in and drive this new way ; ; ; discover just what is means to drive a No. 1 CAR!

TEMPORARY WRIT AGAINST CITY ISSUED TO TAXICAB CONCERN

Enforcement of Regulation Ordinance Against Central Co., Held Up.

A temporary restraining order was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood, prohibiting the city from enforcing a taxicab regulation ordinance against the Central Cab Co., Inc., a Negro concern. The ordinance originally was passed in December, 1934, and was recently amended. The restraining order was issued on petition of the cab company, which alleged that the ordinance and amendment were illegal and unconstitutional.

It is averred that the measure discriminates against the petitioner and similar concerns in that it enforces regulations which are not applicable to owners of other automobiles. Principal objection, it is set forth, is that it requires the plaintiff to carry liability insurance and also to submit to an inspection of taxicabs.

The company owns 17 cabs and was in business until Friday when, it was stated by its attorney, police began arresting drivers on charges the company was violating the ordinance. The restraining order was made returnable before Judge Kirkwood, March 18. A similar injunction, filed by another taxicab company, is pending before Judge John W. Joynt, in which the original ordinance was attacked as unconstitutional.

RETALIATION FOR ST. LOUIS SMOKE ORDINANCE PLANNED

$50 License on Out-of-Town Food Trades to Be Recommended to Council.

The ordinance committee of the Belleville City Council, following a hearing yesterday, announced it would recommend that the Council establish a $50 license fee for out-of-town trucks delivering food in Belleville.

The Council will meet March 15 to vote on the proposal, which was made in retaliation against passage of the St. Louis smoke ordinance. The smoke ordinance, opponents said, will force small mines to close because of their inability to purchase coal-washing equipment.

C. R. Judge, representing the St. Louis Bakers' Club at the hearing, said his clients were willing to pay a license fee of $20 a year but not $50. Members of the ordinance committee replied that in St. Louis bakers paid a much larger license fee and that their trucks paid bridge tolls averaging $93 a year. Mayor George Remnsnider of Belleville said he was determined to collect the license and warned St. Louis bakers in the audience that the law, if passed, would be strictly enforced.

Court Issue at Sandwich Forum.

Maurice P. Phillips, an attorney, will speak on "Why Pack the Supreme Court Instead of Amending the Constitution?" Thursday noon at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. before the Sandwich Forum.

MICKEY OWENS DEFEAT PEPPER MARTINS, 8-0; WINFORD SHINES

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 6.—The Mickey Owens defeated the Pepper Martins, 8 to 0, this afternoon as Frankie Frisch's Cardinals engaged in their first competitive baseball of the spring training season, going through seven innings before a crowd of 2500 persons who passed through a free gate. Ragged fielding by the Martins, who made six errors and only four hits, helped Owen's team to make the victory one-sided.

Manager Frisch played second base for the winning team for four innings and expressed himself as well pleased with the progress shown by his men during the competition. However, he did much complaining during the afternoon about persons who didn't hustle, persons who, as he described it, apparently are satisfied to be humpty dumpties all their lives. Despite the Frisch complaints, it seemed that the Redbird athletes were having a grand time with their baseball and were very much interested in winning if possible.

Winford Allows No Hits.

Mike Ryba, Jim Winford and Nate Andrews were the pitchers for the victorious Owens and Winford, the knuckle ball expert, was the outstanding pitcher of the day. There wasn't a hit off his delivery and during his three innings on the hill not a runner reached first base. Ryba gave two hits in the first three innings and the Martins made two safeties in the seventh with Andrews hurling.

Si Johnson, Ira Smith and Morton Cooper pitched for the vanquished Martins and their support was very ragged. Jimmy Brown, undoubtedly over-eager, booted two grounders and Johnny Mize, Leo Durocher, Don Gutteridge and Paul Chervinko made the other misplays.

The lineups gave no indication of what the regular lineup will be, Frisch's idea being to give the athletes the exercise that can be had only under competitive baseball conditions.

"They thought they were in shape after five days of training, but they won't be able to get up out of a chair this evening," Frisch said happily after the game. "We'll have another game tomorrow, between the Medwicks and the Durochers, and the squad will be in shape for real competition by the time we get around to meeting the Giants next Saturday and Sunday."

Once a Dodger?

Stanley Bordagaray, the fleet-footed outfielder from Brooklyn, was the leading hitter of the afternoon with a double and two singles, but he showed the old Brooklyn complex when he was caught off second base in the first inning, just before Frisch hit a single that would have driven in a run, had it

HEMSLEY SIGNS AND DEPARTS WITH BROWNS' SQUAD OF 20

By W. J. McGoogan.

Rollie Hemsley, catcher, signed his contract and departed with the first contingent of the Browns for the San Antonio training camp yesterday afternoon. Terms were not disclosed.

Hemsley, however, did not appear to be particularly happy over the situation. He was not in the great good humor which frequently characterizes a ball player, his contract signed for the season, when he departs for a training camp in the south.

Rollie sulked. He refused to pose in a group picture, kept to himself and got on the train by himself.

When it was suggested that perhaps Hemsley was "mad" about the contract he had just signed, Bill De Witt, general manager of the club, was surprised.

"Mad?" queried Bill with uplifted eyebrows, "he signed his contract, didn't he? And he's here, isn't he? With his trunk all packed for San Antonio."

The Browns' new deal really got under way when the train pulled out of Union Station for the club's camp where, under the direction of manager Rogers Hornsby, the players will be trained for the coming American League pennant race.

Thus the talk of buying and sell-

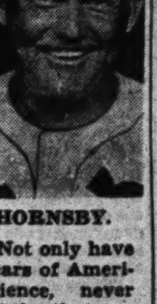
Our New Brownies.

OUR new Brownies, and their new owners, but with their old hard-driving manager Rogers Hornsby as the spearhead, will launch a big offensive at San Antonio, Tex., with a pennant as the ultimate goal. None connected with the club expects to attain the objective in one season.

That would be too much to expect even of a much better equipped squad than the Browns can boast. Any pennant talk would be met with loud cachination—and yet twice in history, major league clubs that were picked to finish last have won pennants — the Braves of 1914 and the Phillies of 1915.



HORNSBY.

Looking back over the Browns' history, we find that getting out of second division would be an objective quite difficult enough to look forward to. Not only have the Browns, in 35 years of American League experience, never won a pennant, but in that period the team has finished in first division only eight times, and has averaged something worse than fifth position.

For the seventh place Browns of 1936 to aspire to anything higher than fifth place in 1937 would therefore crack your sore lip wide open.

Team Has Some Strength.

HOWEVER, don't get the idea that the Browns are without strength. The outfield is good enough for any American League outfit; the infield with Harland Clift continuing his improvement and Knickerbocker regaining his best form would hold its own afield and at bat. The team has a fine catching staff.

If the Browns had the Detroit or Yankee pitching staff, the league might find our Brownies a tough nut to crack.

But, oh those pitchers!

There's the weak spot of the Brownie defense. The staff is made up of 13 nondescripts, with an average age of 30 plus, including the "youngsters" (the most youthful is 24).

However, perhaps we should

6-Day Bike Race Starts at Auditorium Before Crowd of 4376

By Robert Morrison.

Ten teams started the grind in the six-day bike races which got under way at the Auditorium last night. The famous German duo, Gustave Kilian and Heinz Vopel, seeking their fourteenth victory in 16 races during this year and last, headed the entry list.

After 25 minutes of spinning around the oval, the crowd, announced at 4376, was treated to the first spill during a jam which saw Winter and Vopel go skidding into the inner rail. After treatment of their injuries, which were not too serious, both were back in the race.

First Sprints.

The first scheduled series of sprints brought the Kilian-Vopel team the most points. They took three firsts in the 10 dashes for 34 points. Nearest rival in the mad pedaling was the Irish team, Sheehan and O'Brien.

Kilian impressed the crowd more than any other rider. He showed unusual power in the final sprint drives that brought cheers from the spectators.

After almost two hours of sprinting to nowhere Kilian and Vopel shared the lap advantage with three other entries in the race.

Charley Winter and Fred Ottevaere, Jack Sheehan and Henry O'Brien, and Henri LePage and Albert Zaton were even with the Germans in laps.

St. Louis amateur races preceded the start of the six-day event. Most serious of spills suffered by the youngsters was that of Richard Reichardt, who hit the lowguard rail on the side and shot over the edge to land on the concrete six feet below. He was unhurt, it was reported, except for a punctured knee.

Andrew Biondo of Century Road Club won the first event, a one-mile dash. Ken Connor of St. Louis Cycling Club was second; Walter Funke, St. Louis, third, and Ernie Sallens, St. Louis, fourth.

A 20-minute team race was taken by Ray Rowald and Herman Gruenewald of St. Louis Cycling Club in 10½ minutes. Velmo Chapplus and Bart Cecil were second, and Dick Suever and Gene Gotsch of Century third in the four team race.

Notes

Winter, who spent his time all this last week supervising the construction of the track, forgot one thing—a score board. It will be set up by tomorrow.

It was something of a thrill to see the famous iron-man of other days, Reggie McNamara, pacing the boys for the start of the event. Reggie will spend the rest of the week as clerk of the course.

Most serious of the spills in the amateur races was suffered by Richard Reichardt, who went over the low side rail and landed on the concrete six feet below. A lacerated knee was the extent of his injury.

BELGIANS RALLY TO WIN 6-DAY NEW YORK RACE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.

IN one of the hottest finishes ever seen in Madison Square Garden, the Belgian team of Jean Aerts and Omer Debruycker won New York's sixty-second international six-day bicycle race tonight by coming from behind in the last hour of sprinting for a point-victory.

Fifteen thousand fans turned out in the big sports arena to see the Belgians overtake the team of Emile Ignat and Emile Diot with a series of sprint wins to pile up 1091 points to the 977 for the second place French riders.

Five of the seven teams surviving to the final hour jamming were deadlocked on a mileage basis, each with 2370 miles, 7 laps for the race, but the Belgian and French teams made it a race between themselves through the last hour.

Bobby Thomas of Kenosha, Wis., and Tino Reboli, Newark, N. J., finished in third place with 854 points.

The mutuels paid: Columbiana $14.20, $5.40, $4.30; Finance, $3.40, $2.90; Dellor, $8.20.

It was a very rough race in which half of the field was knocked completely out of all contention. Columbiana was lucky to escape the crowding. She was rated along for six furlongs, began to move up in last half mile and, closing with a good burst of speed in last furlong, caught Finance in stretch and won going away. Finance had plenty of speed and got clear of interference early, was sent to the front, displayed good speed, but weakened suddenly. Dellor ran a remarkable race. He was well up all the way and gave way only in the final sixteenth. Count Arthur was forced very wide around turn and finished out in the middle of the track. Azucar broke slow and suffered early interference, worked his way up and finished with a rush on the inside. Whopper was crowded just after the start but recovered, ran into a contending position, but stopped badly at end of a mile. Mucho Gusto had plenty of speed for seven furlongs. Two Bob got clear sailing on inside all the way. Just at the start Bow And Arrow swerved to inside, crowding Maeriel, Whopper, Azucar, and going past the stand, White Cockade was almost knocked down and boy pulled him up. Maeriel had no chance.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 6.—Columbiana, a dainty flapper bearing the silken finery of young Buddy Hirsch of New York, showed her big rough boy friends the way home today with a dazzling burst of finishing speed that won the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup race.

Beautifully piloted by Hubert Le Blanc, leading apprentice rider of the rich Hialeah racing season, the little filly escaped roughing and burned up the stretch in record-equalling time to win the richest race in Florida's history.

Columbiana's margin of victory was two full lengths over Mrs. Emil Denemark's highly favored Finance, which beat J. W. Parrish's field horse, Dellor, by a length and a half for place. Fourth came Count Arthur with the sold "sugar" horse, Azucar, fifth.

Columbiana's time for the mile and a quarter was 2:01 4-5, which equalled the Hialeah track record set in the first running of the Widener Cup last year by Campagna. Third among the favorites she paid $14.20 to win, $5.40 to place and $4.30 for show. The victory was worth $52,000 net to young Hirsch.

Half the Field Bumped.

No horse was rated more perfectly than Columbiana during her winning trip over a lightning fast track. Alert at the start and during terrific jamming over the first furlong, Le Branc held his mount off her usually terrific early foot and escaped any damage. Half the field of 16 were victimized by the crush.

As the field swept past the stands, jammed with a yelping, record crowd of 25,000 Finance sprinted away from interference and took the lead with Mucho Gusto, Dellor and Whopper behind him in that order. Columbiana rushed into sixth position and Le Blanc kept her there until the wide stretch loomed ahead.

It looked as if it was all over just before the stretch was reached. Finance, favored at 1.85 to 1, appeared to be running easily with Charley Kurtsinger, rated as the shrewdest jockey at Hialeah, on his back. But the tide switched as rapidly as Columbiana's flying hoofs.

Dellor challenged the fast stepping leader and was whipped. Mucho Gusto then tried to get past but couldn't. Whopper, badly victimized by early crowding, then made his move. He, too, failed.

Then came the final furlong—and Columbiana. Running like the wind the little filly responded to Le Blanc's tardy urging and just flew. At the last furlong she drew even with the slightly faltering Finance and it was all over. She won going away with the cheery Le Blanc hugging her and easing up as the band struck up "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean."

Columbiana, under a feathery impost of 103 pounds as against 115 for Fihance, won her fourth straight race in the Widener and made the early birds who clock 'em in the wee hours feel important. In her final trial she worked the mile and a quarter cup distance in the sensational time of 2:02.

Dellor, a 27 to 1 field horse, ran a remarkable race considering his past performance. Up all the way, he was whipped only in the final drive. Count Arthur was the hard luck horse of the race. He was forced wide all the way and had to come home in the middle of the track, even then finishing fast to get fourth.

In the other feature of the closing card, Bigey, owned by Townsend Martin, New York sportsman, won the $2500 juvenile championship over Catalysis, the favorite, in a driving finish.

New Records Set For Wagering at Two Race Tracks

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 6.—New records for attendance and wagering were established today at Hialeah Park, with a pari-mutuel turnover of $730,333 and turnstile count of 20,468.

The eight-race final program, featured by the $50,000 Widener Cup, brought total play for the 46-day meeting to $19,131,003 for a daily average of $415,891, in Hialeah's most successful season since 1925.

SANTA ANITA, Cal., March 6.—A new mark for a season's betting handle was registered as the 53-day meeting came to a close here today. The total handle was unofficially placed at $29,509,489 following today's eight-race handle of $1,322,673.

Last year, in 58 days of racing, $25,251,933 went through the pari-mutuel machines. Average betting this year was better than $533,000 a day, and the State's tax cut of 4 per cent on wagering will amount to more than $1,200,000, exclusive of other levies.

GIANTS GET ONLY 4 HITS AND LOSE TO CUBANS, 4-0

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, March 6.—The New York Giants received their best pitching of the training camp season today, but suffered their first shutout as the Almendares team landed on Hal Schumacher in the third inning for all their runs in a 4 to 0 victory.

Schumacher, Cliff Melton and Clyde Castleman allowed the Cubans only three hits through the game. Schumacher was wild in the third and the Almendares took advantage of the breaks for all their scoring.

Rodolf Fernandez stopped the National League champions with four hits, and was never in trouble.

Athletics Win, 8-2.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 6.—Catcher Frank Hayes clouted three home runs to lead the 16-hit bombardment which manufactured a one-sided 8-2 victory for the Philadelphia Athletics over the Necaxa club today. It was the third straight win for the Macks in the Mexican exhibition series. Hayes' trio of round-trippers gives him four in two days. Manager Mack used 17 players during the game.

SAN ROMANI AGAIN BEATS CUNNINGHAM IN MILE RACE

PEACOCK IS SECOND TO BOBBY GRIEVE AT 40 YARDS

Earl Meadows and Japanese Tie in the Pole Vault as 8000 Watch Chicago Relays.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6. — Little Archie San Romani of the Emporia (Kan.) State Teachers' College, raced to a brilliant and unexpected triumph over Glenn Cunningham, king of American milers, tonight in the Bankers' Mile, feature event of the Chicago Relays, before a capacity crowd of 8000 in the international amphitheater.

The tiny Kansan being hailed as the heir apparent to Cunningham's mantle, covered the route in four minutes, 21 seconds, good time for the new, undeveloped track which was cut up by spikes in earlier events, and conquered husky Glenn by a good two yards.

San Romani, winner of the national A. A. U. 1500 meters indoor title last week, raced in third place through the first three laps, just behind Cunningham, as Blaine Rideout of the famous Texas twin combination, dashed out to set the pace. Rideout raced into a 20-yard margin over the older and more famous of the two Kansans, but faded as Cunningham, San Romani, and Gene Venzke of the New York A. C. made their first move together.

Little Archie let out a notch near the end of the fifth lap of the 11-lap journey to take the lead from Cunningham, and setting the pace from there until the bell-lap, held on to the finish.

Grieve Beats Peacock.

Bobbie Grieve, stubby University of Illinois sprinter, conquered Eulace Peacock, Negro star from Temple University in the 40-yard dash, opening event of the sprint series.

Grieve, away fast, lasted to stave off Peacock's closing rush and win by about a foot in 4.6 seconds. Witt Cox of the University of Oklahoma, was third, a foot back of Peacock.

Sam Allen, the hurdling stylist from Oklahoma Baptist University, had to hustle to nip Richard Brunton of the University of Illinois, in the 50-yard high hurdles. Allen, slow off his mark, barely had time and distance enough to overhaul Brunton and win in 6.4 seconds. Jack Robinson, another Illinois representative, was third, with Bob Shurilla of Milwaukee fourth and shut out of the points.

Charlie Beetham, Ohio State University's long-striding speedster, ran a clever race to whip Jimmy Herbert, Negro star from the New York Curb Exchange, by five yards in the special 600-yard feature, in the ordinary time of one minute, 17.1 seconds, almost six seconds slower than the indoor mark of 1:11.3 set by Charles Hornbostel of Indiana in 1935.

Permitted by the rest of the field to run for the fun of it after he had been disqualified for two false starts in the 50-yard dash, Grieve trimmed Peacock by two feet, but the Temple Negro, the first official starter to finish, was the winner and squared the sprint series. The time was 5.4 seconds. Bob Collier of Indiana, was second, with Floyd Hoffman of Michigan State Normal, third.

Earle Meadows, Southern California's Olympic and 1937 indoor National A. A. U. titleholder, and slender Sueo Oye of Japan, battled to a draw at 14 feet, 3 inches, in the feature pole vault. Each cleared the height on his first effort with something to spare, but each failed to come close to negotiating the indoor world record height of 14 feet, five inches, in three trials. Al Haller of the University of Wisconsin, was third at 14 feet.

The height did, however, better the listed record of 13 feet, 7¾ inches for vaulting off a dirt runway, established by Tommy Warne of Northwestern in 1929.

Abe Rosenkranz, stocky middle distance star from Michigan Normal, had just about enough left to keep Beetham from making it a "double" for the evening, in the 1000 yards run. Rosenkranz jumped into the lead at the start and led all the way, with Beetham staging a brilliant finish to come from fourth place and make up all but a yard and a half in a race run in 2 minutes, 21 seconds, good for the slow track.

TEXAS-BOUND: New Members of Browns and Old Ones

Here are some 1937 additions to the Browns, some holdovers from 1936 and a few extras who were in the party of 20 or more that departed from Union Station late yesterday afternoon for San Antonio, Tex., where the squad will begin training tomorrow. Front row, left to right: Milton Byrnes and Ethan Allen, outfielders; Harold Snyder, John O'Berg and Jim Columbo, catchers; Doc White, trainer. Back row: Al Thomas, Glenn Liebhardt, Fred (Sheriff) Blake, pitchers; Joe Vosmik, outfielder; Oral Hildebrand and Bill Trotter, pitchers. Byrnes, Snyder, O'Berg, Columbo and Trotter will be with farm clubs.

TRAINING CAMP NOTES

Cubs Depart for Catalina Camp Today—Dressen Pleased With Showing of His Pitching Recruits—Steve Mesner to Get Thorough Trial at Third Base by White Sox.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6. — Manager Charlie Grimm and 16 of his Chicago Cubs, together with coaches, club officials and newspapermen, will leave tomorrow night for spring training camp at Catalina Island, Cal.

The Bruins will arrive at camp in time for a workout Wednesday afternoon, expected to be largely for the benefit of photographers. Catcher Hal Sueme, pitchers Wes Flowers and infielder Linus Frey will board the Cub special at Kansas City. Already in California are Tex Carleton and Bill Lee.

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., March 6.—Manager Charley Dressen of the Cincinnati Reds surveyed results of three days' training today and declared the team to be the "best the club has had in more than 10 years."

"Our force of pitchers," he said, "is one that would cause any major league pilot to become enthused. The new acquisitions are so good that one or two hurlers who worked last year will have to hustle to hold their jobs."

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., March 6. — Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox said today that he would give rookies every chance to show their ability when the club opened its exhibition game schedule. Steve Mesner, 19-year-old third baseman from the Pacific Coast League, was expected to be used regularly in an effort to show whether he would be able to relieve Dykes regularly this summer at third base.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 6.—With the exception of pitcher Buck Newsom, the Washington baseball squad was all present or accounted for tonight.

Arrivals today were Harry Kelley, the big right hander from Albany, and Jesse Hill, outfielder. Ben Chapman and Johnny Stone, outfielders, were expected tonight. Newsom is still a hold-out.

Manager Bucky Harris let the athletes off easy today because of the heat and cancelled the infield workout.

By the Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 6.—The Detroit Tigers hunt for pitching talent will begin officially tomorrow morning with the first workout of pitchers and catchers. Fifteen hurlers, recruits and veterans, will get a chance to show their stuff to Manager Mickey Cochrane, who admitted tonight that "if we are going to give those Yankees, Indians and White Sox any kind of a battle, we've got to get some pitching strength."

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 6.—Manager Steve O'Neill, of the Cleveland Indians, said today he would encourage Roy Weatherly, hard-hitting diminutive outfielder, to work out in the infield. Weatherly played both second third base positions before graduating to the majors. O'Neill said he needs a reliable hitter as a reserve infielder. The manager added, however, that Weatherly at present is slated for right field as his No. 1 position.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 6.—The first casualty turned up in the New York Yankees' spring training camp today. Don Heffner, reserve infielder, reported an infected toe from wearing a tight shoe in practice.

Lefty Gomez, who never was one of the "fat boys" in camp, is on a diet—but definitely. He says the few pounds he's picked up in the last two seasons have cut down his speed.

WRAY'S COLUMN

not bear down too heavily on age, for the pitchers of the squad with the best 1936 records are all over 30. Al Thomas, a kid of 36, won 11 and lost 9 to lead the Brownie squad. Elon Hogsett won 13 and lost 16 although he is 33. Koupal (33) won 23 and lost 11 for Seattle last season.

Besides these veterans, the Browns' pitching roster presents Fred Blake (37), last season with Baltimore; Earl Caldwell (31), who won 7 and lost 16 for the Brownies last season, and Russell Van Atta (31), who pitched only one complete game during the campaign.

In addition there are Oral Hildebrand (29), acquired from Cleveland, who should be valuable to the club; Jack Knott (29), who is due either to go up or give up; Leslie Tietje (25), who was beginning to show something when put out by illness last season; James Walkup (25), the most stylish appearing but an unsuccessful member of the squad for two part-seasons; Sigmund Jakucki (24), who comes from the Galveston club, and Glen Liebhardt (25) and Harry Kimberlin (27), pitchers who have shown nothing at all as yet.

Not an imposing array of talent. And yet, if a couple of the better hurlers should click and turn in 20 victories each, the entire outlook of the club would be changed. At this writing Koupal, Hogsett, Hildebrand and Al Thomas appear the strongest "hopes"; but it requires a keen imagination to foresee 20 victories for any one of these.

There is no doubt that the destiny of the Browns hangs on this staff. Any success achieved by Hornsby will have to come largely from an improved pitching display, over that of last year.

Outfield Hitting.

HELP for the pitchers may come from some of the new members of the team—Vosmik and Knickerbocker, for example. They should add to the hitting power of the club materially. In fact, the team will carry considerable power, especially if Bottomley's legs permit him to play regularly at first.

Knickerbocker, a couple of years ago, hit considerably above .300. Vosmik's normal batting stride is around .340. If Beau Bell comes back with another .341 season, the outfield really will be formidable. West is a normal .300 hitter and Allen is always close to that mark.

Clift, always a solid hitter, showed improvement both in the field and at bat, the latter part of the 1936 season. With Bottomley driving in his customary 100 runs or more and Knickerbocker, Vosmik, Bell and Clift turning in their best, enemy pitchers will have no soft foe in these Brownie hitters.

More runs behind the pitchers will give them a better opportunity to turn in victories. Hornsby reasonably may expect improvement from this source.

As for the catching, Rollie Hemsley had a slump last year; but as he is still young there is no reason to believe it is permanent. Should he start on another of his hard-hitting seasons, the Browns' attack would be right there with the best in either league.

Time to Get Going.

THE catching is not all up to Hemsley, for Angelo Giuliani is a pretty good backstop. He's not in Hemsley's class at hitting, when the play boy receiver is at his best. Tommy Heath also is back.

Hemsley could do the team a world of good if he would remain strictly on the job for the entire season. Some of the playboys of the 1936 squad have been traded and harmony should prevail, instead of the discord which marred last season's efficiency at times.

But all the harmony and punch the team may show will not suffice to carry the team far unless the pitching stands up. Too bad the return of the lively ball was postponed a year. It might have been just what it takes to put our Brownie heavers over.

New Regime Makes Progress

DON BARNES, Bill DeWitt and their associates in the new Browns' ownership have made famous progress in improving the club's setup, especially as to its farm connections.

Already affiliations with several important minor league clubs have been effected, with the object of getting new talent. They have interested the public in the club and the team will get off on the right foot as to the attitude of the fans.

Too bad the night baseball flivvered this year. That might have proved a financial salvation for the owners, who need money for the buildup. Sale of stock put $100,000 in the treasury for working funds, but night baseball would have added that much more, if the experience of Cincinnati is a criterion.

Rebuilding Process Slow.

THE Browns, at any rate, with lots of hope and energy and with the new stockholding group willing to work and willing to spend, start with just as good prospects as Phil Ball had when he took over the club from Robert Lee Hedges, its original owner.

Ball's team had finished sixth the year before. It improved one position in 1916 but fell back to seventh the following year. It took four years to get the team functioning properly, and it was not until six years later that the Browns reached the point of finishing second, one game behind the leading Yanks.

It took Connie Mack seven years to get out of the cellar, after he broke up his team in 1915—and so, let's not expect too much of the new Browns the first year. It takes time to build and, sometimes, even longer to rebuild.

HEMSLEY SIGNS AND DEPARTS WITH BROWNS

ing the club, the sale of stock, the hiring of scouts and the extension of the farm system will soon give way to the news of real importance to the St. Louis fans—what kind of a team will the Browns have this season?

That question is expected to be answered, at least in part, by the time the club returns home for the usual two pre-season games with the Cardinals at Sportsman's Park.

There were more than 20 persons in the party leaving here, including six players, Pitchers Oral Hildebrand, Glen Liebhardt, Alphonse Thomas and Fred Blake and Outfielders Joe Vosmik and Ethan Allen.

Vosmik Arrives.

Vosmik arrived here from his home in Cleveland yesterday and Hildebrand came in from Indianapolis.

Also there were traveling secretary George Irwin and publicity director Gerald Holland, trainer George White and Billy Hornsby, son of the manager.

Several players belonging to the San Antonio team were in the squad which will be joined en route by Hornsby, Coach Charley O'Leary, Pitcher Jim Walkup and Infielder Gerard Lipscomb.

Scouts Ray Cahill and Pat Monahan will be on hand tomorrow when practice is scheduled to open, while Willis Butler and Jack Fournier, Everett Hornsby and Charley Stis, other scouts of the club, will take a hand in the training.

Coleman on Way.

Ed Coleman, outfielder, sent a message to De Witt that his contract was signed and was on the way to the office. He is expected in San Antonio from his Oregon home in a day or two.

The remainder of the players, with the exception of the three remaining holdouts, Beau Bell, Harlond Clift and Lou Koupal, are to be in camp by next Monday and perhaps by that time their sitdown strike will have ended.

The first practice game is scheduled to be played against Minneapolis at New Braunfels, Tex., a town some 25 or 30 miles from San Antonio, on March 20. But the first game with a major league club is scheduled for April 2 when the Athletics, on their way home from Mexico City, will be played in San Antonio. Meanwhile the Browns will have met several other minor league teams including San Antonio, Kansas City, Toledo, Tulsa and the University of Texas nine.

When the Browns break camp they will be accompanied home by the Chicago Cubs and the two teams will play eight successive contests at cities on the way north.

The games with the Cardinals prior to the opening of the American League race are set for April 17 and 18.

Headquarters for the Browns in San Antonio will be at The Gunter Hotel.

Donald Barnes, president, and De Witt are expected to depart for the camp sometime within the next week.

Baseball Record Book.

The Record Book for 1937, a pocket-size handbook of baseball, published annually by The Sporting News, has appeared on newsstands. Containing new features in addition to batting and pitching averages, schedules, major league rosters and list of minor league pennant winners, it is bigger than previous issues. The price is 15 cents.

MINNESOTA AND ILLINOIS WIN, FINISH IN TIE FOR THE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Minnesota won a half-share of the 1936-37 Big Ten basketball championship tonight, coming from behind to defeat Chicago 33 to 23 in the final game of the season for both teams.

The victory gave the Gophers a season's record of 10 victories and two defeats, the same as compiled by Illinois, victorious tonight over Northwestern.

Chicago, in taking its twelfth defeat in as many starts this year, made things interesting for the Minnesotans in the first half and at the intermission point held a 14 to 13 edge. Seconds after the second period opened, however, the Gopher offense began to click, and baskets by Kundla, Addington, Manly and Seebach gave Minnesota a commanding lead which it easily held to the final gun.

Kundla, the speedy Gopher forward, was high point man of the contest with four baskets and three free throws. For Chicago, Mullins and Rossin scored eight points apiece.

Illinois Hard Pressed.

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., March 6.—Illinois defeated Northwestern, 32 to 26, to tie Minnesota for the Big Ten title before a crowd of 6000 tonight.

The Illini set the pace and held the lead throughout to give Coach Doug Mills a conference winner in his first year and to avenge the defeat handed them by the Purple at Champaign early in the season.

Northwestern fought a stubborn uphill fight and launched rally after rally only to have Illinois turn on the speed and pull away.

Illinois whizzed to a 11 to 1 lead in the first five minutes, with Bob Riegel and Wib Henry leading the scoring. Jean Smith dribbled in to give Northwestern its first basket and to start a rally by the Wildcats which left them four points behind at 16-12.

Michigan Defeats Wisconsin.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 6.—University of Michigan's basketball team closed its most successful season since 1929 tonight with a 41 to 27 victory over Wisconsin in a rough and tumble game.

The triumph gave the Wolverines a season record of nine victories and three defeats. Wisconsin's record was nine defeats against three victories.

DRAKE WINS VALLEY INDOOR TRACK MEET

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, March 6.—With Capt. Ray Mahannah establishing a new conference record of 4:23.8 in the mile, Drake University won the Missouri Valley indoor track championship here tonight with 44 points.

The Oklahoma Aggies counted 27 points for second place, nipping Washington University by half a point. Grinnell pulled into fourth place with 23 points. Far back were Washburn 5, St. Louis University 3 and Tulsa 2½.

The summaries:

A Confident Cardinal.

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA. March 6.

ARNOLD "MICKEY" OWEN is well on his way to being the first string catcher of the Cardinals and he's not at all surprised about it. He announced months ago that his ambition was to be the spark-plug and No. 1 receiver of the Gas House Gang and methodically and not too quietly he is going about the business of gaining his objective.

Mickey will get along, and when he arrives he'll be one of the most popular young men in St. Louis uniform. He has ability, confidence and color. Without being offensive about it, he knows that he is good, and he doesn't think it's necessary to hide his light under a false bushel of modesty.

SMACK
ZAPP
SAY- WHICH ONE OF YOUSE GUYS IS PITCHING?

While Mickey was in St. Louis, pottering around the Cardinal office in the role of clerical worker, he wandered into Sam Breadon's office for a bit of a chat. That's the kind of a fellow he is—never too busy to drop in and do a spot of fanning with even the club president. If you remember, Mickey broke in with the Cardinal organization at Houston, but the manager of the Houston club, one Ira Smith, a pitcher, was not properly impressed by the green rookie and informed the Cardinal headquarters that Houston didn't need Mickey Owen. So Charley Barrett bundled Mickey into his automobile and took him to Springfield, where he started his quick drive to a place on the St. Louis roster.

Be Ready, Mr. Smith.

"I SEE, Mr. Breadon," Mickey said during his fanning bee with Sam, "that you're bringing up Ira Smith to the Cardinal team this year."

"Yes, Arnold," Breadon replied. "He pitched some great ball for Houston. He's smart. He knows what it's all about and I think he'll be a big help to the Cardinals. He ought to be a great relief pitcher."

Mickey's eyes sparkled. He grinned with anticipatory delight.

"Wait till he gets on that hill, Mr. Breadon," Mickey gloated. "I'll be catching him and won't I make his hands red!"

Mickey hasn't forgotten that Ira Smith fired him at Houston, and when he catches him, and gets a chance to throw that ball back at him—"Won't I make HIS hands red!"

Milton Johnson, St. Louis branch manager for an automobile company, was in his office one day when Mickey blew in, to see if something could be done to his car so he could get more speed out of it. He had never been able to "get 'er up to 100." Mickey had a new catcher's glove with him. He was breaking it in, pounding it with his fist, to fix the pocket. Johnson noticed the glove, of course, and after Joe Schultz had taken care of the introductions, Mickey handed the glove to Johnson.

"Put it on," he suggested. "I think you'll get a kick out of wearing that glove. That's the glove, Mr. Johnson, that's going to catch for the Cardinals in the world series of 1937."

"It didn't strike me that Owen was bragging, either," Johnson explained later. "He says things in such a quiet, modest way that you have to analyze the words to realize that he's talking in a big way."

Almost a Collegian.

YOU'VE heard the story perhaps, about Owen's ambition to go to college. He told Branch Rickey about it and Branch, always a subscriber to the finer things in life, told Mickey to go ahead and pick his college, matriculate and instruct the registrar to forward all bills to Rickey and all expenses would be defrayed.

Mickey selected the University of Southern California, but the thing didn't work out. He told the registrar that he wanted to take up public speaking and gymnasium, but woe was Mickey. They didn't have any course like that at Southern California, and as Mickey had his heart set on that particular university and that particular course, he decided to skip it all.

Mickey won't have to take a college course in public speaking, however. He talks freely and confidently. He dotes on luncheon clubs, if they'll let him talk, and he does a good job, for a green recruit, a young man who won't be 20 years old until April 4.

Owen has a powerful throwing arm, is agile and unusually fast for a catcher and his batting average of .336, with Columbus last year, indicates that he can hit. And if he's half the catcher that scouts say he is, he won't have to hit major league pitchers that hard, to be the first string receiver for the 1937 Cardinals.

not been for the slumbering baserunning.

Bordagaray, Rizzo and Scoffic formed the outfield on the winning team, with Siebert, Frisch, Marion and Mueller in the infield. Owen and Louis Dubois divided the catching job.

For the Martins, Pepper, Padgett and Medwick were the outfielders, with Mize, Brown, Durocher and Gutteridge in the first line of defense. In the late innings the managers sent in replacements in large numbers and all the infield and outfield candidates had chances to show their stuff.

Frisch is much impressed with the fielding of young Marion and has been trying to improve his hitting. The boy has been batting pigeon-toed and Frisch tried to change his stance to one like Rogers Hornsby uses. Marion is a splendid fielder and he showed quick improvement in his batting after Frisch's coaching.

Emmett Mueller Shows Punch.

Young Emmett Mueller, the St. Louisan, played a good game at third base and showed a good punch to right field. He also turned several fine plays in the field.

Of course, at this stage of the training period, the batting doesn't mean much, except to show the individual's driving power. The pitchers are not putting much on the ball and the batting drills and the games will tell more after the hurlers begin to throw hooks.

In tomorrow's game, Frisch plans to use six more pitchers. They probably will be Bill McGee, Lon Warneke, Bob Weiland, Johnny Chambers, Herbert Moore and Paul Dean, if Paul wants to test his arm.

ST. LOUIS U. HIGH BEATS C. B. C. IN DISTRICT FINAL, 18 TO 14

COUNTRY DAY WINS B TITLE BY DEFEATING FERGUSON, 27-19

Crowd of 2500 Sees Junior Billikens Play Well and Qualify for State Basketball Tournament.

By Reno Hahn.

St. Louis University High School's basketball team, playing one of its best games of the season, defeated Christian Brothers' High, 18-14, and won the championship of the district basketball tournament in the "A" division last night at Washington University Field House before a crowd of 2500. The junior Billikens qualified for the State meet by their victory.

The game was far more one-sided than the score indicated, the junior Billikens holding a 12-3 advantage at the half, and 18-8 after three-quarters.

In the "B" division final Country Day School won from Ferguson, 27-19, and earned the right to play C. B. C. for the other place allotted this district for the State meet. That game will be played next Friday at the Field House.

Start Slowly.

The junior Billikens started slowly against the Brothers. Roger Traynor sank a long shot from center to open the scoring and then Charles McCarthy sank a set-up to tie the score, 2-2, the only time after the start of the game that the Brothers were on even terms.

Dick Logger sank a one-hand shot to break the tie and Joe Nouss added a free throw to nullify one by Jim Droege.

The junior Billikens stopped the Brothers without a point in the second period while tallying another six on baskets by Nouss and Tony Wagner and two free throws by R. Traynor.

The Brothers, with Bob Casey scoring four points, pulled up to 18-8 after three quarters.

The junior Billikens attempted very little scoring in the final period and didn't make a point, but they held their Preparatory League rivals to four points. So well did they guard, and stall, that in the last four minutes the Brothers, ready to shoot at the slightest opening, had only three shots and made good just one of them.

The first quarter of the Country Day-Ferguson game was a hectic affair with the lead changing six times. Dave Schlichting kept Ferguson in the running with his three field goals, the last giving his team an 8-7 lead as the first period ended.

Whitelaw tied the score with a free throw and then Galt sank two baskets and a free throw in short order to give his team a 13-8 lead and an advantage it never lost.

Rally Falls Short.

Ferguson came within a point of tying the score in the closing minutes of the half when Paul Dean tapped in a rebound and Vogelsang and Parker made good on free throws to bring the count to 15-14, Country Day leading.

Galt shot two field goals and Wehmer put in a setup for Ferguson for the only points of the third period. Baskets by Lee Shapleigh, Galt and Laurence Russe while Ferguson made only a free throw gave Country Day a 25-17 lead with only three minutes to play.

UNTIRING: His Hobby for 50 Years

George E. Tivey, charter member of the St. Louis Cycling Club, which will observe its fiftieth anniversary Thursday, is shown at work in his Easton avenue shop on a bicycle—his hobby for half a century.

Days of the High Wheel Bikes Of 50 Years Ago Recalled by Organizer of St. Louis Club

By Harold Tuthill.

Whenever an athletic organization boasts that it has been in existence 50 years, look for a man who has been responsible for that record. And so, in stating that the St. Louis Cycling Club will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary with a dinner next Thursday night, it is necessary to tell the story of George E. Tivey.

Tivey is old in the point of years (he's 74), but if you talk to him at his place of business, his general good health, his clear memory and his vigorous voice belie his age. When he started talking about the old high-wheelers, he turned time backward and became young again.

Fifty years ago saw the disintegration of the Ramblers, the first bicycle club ever organized in St. Louis, according to Tivey, who belonged to that group. He, along with other young fellows, fretted that they no longer had a club and so one day Tivey rounded up the old gang, obtained a few recruits and formed the present St. Louis Cycling Club. The meeting, held in the old Lindell Hotel at Sixth and Washington, resulted in the election of George H. Lucas as president, R. N. Hazzard, treasurer, and E. L. Mockler, secretary.

Three Others Still Alive.

Besides Tivey, others in the group who are still alive were Emil Rotty, Herman G. Wolzendorf and A. G. (Bert) Harding. With the exception of Harding, who is a citrus grower in California, these charter members will be at the banquet. So it was that Tivey was chiefly responsible for the birth of the St. Louis Cycling Club.

Bicycle riding at that time was not as easy as it is today. The few roads were impassable in wet weather and at times the mud was so bad that the wheels would sink so deeply that the bike would stand upright. The rider was forced to pry the wheels loose and return home.

Tivey rode one of the first high wheelers ever sold in St. Louis, and it cost him $125. If you recall the high wheelers, you will remember that the pedals were connected to the big front wheel by cranks and locomotion was produced without the use of a chain. The rear frame, called the backbone, joined the smaller back wheel and the handlebars together. On top, from 48 to 64 inches from the ground, was the saddle. That height was conducive to hard falls when something happened to interrupt the ride.

"What was most troublesome," Tivey recalled, "was to be riding along and have a cow put out to pasture tighten her lead rope lying in the road just as you were passing. When you were tripped up that way, you could bet that you would have a good fall.

It Was a Risky Business.

"Sometimes the backbone would break and when that occurred the rider would have to dive over the handlebars in order to escape injury. When an accident took place, the rider would pack his wheel over his shoulder and get back to town as best he might—usually in a farmer's wagon. If the backbone were just bent everybody in the group would stand on it to straighten it out."

It was just 50 years ago, too, that Tivey made his longest trip. He pedaled from here to St. Paul, Minn., averaging between 60 and 70 miles a day on the 720-mile grind. It took him about 12 days. In 1888, he barely missed winning the international 100-mile road race at Buffalo.

"I finished fourth, but I felt I should have won the race," the grizzled veteran related. "On the road I lost 34 minutes when a rock got jammed in my back wheel. I pedaled as fast as I could after that and just at the outskirts of Buffalo caught sight of the pack. I was just about to catch them when I had to stop to let a freight train pass. At that, I was only 11 minutes behind the winner, and of the 27 starters, I was the only one able to stand on his feet at the finish.

Promoter Took the Money.

"I was not so terribly sorry that I did not win, because there were no prizes nor money. The promoter took the money and beat it out of town."

Most of the trips in the early days were to nearby towns, within a 100-mile radius. Hotel accommodations were few, and as Tivey put it, "if you got away from houses, haystacks were pretty good stuff for sleeping." Meals could be obtained at houses which made provisions for transients. The cost varied between 25 and 35 cents. When the dinner bell rang, the bicycle riders would pile into the huge dining room and be supplied with food from big-bellied pots and countless bowls. Coffee was made by the gallons. Very little, though, was left after the riders had dined.

For the most part runs were made to the county lines and today markers are evidence of the spots visited by the riders. A run to De Soto and return was among the longest trips. St. Charles, Belleville and O'Fallon were other places frequently visited. On the longer trips, the riders would start out at 6 or 7 o'clock in the morning and return at nightfall.

Still Rides Every Sunday.

In the early 90's the present two-wheelers were brought to St. Louis. They were called at the time, "safeties," because they were presumed to be less hazardous than the high wheelers. Tivey bought one of the "safeties" as soon as he was able and has owned a bike ever since. How many has he possessed? Well, he hasn't figured that out, because he has worn out so many and had almost as many stolen that he has lost track of the number.

He got lots of mileage out of the high wheelers with their hard rubber tires. For eight years, he averaged more than 5000 miles on them. Does he still ride? Every Sunday, except when the weather is bad. He loves bicycle riding so much that when the depression came along in 1929 and he was thrown out of work he made a vocation of his hobby by opening a bicycle repair shop.

Tivey will be only one of 100 or more members at the banquet at Van Horns, but he and the other charter members will be in a class by themselves. It was their idea that makes the dinner possible and do you think Tivey would miss it? He hasn't in the last 50 years—and that's a long time.

RUGBY TEAMS PLAY IN DOUBLEHEADER TODAY

An opening doubleheader will be played today by two teams of the Missouri Rugby Football Union on the Drill Grounds in Forest Park. The first game, between the Central A. C. and the Ramblers will start at 2:30 p. m. and will be followed an hour later by a battle between the Eighty-Niners and the County Y. M. C. A.

According to the schedule recently arranged, two games will be played each Sunday until the second week in May.

FLYERS MEET TULSA CLUB AT ARENA TONIGHT

Just trying to keep their hands in until time for the championship playoff games to begin, the Flyers tackle the Tulsa Oilers in their penultimate home game of the regular season tonight at the Arena.

Some of the first place team members are not at best including Joe Matte, whose cut foot was not helped when he played against the New York Rangers Tuesday, probably will miss the contest but he may dress and sit on the bench. Bobby Burns and Frank Ingram have colds but likely will be able to take part in the game.

Tulsa still has a chance to land a playoff berth and the Oilers are not taking the game lightly.

Tuesday and Friday the Flyers are scheduled to play in Minneapolis then return home to close the regular season against Wichita next Sunday night. After which come the playoffs.

The Flyers are resplendent now in new red silk windbreakers, a gift of the club and also are richer by a sum said to be $40 each, for their game against the Rangers.

A strange thing about the standing of the American Hockey Association is that the Flyers are the only team in the league to have won more games than they have lost. The Flyers have won 30, lost 11, tied three while the second place team, St. Paul, has 19 victories, 23 defeats and three ties.

Tie games have kept Tulsa down in the standing as the Oilers have 16, lost 17 and tied 7 contests.

Oscar Hansen picked up five points in scoring during the week and now leads the league with 56 points, 15 more than Dahlstrom of St. Paul. Bobby Burns is third with 40 points in his credit.

H. G. ROETTGER NAMED BUSINESS MANAGER OF CARDS' SHELBY FARM

Harold G. Roettger, 4248 Marcus avenue, has been named business manager of the Shelby N. C., baseball club of the North Carolina State league, according to an announcement yesterday from the St. Louis Cardinal offices.

Roettger, who joined the Cardinal organization last year and was business manager of the Albany (Ga.) club of the Georgia-Florida league, will depart this morning for his new post.

Shelby is the latest addition to the Cardinal farm system and the North Carolina State league, a Class D circuit, in a new league this year.

Roettger is a graduate of the University of Illinois and is the younger brother of Wallie and Oscar Roettger, both well known baseball players.

Town Criers Are Underdogs In Soccer Semifinal With Unbeaten Shamrock Club

By Dent McSkimming.

One has to be willing to give a lot of weight to the psychological aspects of an athletic contest to grant the Town Crier soccer team an even chance to avoid defeat in today's match with the undefeated Shamrocks, at the north field, Public School Stadium scheduled to start at 2:45 p. m.

When the teams are weighed, player for player, and when the records of the clubs are examined there is no escaping the conclusion that the Shamrocks are a three or four goals better outfit, but this happens to be one contest in which those somewhat intangible qualities called fighting spirit, team spirit and the will to win must be given a lot of consideration.

It's largely because the Town Crier players refuse to recognize the Shamrocks as their superiors that they are expected to extend this great team which has won 19 straight games this season. John Marre, organizer and owner of the Criers, has proved in his long career as a manager of soccer teams that he is an astute judge of players and a first-class football student. But, above that, he has always been successful in instilling in his players a spirit of self-confidence. Marre's teams have always been hard to beat when the stakes are high. Today's match is one of the national championship series; the winner will represent St. Louis in the Western division final, opposing Sparta of Chicago. That's just the situation that should bring out the best that's in a Marre-coached team.

There was far too much roughness that bordered on viciousness in last Sunday's cup match in which these same Town Criers defeated the Burkes. Today's game should be clean by comparison.

If the Burkes had beaten the Criers, they, in turn, would play a more scientific game against the Shamrocks.

Although they have been consistently successful against clubs which rank as good or better than their opponents of today, the Shamrocks have not had to contend very often with an exceptional center forward. The really good ones, including Buff Donelli and Jimmy McDermott, caused no end of trouble. Donelli's team, in two games, scored four goals; McDermott's team, in two games, also scored four goals—and McDermott scored all of them. Simmerman's style resembles that of the Cleveland star and if he is well supplied with the ball he might overcome some of the Shamrocks' overwhelming superiority in other phases of the game.

Hilker and Murphy, the Criers' wing men, may also go well but it is doubtful if the inside forwards, Tracy and Moore, will be able to stand up under the pressure that will be forced upon them. It has thus far required lots of hard work on the part of three halfbacks and two inside forwards to suppress the Shamrock forward line in which three men, Gonsalves, Nilsen and Roe, between them, have scored 56 goals, or approximately one goal apiece for 19 straight games.

Dave Evans of Detroit, one of the west's leading soccer officials, will handle the match.

Municipal Soccer Teams to Open Play-Offs Today

Four clubs which survived the long campaign of the regular Municipal Soccer League season and won their respective group championships, will meet this afternoon at Fairground Park in the first round of the play-offs. Three of the title contenders are senior clubs: Schumachers of Carondelet Park, St. Edwards of Sherman Park, and Stags of Fairground Park; and the fourth is an Intermediate Division champion, the Andy Fredericks.

The play-offs this season will be conducted on the double-knockout plan, each team remaining in the competition until it has suffered two defeats. The winners of today's games will meet next Sunday, and today's losers will face each other. On the third Sunday the clubs that have won one and lost one game will meet each other, the winner to oppose the club which has won both games. The series, therefore, will be concluded on the fourth Sunday, which will be March 28.

The first game of today's doubleheader, between the Stags and Fredericks, will start at 1 p. m. Referees are Prudencio Garcia and Danny Barnard, assisted by goal Linesmen Jim Begley and Bill Walsh. The second game, between St. Edwards and Schumachers, will start at 3 o'clock, with Referees Dick Wall and Walter Giesler and Goal Linesmen Justin Keeney and Lonnie Robbins officiating.

McBride Midgets, Sherman Juniors Win at Soccer

Joe "Red" Hederman's McBride High Midget soccer team out-played St. Matthew's yesterday afternoon at Fairgrounds Park but was defeated, 2-0, in the first game of the two-out-of-three play-off series for the Community Center championship. The Sherman Boy's Club eleven won, 2-1, from the Shamrock's A. C. squad, which is also sponsored by St. Matthew's, in the first game of the round-robin junior series.

McBride forced eight corner kicks to its opponents' three, had only six goal kicks to 16 for St. Matthew's, and Greene, the Colonnader goalie, had no stops to seven for Harold Vogt.

Fred Worden scored the first goal at the 15-minute mark in the second half, while the second came unexpectedly five minutes later. Bob "Red" Tucker took a pass from 10-year-old Jackie Dalton, St. Matthew's forward, forced his way past the enemy fullback to draw the goalie out, and then sank the marker.

The Sherman club had the better of the going all the way with Leonard Dempsey and Vince Brengle scoring at the eight and 15-minute marks respectively. Both were follow-ups on long arching crosses from Jack Conley in the right corner with a mass of players preventing the goalie from reaching the ball. Ray Rickart scored the Shamrock counter after five minutes of second-period play from a scrimmage in front of the Sherman goal.

Parker and Mme. Henrotin Win Indoor Tennis Titles

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Frank Parker of Spring Lake, N. J., America's No. 2 player, won the United States indoor tennis championship by defeating Frank J. Bowden of New York, 6—4, 6—4, 1—6, 4—6, 6—1, on the Seventh Regiment Armory court today. It was the first time during the tournament Parker was extended beyond straight sets.

The women's national singles title went to a foreigner for the first time since 1910 when Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of Lyons, France, went to three sets defeating Millicent Hirsh, of New York, 10—8, 1—6, 6—2.

Bowden caused a mild surprise when he gained the final bracket by defeating Walter Senior, of San Francisco, yesterday. When Parker, playing steadily, had annexed the first two sets Bowden was not expected to give any trouble.

The New York player, a product of the public park courts and former Columbia University captain, got his game under control in the third set, however, and holding Parker to just 11 points ran through it with little opposition.

Miss Hirsh, who had gained the final by staying on the baseline and outwitting the top-ranked Norma Taubele, played the same type of game against Mme. Henrotin. The French woman played poorly at the net, but her soft placements were too much for her younger opponent.

Although she held a 5—2 lead in the first set, Miss Hirsh was unable to hold her advantage. The New York girl had been successful sending low, soft shots to the French woman and playing straight down the line to her backhand. She increased the speed of the ball in an attempt to force points, but Mme. Henrotin found the faster shot easier to return.

During the second set Mme. Henrotin, playing in at the net, attempted to pick up shots from below her knees. Invariably she netted the ball and Miss Hirsh had little trouble running out the set. Playing back again in the final set, Mme. Henrotin outvolleyed her opponent to win.

Mme. Henrotin and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York City, successfully defended their national doubles title when they defeated Norma Taubele, of New York, and Florence Leboutillier of Westbury, N. Y., 6—4, 7—5.

In her first appearance before an audience in New York City in over two years, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody teamed with J. Gilbert Hall of Orange, N. J., and defeated Gregory Mangin of New York City, and Helen Pederson of Stamford, Conn., 6—3, 6—3, in an exhibition doubles match played between the finals of the women's and men's national doubles championship.

Shaw-Stephens Girls to Meet Illinois Team

Injuries have hit the Shaw-Stephens American Legion girls' basketball team hard for its game today with the Springfield, Ill., club at the Maplewood Senior High gymnasium, and it is possible that the Shaws will take the court minus two of their mainstays, Mary Ducker and Mary Rudis.

Two men's games are on the same program. The first, between the 138th Infantry five and Jefferson Barracks, will start at 1:45 p. m. The second, between the Bill Binigs and Hi-Pointe Cleaners, will follow the girls' battle.

Zeltmans Play Indians.

The Zeltmans, first half champions in the University City Municipal Soccer League, meet the Wahoo Indians in the second and feature match of today's play at Heman Park. The O. J. Webers play the Stuarts in the opener at 2 o'clock.

E. ST. LOUIS, COLLINSVILLE WIN TOURNEYS

East St. Louis and Collinsville won regional tournaments last night in the Illinois State High School basketball eliminations. East St. Louis defeated Dupo, 34 to 26, in the Belleville final and Collinsville defeated the host school at Wood River, 37 to 15.

Winners and runners-up will be eligible to compete in the 16 sectional tournaments.

Edwardsville finished third in the Wood River event, defeating Alton, 32 to 20, in the consolation final.

Collinsville, led by Ed Evers, who accumulated 16 points, one more than the entire Wood River team put together, jumped into a 19 to 3 lead at half time and was never in danger.

Joe Wondolowski, with 13, and Berkley Halstead with 12 points, paced East St. Louis' attack, while Jake Loless, with 17 points, was high for Dupo.

United Service, Royal Hearts in Title Game Today

The Royal Hearts and the United Service teams play the third and deciding game of their series for the Ozark A. A. U. basketball tournament championship this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Sherman Park gymnasium.

The Service team won the opening contest, 43-42 in an overtime contest with Ken "Spike" Wilson doing most of the scoring, including all five of his team's points in the overtime session. In the second contest, the Hearts stopped Wilson while their own attack continued to function in high and won, 43-29.

Last year, the Service team won the Ozark title from the Hearts, who had won the Municipal championship from the Service five.

The Hearts probably will start Cochran and Serb at forward, Ackmann at center, and Flanigan and Leahy at guard, while the Service team lineup is uncertain, with Martintoni, Mattis, Wynne and Covington ready for the forward positions, Toberman at center, and Wilson and either Gorman or Mueller at the guards.

SEABISCUIT SETS TRACK RECORD IN WINNING $10,000 RACE

GRAND MANITOU, A LONG SHOT, PAYS $35 FOR PLACE MONEY

Winner's Time Is 1:48 4-5, Lowering Old Mark by Three-Fifths of a Second —45,000 at Closing Day

By the Associated Press.

SANTA ANITA PARK, Cal., March 6.—The sensational Seabiscuit won the $10,000 added San Juan Capistrano handicap today as Santa Anita Park closed the most successful race meeting in the history of the West.

Forty-five thousand turf fans turned out to play a final million dollar melody on the betting machines, planking down nearly a quarter of a million on the feature event that found C. S. Howard's Seabiscuit romping in to win by seven lengths.

Grand Manitou, the bay colt Raoul Walsh of motion picture fame brought over from France, upset the dope in finishing second and the double entry of Major Austin C. Taylor, Special Agent and Indian Broom, ran third and fourth in that order.

Seabiscuit's overwhelming triumph was achieved in track record time of one minute, 48 4-5 seconds, lowering the mark of one minute 49 and 2-5 seconds set two years ago by Time Supply for the mile and one furlong journey.

Jockey Johnny Pollard, who rode Seabiscuit in last week's $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and lost by a bare whisker to Rosemont, piloted his mount in masterly fashion today.

WILLS AND HACKER TO PLAY IN METROPOLITAN BILLIARD FEATURE

Harold Wills, pacesetter in the Metropolitan Three-Cushion Billiard Championships, will strive to chalk down his sixth straight victory when meeting Louis A. Hacker Friday night in this week's feature match. Hacker will also be called upon to meet one of the tourney's titled favorites, Gene Deardorff, Wednesday night.

In the other matches Ossie Barron takes on William Mack tomorrow night, while Mack plays again Tuesday night against the fancy-shot champion, Mike Seimers. The "dark horse" of the Metropolitan event, Elmer Farrar, a star of two decades ago, takes on Frank Benson Thursday night.

The Metropolitan tourney standings:

Player.	W.	L.	HR.	Pts.	Op.Pts.
Wills	5	0	6	250	355
Deardorff	4	0	7	200	240

Softball Tryouts for Girls.

Girl softball players wishing a tryout with a team playing at South Side Park, call PRospect 5273 after 6 o'clock any evening.

ALTHOUGH the opening of the trout season saw some very cloudy water in our Ozark streams, it seems, creel limits were obtained in a great many instances. Many fishermen visiting Missouri state parks caught nice rainbows. Especially was the luck good at Bennett Springs and Roaring River, with the same reports as usual filtering up from Montauk. . . . . "The fish were hard to get, but when one was hooked. . . what a thrill."

This week-end should find even better results the rule. Waters are rapidly clearing up and the weather better for the angler. Another thing! Your three neighbors won't always be getting their leaders wrapped around your line. As per normal on opening day, thousands of fly and bait casters swarmed upon every bank of the State streams and swished their lures over and under those of others and literally rubbed elbows with their next door acquaintances.

Experts throughout the State are expecting one of the best fishing years in some time. The streams have been well stocked and much work has been done in constructing dams and spillways necessary to give the fish good protection as well as to keep the water in good condition.

There have been several requests for formulas used in making doughballs. Likewise, there are several formulas.

On of the most common is to make up the dough and then mix in cotton until you have a stringy, fibery substance that will cling together well and stay on the hook for quite some time. Some fishermen use sweet potatoes as a means of holding the dough. In this case, boil the sweet potatoes to a point where they are most fibery, then mix with corn meal. A third way is a simple addition to the first and that is to mix dough, cotton and cheese. Cheese attracts many kinds of fish, especially river cat, and although it can not be used satisfactorily as a base itself, when put with cotton and dough, is very effective, according to reports. For trout or any other species making its home in swift moving waters, the cotton formula is very widely used, while the still water fishing needs nothing quite so plastic.

A Lesson in Hatching.

Wisconsin has been doing some fine work with fish conservation and artificial propagation of nesting fishes. Up to the present, fish culturists were agreed that it was impossible to take eggs from nesting species to be hatched by hatchery methods. Wisconsin has now proved the feasibility of artificial propagation by hatching 90 per cent of the eggs taken from nesting fish.

In the past, propagation of these species has been stimulated only by provision of adequate nesting areas in protected ponds, the method being to provide the fish with natural conditions as nearly ideal as possible under which they might make their nests and hatch their eggs. But even under ideal conditions, the percentage of hatch was small compared to hatchery production. According to B. O. Webster, superintendent of the Wisconsin Fisheries Division, this development may have an important bearing upon experiments to propagate large and small-mouth bass by hatchery methods.

L. F. Tatum, acting director of the Sportsmen's Show which will open soon at the Municipal Auditorium, St. Louis, announced that the CCC exhibit of State-owned lands is being placed in the Exhibition Hall and will consist of an area 16x120 feet, devoted to a detailed scaled study of Meramec Park in Franklin County. Indian Trail Park in Dent County and Deer Run Park in Reynolds County. Trees, shrubs and natural growth are being transplanted to the concrete floor of the auditorium for week's exhibition. CCC enrollees will be on duty at all times to answer questions the spectators might ask in regard to their work.

Echoes of Wildlife Meet.

One of the most interesting addresses delivered during the recent National Wildlife Conference at St. Louis was a review of work done by the Bureau of Biological Survey during the past year as summed up by Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson. During the 1936 conference held in Washington at the request of President Roosevelt, a seven-point objective was set up to serve as a goal toward which conservationists might work. These seven objectives could be stated as follows:

1. Land for the restoration and use of wildlife.
2. Closer co-operation between Federal and state administrative agencies on an educational and refuge program.
3. Closer co-ordination of Federal activities that may effect wildlife interests adversely or otherwise.
4. Recognition of wildlife values by land management agencies, both public and private.
5. Action concerning stream pollution.
6. An adequate research program.
7. Protective regulations based on the needs of wildlife.

Dr. Gabrielson feels as though the first objective is definitely being reached with the large game and wild fowl refuges being set up at all points throughout the country. One of those believed to be most important is the Swan Lake, Missouri migratory bird refuge which was acquired under the $6,000,000 appropriation of the Migratory Bird Conservation Act. This refuge will be developed by CCC boys and will be ready soon to take its place as one of the best in the country.

At the present, under No. 7, Dr. Gabrielson states that each of the four main flyways from north to south, over which migratory birds travel, is supervised by a research member of the bureau who will act as a source of information on conditions in his area. St. Louis and Eastern Missouri-Western Illinois are in the very heart of the Mississippi Valley flyway.

The address ended with remarks praising the people of Missouri for their attitude and aggressiveness in the passage of the recent Fourth Amendment, which took the Fish and Game Department from the control of politics. "It is expected that within the next decade Missouri will be one of the few leading states in conservation and game control," said Dr. Gabrielson.

The Wildlife Conference was a very successful convention. Men interested in conservation and all its particular fields attended for an exchange of ideas and plans. Both Canada and Mexico had very capable representatives who expressed a willingness to co-operate fully with the United States authorities in any plan which would be beneficial to all concerned.

It was strongly suggested by James W. Stuber of Columbus, O., one of the leading law enforcement agents of the country, that each state set up a school for the training of its law enforcing groups. Pennsylvania has done this with excellent results, eight months of intensive training in the school making the officers far superior to the average agents. Not only are these men trained in police methods, but also in conservation.

Of all the exhibits which were on display at Hotel Jefferson, the one which was probably most scrutinized was that of Miss Lorene Squire of Harper, Kan., which featured a number of photographs of wild fowl. Each picture spoke aloud of the care and patience necessary to get it. Copies were sought by sportsmen desiring an all-time reminder of the convention as well as something truly decorative.

Fred Perry Began Tennis Career After Watching Game Through Knothole

By Davison Obear.

Fred Perry, British tennis star, who will appear here with Ellsworth Vines, tall Californian next Friday night, began his rise to the top of the world's amateur tennis ladder only 13 years ago. He first became interested in the game at the age of 15 years, and 10 years later won the Wimbledon singles title, the unofficial world's championship.

Fate took a hand in Perry's rise to tennis fame. In the summer of 1924 Perry fell off a swing rope and suffered a bad injury to his knee. After being laid up with his knee in splints for two months, his parents took him to Eastport, near London.

Finally able to go about alone, young Perry took a walk one afternoon and observed some boys peeking through a fence. He also took a look and saw some men knocking balls back and forth across a net. For the first time in his life, Perry became aware that there was such a game as tennis, although his home was not so many miles away from the famous Wimbledon courts.

Kingsley Caught His Eye.

By a strange coincidence the person who caught his eye as he looked through the knothole was a player who was to be his teammate on the first Davis Cup combination to which Perry was named. It was Charles Kingsley, who seven years later found Perry with him on the team. Bunny Austin and Pat Hughes were the other members of the English team which captured the Davis Cup.

Without money and without guidance from coaches or players of experience, Perry became a world's champion almost entirely through his own efforts and perseverance. He was a self-made player who became sold on the game from the time he first caught sight of it through the knothole at Eastport.

In 1927 Perry won his first event, a junior tournament at Northwood. He formulated his own type of game after watching players like Kingsley. His game improved so much that he qualified for Wimbledon in 1929, where he reached the third round, losing to John Oliff.

In January, 1930, Perry's mother died and it was such a shock that fear was felt for his health. Doctors told him he must give up his job and keep outdoors as much as possible. He then devoted his entire time to tennis and that year reached the final of the British hard court championship, where he lost to Bunny Austin in five sets.

Made Cup Team in 1931.

In the Wimbledon champoinship that followed he defeated Baron de Morpurgo of Italy, and that victory definitely marked his arrival as one of England's leading hopefuls. He was selected as a member of a team to go to the United States and South America, and won the championship at Buenos Aires. In the spring of 1931 Perry took part in the trials for the Davis Cup team and was selected.

Thus did Perry, seven years after he had first seen a game of tennis, earn a place among the leading players of his country. Within two years more he was defeating Cochet to deprive France of the Davis Cup, and 10 years later he became the first Briton to win the championship of his country in a quarter of a century.

The feature of the pro matches at the Arena next Friday night will be the singles between Perry and Vines. George Lott will meet Bruce Barnes in the preliminary, while the program will be concluded with a doubles match between the four stars.

BUDWEISERS TO ROLL HERMANNS IN LEAGUE PLAY

The Budweisers, city bowling champions, who will oppose the Heil Products, Milwaukee, in an 18-game match for the national team championship, beginning next Saturday at the Del-Mar alleys, will engage their arch rivals, the Hermanns, national team record holder with 3797 for three games, in a Classic League match Wednesday night at the Del-Mar drives.

The match will serve as a work-out for the Budweisers and will be rolled on alleys Nos. 15 and 16. In previous meetings the teams have battled nip and tuck with the Hermanns holding an edge over the Buds.

In 12 games bowled this season in the Classic Wednesday League, the Hermanns have outrolled the Buds, averaging 1137 pins per game to 1112 and have won three of four series from them, scoring their world record count in gaining a clean sweep in their last previous meeting, Jan. 27. The Buds rolled their best score that same night, 3457.

Although the Hermanns are the best team in the Wednesday League, they are behind in the Sunday Traveling League, which bowls at eight different bowling establishments in the city. The Traveling League does not roll its entire series on one pair of alleys but change drives after each game, giving the bowler less chance to find the spot for a strike hit. The Buds have showed they can hold a 1000 average on "strange" alleys by hitting the pins for an average of 1003 in the Traveling circuit while the Hermanns own a 994 mark. Despite the difference in averages, the Hermanns have won two or three matches from the Buds in that league.

PICK UP—

Holmes Opposes Cohen.

The Sunday Classic Bowling League will be seen in action tonight at the Baden Recreation with the new first-place Silver Seal team meeting the Club Plantations. The Budweisers and Hermanns, who are tied for second place, are paired against the Say-It-With Flowers and Witeks, respectively.

In a feature added attraction, Ray Holmes, of the Hermanns, and Ben Cohen, Silver Seal veteran, will renew their old rivalry in a three-game individual match. In two previous matches over longer routes, Cohen has scored victories over the Hermann ace.

HIGH SCHOOL SWIM MEET WON BY ROOSEVELT

Roosevelt High School captured the fifth annual Public High School swimming meet last night at Wilson Pool, Washington University, scoring 40 points to beat out Soldan by five markers.

Beaumont, the defending champion finished third with 29, Cleveland was fourth with 18, McKinley fifth with 16, Blewett sixth with 8 and Central last with seven.

William Brand of Soldan broke the only individual record of the meet, shattering the previous mark set by his brother, Rudy, in 1933 by three and one-half seconds. Brand traversed the distance in 1 minute and 11.5 seconds. The Roosevelt 150-yard medley relay team of Flachmann, Beare and Hoyer broke the meet record in that event by 2.2 seconds.

Calvin Gray of Roosevelt with victories in the 50 and 100-yard free style races was the high scorer of the meet with 12 points.

50-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by C. Gray, Roosevelt; Levitt, Soldan, second; Jacobs, Central, third; Fabick, McKinley, fourth; Heckert, Beaumont, fifth. Time, 26.2s.

100-YARD BREAST STROKE—Won by Brand, Soldan; Lingemann, Beaumont, second; Stieglitz, Cleveland, third; Roselman, Soldan, fourth; Nolte, Central, fifth. Time, 1:11.5. (New record, breaks old mark set by Rudy Brand, Soldan, 1933, 1:15s.)

220-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Chouteau; F. Armstrong, Soldan, second; Bauer, Cleveland, third; W. Armstrong, Soldan, fourth; Jacobs, Central, fifth. Time, 2:36.5s.

100-YARD BACK STROKE — Won by Flachman, Roosevelt; Fields, Beaumont, second; Irving, Beaumont, third; Broeder, Cleveland, fourth; Wichman, Central, fifth. Time, 1:08.8s.

100-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by C. Gray, Roosevelt; F. Gray, Roosevelt, second; Pring, McKinley, third; Skinner, Beaumont, fourth; Edwards, Central, fifth. Time 58:8s.

FANCY DIVING—Won by Connell, Blewett; Roman, Soldan, second; Baker, Soldan, third; Schaefer, Roosevelt, fourth; Simmons, McKinley, fifth.

150-YARD MEDLEY RELAY—Won by Roosevelt (Flachman, Beare, Hoyer); Beaumont, second; Cleveland, third; McKinley, fourth; Soldan, fifth. Time 1:34.8. (New record, breaks old mark held by Soldan, 1936, 1:36s.)

200-YARD SPRINT RELAY—Won by Soldan (F. Armstrong, Brand, Levitt, Sandler); Beaumont, second; McKinley, third; Cleveland, fourth; Blewett, fifth. Time, 1:49.2s.

PRINCETON SWIMMER BETTERS U. S. RECORD

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—Albert Vande Weghe, of the Princeton University freshmen swimming team, bettered the national intercollegiate 150-yard backstroke record today as his team lost to the University of Pennsylvania freshmen, 36 to 39.

Weghe covered the distance in 1:36.4 against the listed mark of 1:36.9 held by Danny Zehr, of Northwestern University.

QUICK RESALE OF APARTMENT NETS OPERATOR PROFIT

Structure at Kingsbury Boulevard and Kingsland Avenue Sold by J. W. Warrell.

By Berry Moore.

The three-story apartment building at the northeast corner of Kingsbury boulevard and Kingsland avenue, University City, has been acquired by Dr. W. E. Sheets through the Dubinsky Realty Co., of which Frank Dubinsky is president. The purchase price was not disclosed.

The building comprises 30 apartments of four and five rooms, equipped with electrical refrigerators and other modern devices. Tile baths are an attractive feature. Gross annual rentals aggregate $18,500, according to the agency. The site has a frontage of 100 feet on Kingsbury and of 200 feet on Kingsland.

The seller was John W. Warrell, an operator, who had acquired the property in December at the instance of Frank Dubinsky from the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, represented by Franciscus-Maginn, Inc., for a reported price of $135,000. The resale, it was stated, was at a sheer advance in price, but this could not be verified.

Taken Under Loan.

The building had been taken under a loan made in the pre-depression era by the Prudential Co., which had reconditioned it at a large outlay in anticipation of a demand for buildings of this type on the part of investors coincident with the recovery in rentals. Dr. Sheets acquired the property as an investment.

Negotiations are being conducted through the Dubinsky Co. for other apartment building., including several on a large scale, the prospective purchasers being both speculators and investors, it is understood.

The three-story apartment building at the southwest corner of Leland and Clemens avenues, University City, was recently purchased from the Prudential Co. by an undisclosed client of the Associated Real Estate Brokers, for a reported price of $47,000. This building contains 12 four-room apartments equipped on a modern scale. It had also been acquired through a loan by the Prudential Co.

Incidentally, the Prudential Co. has disposed of between 20 and 25 buildings within the last year at prices approximating $540,000. They included both apartments and flats, acquired through foreclosure actions, and which before being placed on the market were reconditioned and modernized.

Several attractive offers have been submitted for the Chester, an eight-story building of 39 apartments at 4943 Lindell boulevard, and the Georgian Court, a three-story structure of 102 efficiency apartments at 5660 Kingsbury boulevard, both owned by the Prudential Insurance Co., represented by the Franciscus-Maginn, Inc., local loan correspondent.

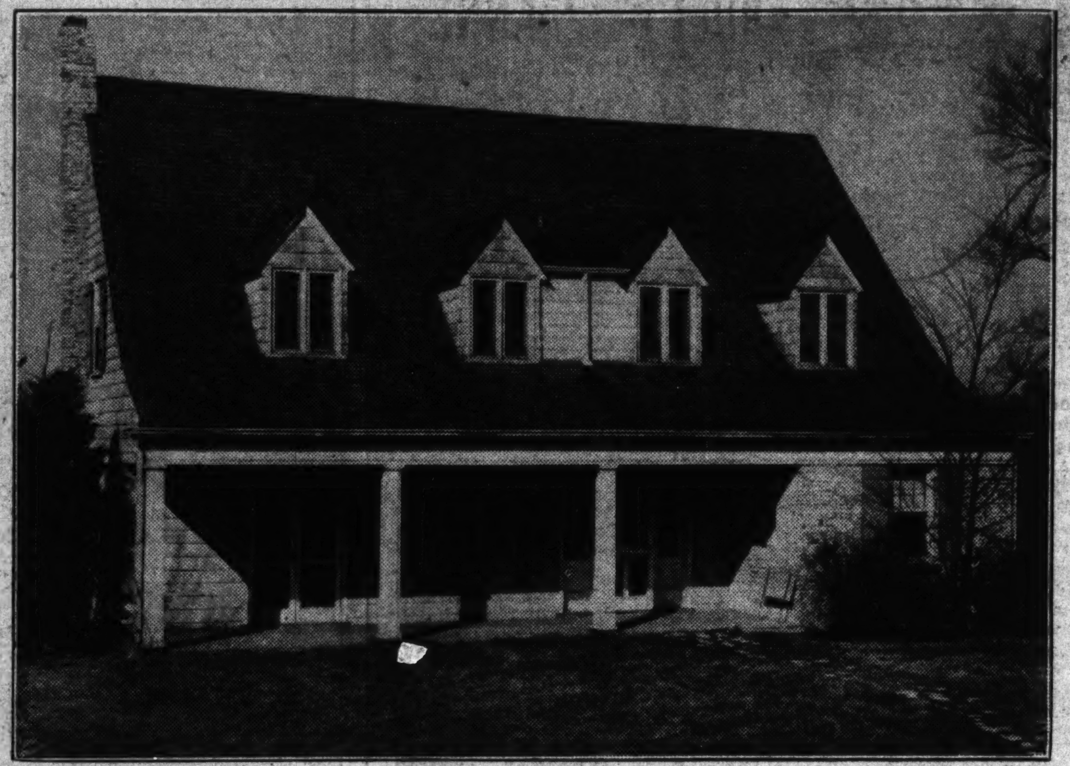
South Side Sale.

A 24-family building at the southwest corner of Shenandoah and Spring avenues, in South St. Louis, has been purchased by Thomas Kutis, represented by the Wenzlick Sales & Management Organization, Inc. The building is 10 years old, but thoroughly modern in every respect, as reported by the agency. The seller was represented by the Charles S. Mueri Realty & Building Co. There was no mention of the consideration.

The Wenzlick Organization also announced the sale of an apartment building at 5031-37 Enright avenue to an undisclosed client of the Shapiro Realty Co., and of a flat at 5945 Lotus avenue, to Frank J. Steffan. Both sales were made for the account of the Equitable Life Insurance Co.

Ground on the north side of Oxford drive, east of Westwood, in Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands, has been purchased by the Irving Investment Co. as a site for an apartment project. The site, which is immediately west of 7539 Oxford, was owned by the Gross Chandelier Co., represented by Edward L. Bakewell, Realtor. The new building will have accommodations for six families. The purchaser was represented by Edward Glik.

Suburban Home Recently Acquired



Residence at 43 Picardy Lane, at Warson and Conway roads, purchased by Joseph W. White, trust officer of the Mercantile Commerce Bank and Trust Co., represented by the bank's real estate department. Meier, Comfort, Bergs & Judge, Inc., acted for the seller.

EXCHANGE BACKS BILL LICENSING REALTY MEN

Measure Provides for Commissioner of 10 Years' Experience, Fees, Fines, Revocation.

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange will support the passage of a bill introduced in the State Legislature last week to establish a real estate license department for the regulation and licensing of real estate dealers and salesmen.

Real estate brokers and salesmen would be required to obtain a license before engaging in business in St. Louis and counties of 25,000 population. Failure to do so would be punishable by a fine and also would deny the delinquents the right to bring court action for recovery of compensation.

The bill provides that the commissioner of the department, to be appointed by the Secretary of State, must have had 10 years' experience in the real estate business.

The license fee would be $10 for brokers the first year and $5 for each annual renewal. For salesmen the fee would be $2 for the original license and $1 annually thereafter.

Authorized Inquiries.

The license department would be authorized to investigate any real estate broker or salesman and the commissioner could revoke a license for cause. Some of the causes for revocation, set forth in the bill, are misrepresentation to obtain a license, substantial misrepresentation in business, failing to account for money received for clients, and being incompetent to act as a real esate broker or salesman.

Twenty-eight states have real estate license laws, California having taken the lead 20 years ago.

School Relief Tax Fund.

The St. Louis Exchange also has indorsed a bill pending in the Legislature which proposes to create a State school tax relief fund. Under the bill 12½ per cent of the State school money would be appropriated for school districts which have a school tax rate in excess of 60 cents for $100 valuation, on the condition that such school districts reduce their school tax rate by an amount equivalent to the allotment received from the special school tax relief fund. Members of the Real Estate Exchange believe that the law would result in a reduction of not less than 10 cents in the St. Louis tax rate, if the Legislature appropriated the usual one-third of State revenue for school purposes.

Bills Exchange Opposes.

The Exchange has expressed opposition to the following bills: House Bill No. 294, which proposes a repeal of the Jones-Munger tax sales law, but reinstates penalties of 1 per cent a month interest, collector's commission of 2 per cent, attorney's fees of 10 per cent, in addition to $3 to $5 for filing suit; House Bill No. 179 restricting homestead mortgaging; House Bill No. 248 which proposes a reduction in the teacher unit of the school districts, which, it is contended by the Exchange, would discriminate against St. Louis; House Bill No. 231 establishing a State bureau of boiler inspection, which would duplicate a service St. Louis now has.

BRIARCLIFF GROUND BOUGHT AS SITE FOR RESIDENCES

A. T. and Whitlaw Terry report having sold lots 41 and 43 of Briarcliff, to William Clabaugh, represented by the Hocker-Grossman Co.

The purchaser has started the erection of two houses, each to occupy approximately an acre of ground. Briarcliff is on the north side of the Ladue road west of Price road.

CLEANING PLANT ON GRAVOIS LEASED

Structure in 4500 Block to Be Altered and Equipped by Lessee.

Louis Sherman has taken a lease on the cleaning plant at 4544-50 Gravois avenue for a term of 10 years. Negotiations in this connection were handled by the Haase Realty Co.

Sherman is president of Real Cleaners with a plant at 4137 South Grand boulevard which he will continue to operate. He plans to incorporate a new company to operate the Gravois avenue plant, which is being altered and equipped on a modern scale at a large expenditure.

Associated with Sherman in the cleaning business are his three sons, Alex, Phillip and Morris Sherman.

EDWARD L. BAKEWELL TO OPEN BRANCH OFFICE IN CLAYTON

The residence at 7720 Forsythe boulevard has been leased for a long term by Edward L. Bakewell, realtor, for a county branch office, to be opened as soon as alterations and improvements now being made to the building, are completed.

Bakewell has been engaged in the real estate business for the last 28 years. He has made a specialty of the management of apartments, and has engineered a number of deals involving projects of this character. His accomplishments in the residential field include the development of Huntleigh Village, a highly restricted residential area in St. Louis County. He is a member of the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America, and is loan correspondent for the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Bakewell will retain his present office at 118 North Seventh street, the opening of a county branch in Clayton having been decided on to facilitate the sale of residences and building sites, including acre tracts.

URBAN PERMITS IN JANUARY UNDER PREVIOUS MONTH

Construction in Cities Was Moderately Higher, However, Than in Like Period Last Year.

Building activity, measured by the value of permits issued, while lower in January than in December, was moderately higher than in the corresponding month of last year, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced yesterday.

"The flood in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys during January had a marked effect on the building permit figures in the afflicted areas and tended to pull down the national totals," she said. "This is illustrated by the fact that in the Ohio and Mississippi Valley towns from Pittsburgh to Memphis the decrease in the total permit valuation between December and January amounted to approximately 47 per cent, while the decrease for the country as a whole was only 18 per cent. This decrease was due to a decline of 30 per cent in new residential construction and a decline of 14 per cent in new nonresidential construction. The value of permits issued for additions, alterations and repairs to existing structures, on the other hand, was 7 per cent higher than in December.

"Compared with the corresponding month of last year, the aggregate value of buildings for which permits were issued in January shows an increase of 13 per cent. All classes of construction contributed to this gain. For home building the increase over a year ago amounts to 23 per cent, additions, alterations and repairs ranks next with a rise of 8 per cent and a gain of 5 per cent is shown in new nonresidential construction."

Percentage Change.

The percentage change from December, 1936, to January, 1937, in the number and cost of buildings for which permits were issued for each of the different types of construction in 1559 identical cities having a population of 2500 or over is indicated in the following table:

Class of Construction. Change from Dec., 1936 to Jan., 1937	Number.	Est. Cost
New residential	—16.6	—30.2
New non-residential	—25.8	—13.7
Additions, alterations and repairs	—12.5	* 6.8
Total	—16.0	—18.4

The percentage change compared with January, 1936, by class of construction, is shown in table below for the same 1559 identical cities:

Class of Construction. Change from Jan., 1936, to Jan., 1937	Number.	Est. Cost
New residential	*59.5	*23.4
New non-residential	*24.2	* 4.7
Additions, alterations and repairs	*11.0	* 8.3
Total	*21.9	*12.7

Compared with January, 1936, an increase of 35 per cent is shown in the number of family-dwelling units provided in these 1559 cities during January, 1937.

The data collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics include, in addition to private construction, the number and value of buildings for which contracts were awarded by Federal and State Governments in the cities included in the report. For January, 1937, the value of these public buildings amounted to $2,787,000; for December, 1936, to $11,053,000; and for January, 1936, to $10,794,000.

Important Building Permits.

Permits were issued during January 1937, for the following important building projects: In Boston, Mass., for apartment houses to cost over $400,000, for a hospital to cost $2,000,000, and for a county court house to cost $3,500,000; in Lynn, Mass., for a theater building to cost nearly $300,000; in New York City—in the Borough of The Bronx for apartment houses to cost nearly $1,000,000; in the Borough of Brooklyn for apartment houses to cost $1,400,000 and for factory buildings to cost over $800,000; in the Borough of Manhattan for apartment houses to cost nearly $1,000,000 and for factory buildings to cost over $250,000; in the Borough of Queens for apartment houses to cost nearly $1,700,000; in Chicago, Ill., for factory buildings to cost over $400,000 and for store and mercantile buildings to cost nearly $270,000; in Cleveland, Ohio, for factory buildings to cost over $400,000; in Washington, D. C., for apartment houses to cost nearly $700,000 and for an office building to cost nearly $400,000; in Franklin, Va., for a paper and pulp mill to cost $3,750,000; in Houston, Tex., for a factory building to cost $1,500,000 and for store and mercantile buildings to cost over $225,000; in Los Angeles, Cal., for apartment houses to cost over $450,000 and for factory buildings to cost over $400,000; in San Francisco, Cal., for store and mercantile buildings to cost over $300,000; and in Seattle, Wash., for public utility buildings to cost $250,000. A contract was awarded by the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department for a post office in Springfield, Mo., to cost nearly $500,000.

VITAGRAPH INC. TO OCCUPY BUILDING AT 3304 OLIVE ST.

Vitagraph, Inc., has taken a 10-year lease on a one-story fireproof building to be erected at 3304 Olive street from plans by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect. The lease was arranged by the Henry R. Weisels Co., which formed a syndicate to erect the building. The building will be used by the Vitagraph, Inc., for general offices and for the distribution of Warner Bros. and First National pictures, and Vitaphone short subjects.

Designed in the American style of architecture, it will be a one-story structure, 50 by 132 feet, with a 12-foot ceiling height. The front of the building will be finished in light pressed brick with Bedford stone trimmings. Besides offices, it will also contain club, poster and inspection, and a large shipping room. There will be six fireproof vaults for the storage of films.

The floors will be in composition tile throughtout. The walls will be in cream-colored glazed tile.

The building will be Frigidaire conditioned throughout.

The contract has been let to the McDonald Construction Co., local contractors. Financial arrangements for the project have been made with the Henry R. Weisels Co. The building permit was issued yesterday with the cost placed at $35,000, exclusive of the site. The final cost, it is believed, will exceed this figure.

Negotiations for the site, formerly owned by F. X. Fitzpatrick, were closed several weeks ago by the Weisels company.

FIRM REPORTS TRANSACTIONS IN FLATS AND APARTMENTS

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. What do you consider the best insulation for the walls of a house? —J. C.

A. There are several types of insulation—fill, blanket, board—that properly installed will serve about equally well. One thing to be careful of is to protect the insulation against moisture. This is particularly true in houses that are to have air-conditioning or humidifying, as the water vapor will penetrate most wall coverings and get into the air space in which the insulation is confined. Then, condensation is liable to occur and the efficiency of the insulation impaired. Select the type of insulation you want and then follow the manufacturer's instructions in its application, and you should get an efficient job.

Q. Is it more economical to build a five-room house on one floor or on two?

A. Generally speaking, a house with more than four rooms is more economical in a two-story structure than in one.

Q. I have a small apartment house and have constant trouble with leaks in the roof. The roof is flat and has what they call a built-up covering. There are brick walls all around the roof, and iron drain pipes go down the outside of the walls. In winter the snow piles up on the roof and leaks begin to appear. Can you tell me the cause and how I can cure it?—R. D. D.

A. If the leaking occurs only in winter when the snow is deep on the roof, the water probably works up under the counter-flashing of the parapet walls and percolates down through the brickwork. The best way to cure that condition is to carry the felt-and-pitch roof material in a continuous sheet up over the top of the parapet wall. If there is a tile or concrete cap on the wall, this can be removed and replaced after the work has been completed.

Q. Our first floor seems to be getting springier and springier; does that mean it is rotting? We have no cellar under that part. MRS. A. M.

A. It sounds so. You had better have the floor beams examined for rot or termites and replace any affected wood. When the trouble is corrected, be sure you provide good ventilation under this unexcavated portion to prevent a repetition of the trouble.

Q. Which is the most economical type of stove to use: Gas or electric?—MRS. C. L. G.

A. That depends entirely upon the cost of the two services in your community. If you have a low electric rate, an electric range can be operated quite economically.

FOR BETTER LIVING

The old-fashioned "closet under the stairs"—that catch-all for umbrellas, extra coats, hats and wraps, that dark limbo of lost articles—has been modernized at last.

Built-in racks now hold outdoor clothing; ample shelving takes care of tennis rackets, etc. Golf clubs stand in a special fenced-in nook of their own, a special compartment holds rubbers, etc. Order obviates dust and keeps the place tidy. Painted walls and varnished floors make cleanliness simple to maintain.

Through improved conditions everything is in its place and readily found, especially with the convenient electric light within reach as the door is opened.

Too frequently in the construction of houses of tying the roof together is neglected. A pitched roof exerts a pressure downward and outward. Unless these tendencies are checked, the roof will spread, causing the outer walls to bulge and damaging the interior finish.

The best place to tie the sides together is at or near the lower ends of the rafters. If this is not possible, then the two sides of the roof should be tied together at the "knees" by collar beams. The closer these beams can be placed to the bottom of the rafters, the better the tie will be and the less likelihood there will be of the roof's spreading.

Dormer windows may have three sides of glass, giving the room a maximum amount of light.

NOISY PIPES

When plumbing is being installed in a new house, the owner should request the plumber to make sure that there is not excessive water pressure in the piping within the house. Very often the plumbing mains in the street will be carrying water at close to 100 pounds per square inch pressure. If water under such pressure is allowed to enter the water lines of the house, it will cause noise whenever a faucet is opened and, in addition, will cause a strain on the water lines, which may bring about leaks.

Very often in houses already erected whose plumbing is noisy the trouble will be traced to this same source—excessive water pressure.

Any good plumber can correct this difficulty by installing in the water line leading from the main to the house a pressure-reducing valve and regulating it to provide water pressure within the house of not more than 30 pounds per square inch.

What Is a Home?

Home isn't just a house. It isn't just a few thousand dollars' worth of lumber, brick and mortar thrown together. It isn't built just anywhere. A real home is greatly different from all that. Neighborhood counts, pleasant surroundings—an atmosphere of quiet charm cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

No. 4 Forest Ridge Is a "Home"

Situated in a park-like setting of 3 acres with 75 or more beautiful old shade trees, offers you the opportunity to buy a country estate in the most exclusive section of Clayton. Phone for complete details.

MOTHER AND SISTERS.

GRUPP, ANNA—In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, who passed away March 6, 1935.

Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadows cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will;
Her vacant place there's none can fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.

Sadly missed by her Husband, Children, Grandchildren and Friends.

HANLEY, DANIEL A.—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, who passed away nine years ago, March 12, 1928. Requiem high mass, St. Alphonsus' Church, Friday, 7 a. m.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN

WHAT IS YOUR FUTURE? ARE YOU GETTING AHEAD? ARE YOU ON THE ROAD TO INDEPENDENCE IN YOUR TRADE OR PROFESSION? CAN YOU EXPECT TO MAKE FROM $40 TO $100 A WEEK IN 1937? IF NOT, INVESTIGATE THIS OFFER OF FREE INSTRUCTION AND IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT. WE HAVE NOTHING TO SELL YOU.

We will take on additional men who wish to learn to do this work and who can get along on earnings of $35 to $40 a week while studying and practicing. We will train such men free. We will furnish full equipment with no deposit required. There is no expense. No previous experience in any kind of selling is necessary. If you are capable of understanding and following instruction, if you are one who likes to practice to learn skill and judgment in what he does, and if you are willing to work for success, then we will give you a chance. We cannot guarantee you that you will be a star, but we do guarantee you a trial with substantial earnings, practical instruction and guidance.

We have a wonderful invention that renders a very unusual service. Our men are thoroughly trained as to how to conduct our business. Those, we believe, in a personal interview, can qualify, will be given the opportunity of seeing our product, meeting our men, investigating their earnings, our company, and our entire business methods.

It is not unusual that men in this organization make $25 to $50 for one day's work.

This is a straightforward offer of sincere intent to worthy men who are in need of good substantial positions. Please do not apply for these positions unless you can meet the requirements, and the requirements are that you be of neat appearance, between the ages of 25 and 45, and of good character and reputation and willing to work.

Applicants will be personally interviewed Monday morning, 9:15 to 1:15, at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts.

NEW YORK, March 6.

NOTHING has so impressed itself on the amusement world of Broadway during the current season as the fact that playgoers are bored stiff with dramas of economic implications and weighty social theses. Cain's Warehouse is filled with sets from the one-night runs of dramas of strikes, discontent and the social injustices which infest the fevered imaginations of incompetents in the belt below Union Square.

CLIFFORD ODETS.

Playgoers will have none of them and propaganda, so far as the theater is concerned, is flop stuff. Folk simply don't seem to want to pay good money for an evening of woe and the complaints of would-be rabble rousers, but they overflowed the theater housing the most distinguished "Hamlet" of decades, made handsome money for Gilbert Miller's production of "The Country Wife," are going crazy about "The Show Is On" and you can't buy seats for the hysterically cockeyed devising of Moss Hart and George Kaufman called "You Can't Take It With You" for a month in advance.

Students of what they like to call "the serious theater" are in a pretty stew about it. The Group Theater, a posse of very honorable but slightly potty folk with curious notions, folded like a wilted shirt. The Theater Guild, which sometimes lends its support to boozy humanitarianism, has had tough sledding with one turkey after another. Something called the Actor's Repertory Company undertook a "social drama," which fairly scuttled to oblivion. Even Clifford Odets, the white hope of the champagne and foie gras radicals, didn't produce a class-angle nonpareil for the delight of soiled-collar first nighters. People won't spend their money to be abused and heckled, but want entertainment, of all things! It's an outrage, that's what!

—o—o—

● TYPES AROUND TOWN: The Party Usurper: It comes in either sex, he or she, and is a real liability, what I mean. His technique is attending somebody else's party, to which, the chances are, he hasn't been asked, and using it for personal, professional or social promotion, just as though it were given in his particular honor.

He stands at the door, yo-hoing and greeting the guests as they arrive long before they can beat their way to the actual host, and in general creating the impression that it's his party and you had better be nice to him. He tells folk where the hats and coats go and urges them toward the cold buffet and bar with the fine hospitality of one who isn't paying for the drinks, and urges everyone to take some more foie gras, there's plenty of it, and for the love of heaven have some more champagne, it comes in rivers.

If he has written a book or is touting a night club or exploiting a brand of the phoniest sparkling wine known to men you won't long be in ignorance of it, and before you've said "How perfectly wonderful" you'll have committed yourself to something you'll be powerful sorry for later. Usually you've told him to send around fifty copies of his new novel called "Madrid Madness" or promised to buy ten cases of rare old Hackensack Meadows '36, Jerseyberger. The female usually isn't so commercial; all she wants you to do is sign as a patron of an eminently improbable charity ball and appear as the Spirit of Bemused Agoraphobia in the pageant. But she's louder than the male and commands twice as much attention for her anecdotes and chronicles on the inside of the Simpson business as anyone else in the room, and if you're going to have her at your party at all you may as well ask her to be guest of honor, because she'll act that way anyhow. Perhaps the best thing to do, after all, is not to give parties. Then the party usurpers would starve, like the miserable rats and ratesses they are, because they are not allowed to ply their calling in public restaurants. Fair enough.

● A FRIEND OF OURS in the lecture racket assures us that it is the established practice of many public speakers of note to charge double their regular fees if they are to be entertained before or after going through their paces while on tour. If a celebrity customarily commands $250 for a talk on whatever subject lies within his field of information, he charges an even $500 if he is to be guest of honor at a luncheon, dinner or reception staged in connection with the event.

The strain of making one's self agreeable to vast crowds of strangers who wish to exploit notables and bask in their reflected glory is far more trying than the accustomed delivery of an address, and the necessity of autographing books, posing for pictures and drinking cocktails with the presidents of women's clubs and uplift leagues is what lays many a lecturer out with the screaming meemies before a tour of the country-club belt is over.

—o—o—

THE MOST FEARFUL and wonderful character in modern fiction, it seems to this department, is Colin Glencannon, Esq., chief engineer of the S. S. Inchcliffe Castle and an alcoholic figment of the imagination of Guy Gilpatric, of "The Saturday Evening Post" and deep-sea fishing fame. For years, until the unsteady appearance on the literary horizon of Mr. Glencannon, George Horace Lorimer, until recently editor of "The Saturday Evening Post," had maintained that stories whose basis was the adventure of inebriates were no fit reading matter for a family magazine founded by Benjamin Franklin.

G. H. LORIMER.

In fact, he was pretty snappish about the word whisky in any copy at all, a pal of Mrs. Ella Boole and the Methodist Board. But he tentatively printed a few of Gilpatric's impious yarns and, to his amazement, discovered that Mr. Glencannon was the peer in popular favor with Tish Carberry, Mr. Tutt, the Earthworm Tractor salesman and other "Post" characters.

Since then the Inchcliffe Castle's chief has tottered in dizzy sarabands and has been woven in demented patterns of delirium through

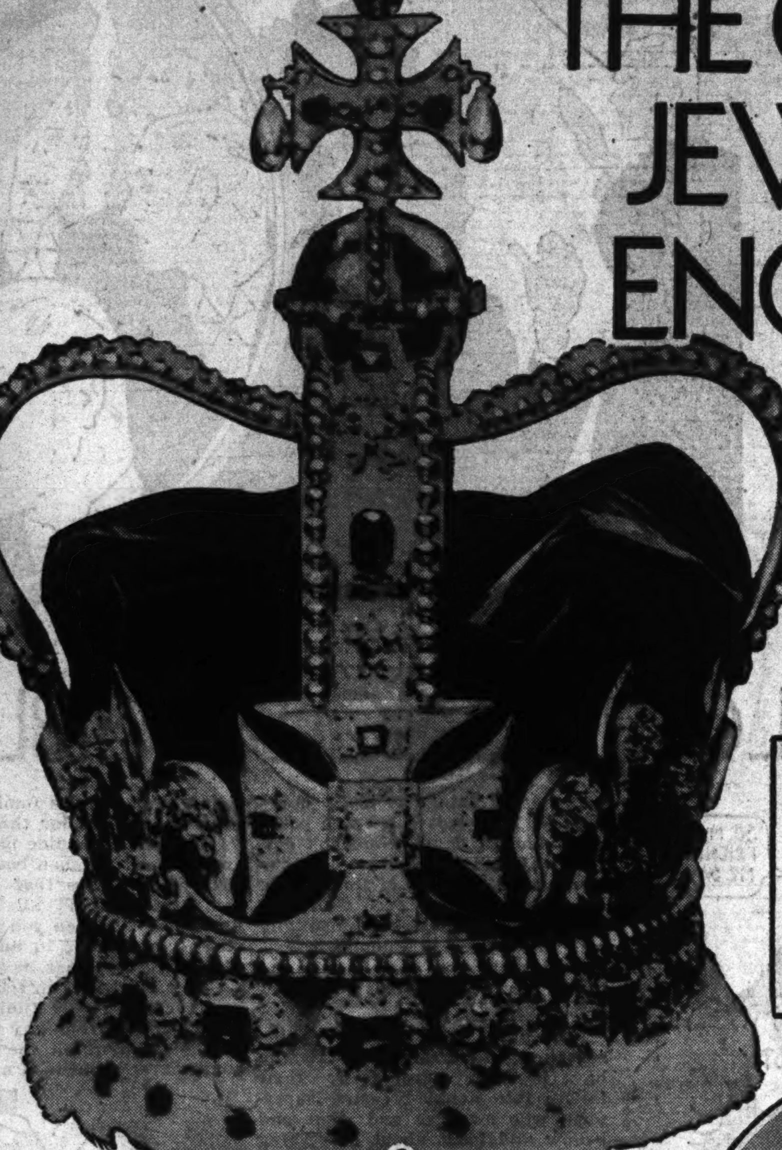
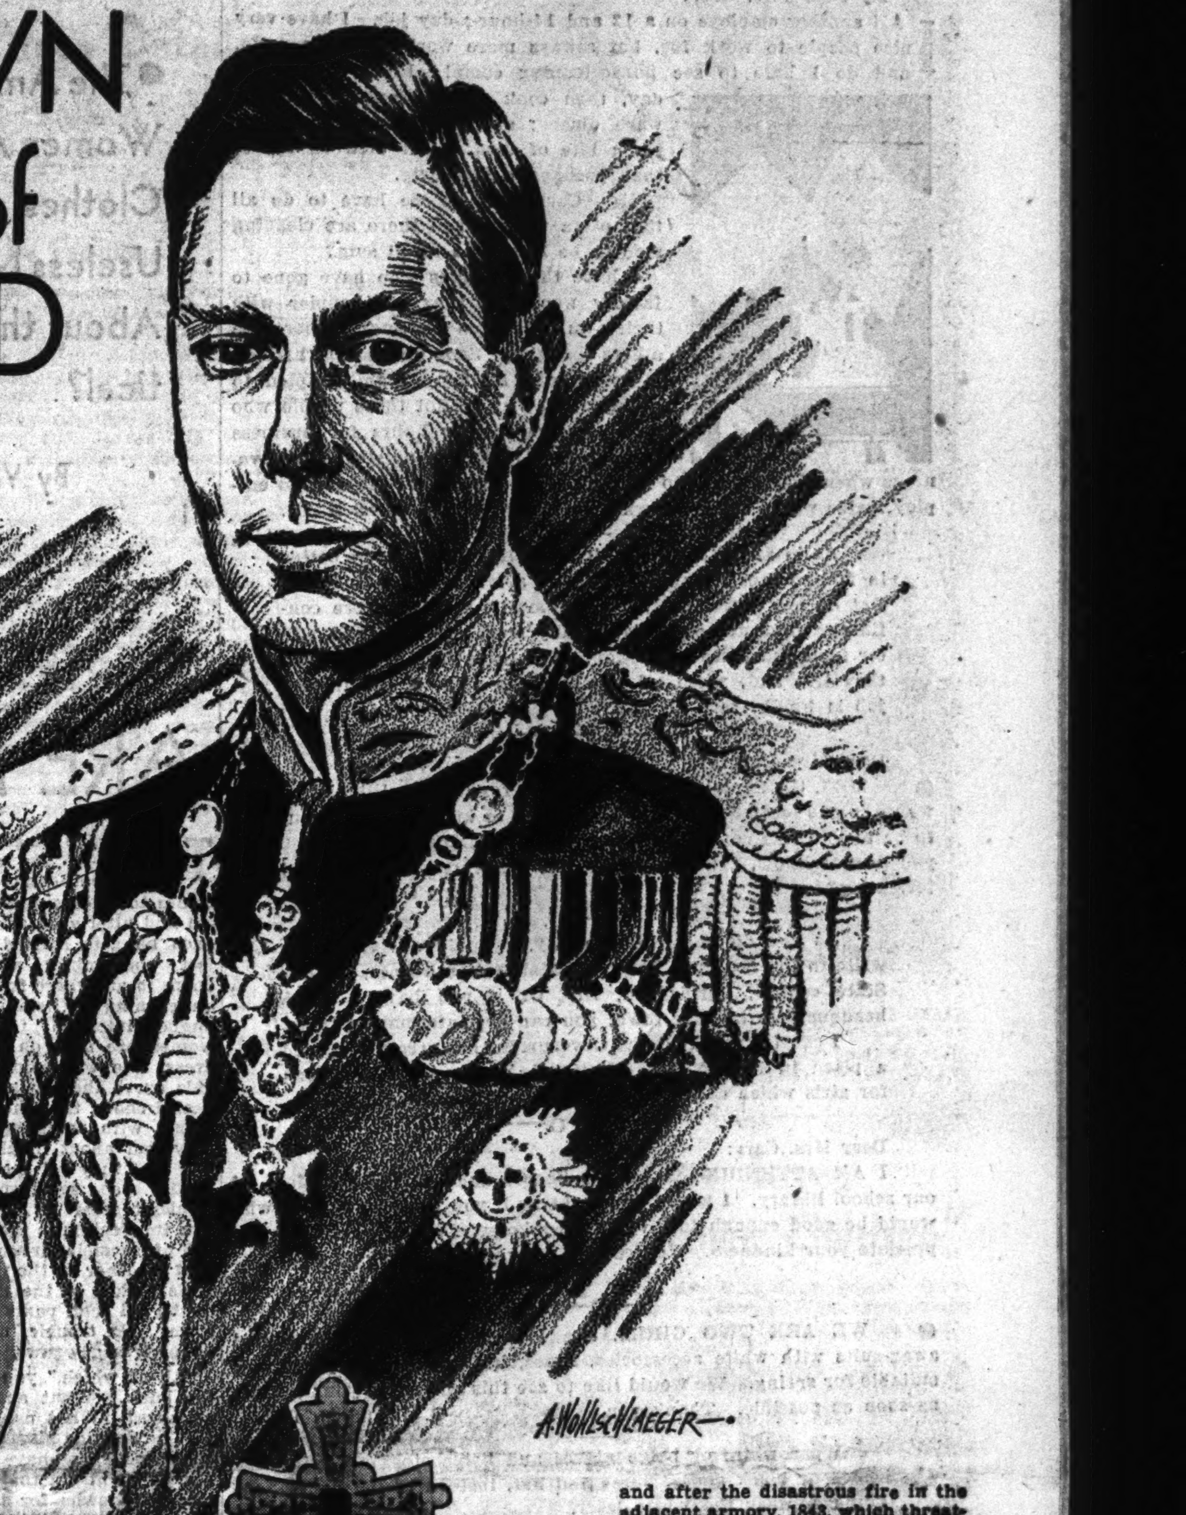
THE CROWN JEWELS of ENGLAND



THE KING'S STATE CROWN, WITH FOUR GREAT PEARLS OF THE FIRST QUEEN ELIZABETH.



AT RIGHT—KING GEORGE VI. BELOW—THE MODEL FROM WHICH MEDALS ARE BEING CAST TO COMMEMORATE THE CORONATION OF THE NEW BRITISH RULER.

CORONATION OF KING GEORGE VI & QUEEN ELIZABETH

BY BLEVINS DAVIS

Department of Drama, Yale University

AT the conclusion of the coronation ceremonies, May 12, King George VI attended and accompanied as before the ceremony, the four swords being carried before him, and carrying his scepter and rod, goes into the area east of the theater and passes through the door on the south side of the altar into St. Edward's Chapel. The rest of the regalia lies upon the altar, being delivered by the dean of Westminster to the Lords that carried them, and so they proceed in state into the chapel, as the organ plays. The Queen at the same time will descend, and in like manner go into the chapel at the door on the north side of the altar, bearing the scepter in her right hand, and the ivory rod in her left.

His Majesty will then exchange his imperial mantle for a royal robe of purple velvet. The Queen will wear her royal robe of purple velvet. Their Majesties will then proceed through the choir to the west door of the church in the same way as they came, wearing their crowns. The King will carry in his right hand the scepter with the cross, and in his left the orb. The Queen will carry in her right hand her scepter with the cross, and in her left the ivory rod with the dove.

As their Britannic Majesties ride in state to Buckingham Palace, the royal residence, arrayed in the imperial robes of office, cannons will boom an empire's salute and waiting millions will rend the air with shouts of "God save King George!" "God save Queen Elizabeth!"

This will complete the most expensive show of the century. The purple and ermine of the royal family, and the ruby red velvets of the Peers and Peeresses will provide regal background for the crowns, coronets, scepters and swords which will be taken from heavily guarded vaults for the auspicious occasion.

The fabled wealth of the Count of Monte Cristo, or the jeweled possessions of Ali Baba and his 40 thieves cannot compare to the actual amount of money invested in this collection. It is utterly impossible, however, to appraise the value of such gems as the Koh-i-nur diamond, whose history dates for a thousand years; the ruby which once belonged to the Black Prince in 1367 and later worn in battle by Henry V; or the Stars of Africa, the four incomparable jewels which were cut from the Cullinan diamond which weighed one and a half pounds.

The history of all England could be writen in her jewels, for back of all the pomp, circumstance and formal regality of the crowning of the King lies the fact that each gem of any significance in the coronation regalia has a fascinating story of its own. The royal collection of diamonds, emeralds, sapphires, pearls and rubies, gathered from the ends of the earth, have been pawned to save empires; their wearers have been foully murdered in the dead of night; intrigue and crime have woven their nets around their unexcelled beauty, and loss of human life has gone for naught to satisfy the yearning of former possessors outside the royal circle who have risked their lives to possess the stones which range in size from a tiny pearl to the diamond in the King's scepter, which is larger than a child's fist.

SINCE 827 A. D., the beginning of the reign of Egbert, the first King of England, the crown jewels have been a source of pride and constant care. As the treasures increased in number and value they were intrusted to the monks of Westminster Abbey. Though the consecrated shrine proved a safeguard against thieves of the outside world, one monk named Alexander d' Pershore, within the holy walls fell before the magic spell of the gems and sold them to Richard d' Podelicote, a traveling merchant. Enraged at such thievery in the cloister, King Edward I demanded the imprisonment for two years of the Abbot Wenlock and his 48 monks.

From that remote date to the present day, more than seven centuries, the royal regalia has been kept in the Tower of London. After Charles I was beheaded the jewels were ruthlessly sold for a pittance, and the gold ornaments melted down for cash value. With the restoration of Charles II the state collection was enlarged and remade at royal command, and subsequently placed in the specially built jewel house, the Martin Tower.

A single sentry used to guard the treasures but one dark and dreary night the ghost of the Earl of Northumberland, who was murdered in the Bloody Tower, was observed walking along the edge of the ramparts of Martin Tower. Nightly thereafter at the hour of 12 the apparition appeared. Soldiers fled from duty until the guard was doubled as a measure of personal safety.

One of the most daring robberies of all time was the attempt to steal the crown jewels by Parson Blood and his three accomplices during the reign of Charles II. So successful were they with their plan that the thieves reached the outer wall and gateway of the Tower with their priceless burden. Guards finally seized the robbers and returned the paraphernalia to the jewel house. The King declared he would try the case himself, alone, and behind closed doors. The populace agreed that the perpetrator of the crime would undoubtedly be hanged and quartered, but much to their amazement the Irish wit of the thief won favor with the monarch. What took place at that historic meeting between King and culprit will never be known, but at his Majesty's command Parson Blood, instead of being sentenced to death, was given a pension of 500 pounds a year, and made a Colonel in the King's bodyguard.

After others attempted, in later years, to steal the crown collection and after the disastrous fire in the adjacent armory, 1843, which threatened total destruction of the jewels, they were placed in their final and present abode—Wakefield Tower, close by Traitor's Gate.

During the World War the Tower of London and its priceless treasure became a target for enemy aircraft. Four times great aerial bombs were aimed at the jewel house, and as many times the plans of destruction failed. To avert such intended disaster the treasures were removed to the subterranean vaults in Windsor Castle, and returned after the Armistice to the Tower of London and its especially constructed case of glass, iron and steel, around which guards keep watch day and night.

The larger and more famous stones in the royal regalia have detailed information concerning them, but the thousands of lesser gems have been set and re-set so many times that no attempt has been made to preserve their ever changing rcords. The Black Prince, eldest son of Edward III, first possessed the most romantic jewel in the entire collection—a great ruby large as a hen's egg, which is placed in the center of the crown of state. The Black Prince was given the gem by Don Pedro, King of Castille, for the use of English soldiers which the Prince had sent to his aid in the battle of Nefera.

BLOODSHED and murder antedate the acquisition of the stone by the Black Prince, for Don Pedro had the King of Grenada slaughtered in 1367 so that he might add it to his treasure chest. No doubt his gift of the blood-red ruby to the English prince was a feeble attempt to clear his conscience of the crime. Connoisseurs believe that previous to 1367 the stone had an Oriental background.

The Black Prince never sat on England's throne, but his son, Richard II, fell heir to the ruby. When Henry V reigned the gem appeared on his helmet at the Battle of Agincourt. A fierce duel took place during the course of the conflict between the Duc d'Alencon and the monarch. The former fell beneath the crushing blows of the King, after Alencon made a fell swoop with his broadsword which crushed the monarch's helmet but left the ruby unharmed in its setting.

Legend has it that this very ruby adorned the crown of Richard III at the Battle of Bosworth Field, when he was defeated by Henry Tudor. Richard, seized with fear during the struggle, removed the crown and hid it under a hawthorne bush so his retreat from the scene of action would not be so evident. A common soldier found the diadem and on the moment it was used to crown the victor—Henry

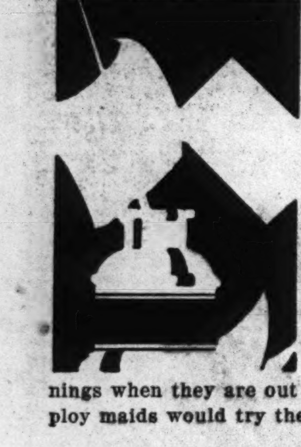
THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

My Dear Mrs. Carr:



I AM another employe on a 12 and 14-hour-a-day job. I have very nice people to work for, but always more work than I can do, and do I hate to see housecleaning come! Elbow grease all day, then cook a big dinner, serve and wash dishes; so tired I haven't appetite for a bite of food. And then on top of that, perhaps, a big party.

Mrs. Carr, why do we have to do all that extra work, when there are cleaning men to be had for a small sum?

I have three friends who have gone to factory work and they are happier with their own time from 5 o'clock. There are others changing. Soon my sixth girl friend is going to a factory. I am tempted to go myself. Why cannot these people who hire us have regular hours for business calls, instead of having us stay home evenings when they are out to take calls? I wish these people who employ maids would try the work themselves. ONE MAID.

As in any other work, if you think you can do better in factory work than in domestic service, why not do it? But do not forget that, while domestic work is more confining, there are sometimes many more comforts and better food and more protection. Ask these factory girls how they live and, when all expenses are paid, if the factory job is worth more.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MRS. CARR, is there a CCC camp for girls in Illinois? If so, where is one located? Also, I would like to know how old you have to be to join this camp and what kind of training they give you. If you do not know, can you please tell me where I can get this information? FERN OF MARION.

As you do not live in a city, I would advise you to write to the National Youth Administration offices, at your State capital, Springfield, Ill. Or if you have a WPA headquarters in your town, you can get information there.

I can tell you that the Government has recently opened a place in Mexico, Mo. (National Youth Administration) for girls which corresponds with the CCC camp for boys.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM ATTENDING St. Ann's School and am the president of our school library. I would like to know if you know of anyone who would be good enough to give us a bookcase. We will certainly appreciate your kindness. You can let me know at St. Ann's School. G. S. B.

● WE ARE TWO GIRLS, age 17, wondering if rust-colored swag-suits with white accessories, shoes, hat, gloves and purse, are suitable for spring. We would like to see this answer in your column as soon as possible. Thank you. G. J. and M. P.

Wear white or beige gloves and beige stockings with brown or black shoes, purse and hat, instead of the white. You can wear the white later.

—o—o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM WRITING YOU to ask you to help me get a layette (believe me, it is only as a last resort that I do so). I can sew and make over garments.

My husband has had scarcely enough work to clothe and feed the other children, hence we have none for the coming little one. Anything will be gladly received. I am giving my doctor's name for reference. P. J. B.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WILL YOU KINDLY TELL ME where there is a Reformed Evangelical Church nearest to 6000 Delmar. I am a stranger in St. Louis. Thank you. MRS. M. F.

The one nearest 6000 Delmar is the Samuel Evangelical Church at 8012 Maryland avenue.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

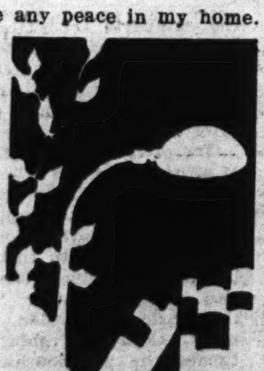
● KINDLY FAVOR ME by advising how a story, written by anyone, can be protected from theft by any writer to whom it may be sent for revision, before being published. My wife has taken up story writing and has now finished her first story and it is ready for editing and revision. I would appreciate this favor very much. O. A. F.

Write the United States Department of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., where I believe you can get all details about copyright laws which protect manuscripts sent for revision or publication.

—o—o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I READ A LETTER tonight in your column signed "Hoosier." I really believe she has written about my mother-in-law. This is her habit and when she is around I never have any peace in my home. And she tells my husband untruths about me. I haven't steady work and my husband won't work; he takes things I buy and gives them to her and I have no decent clothes. I don't know where my father is, today, because of this woman, as I cannot have my people come to see me.



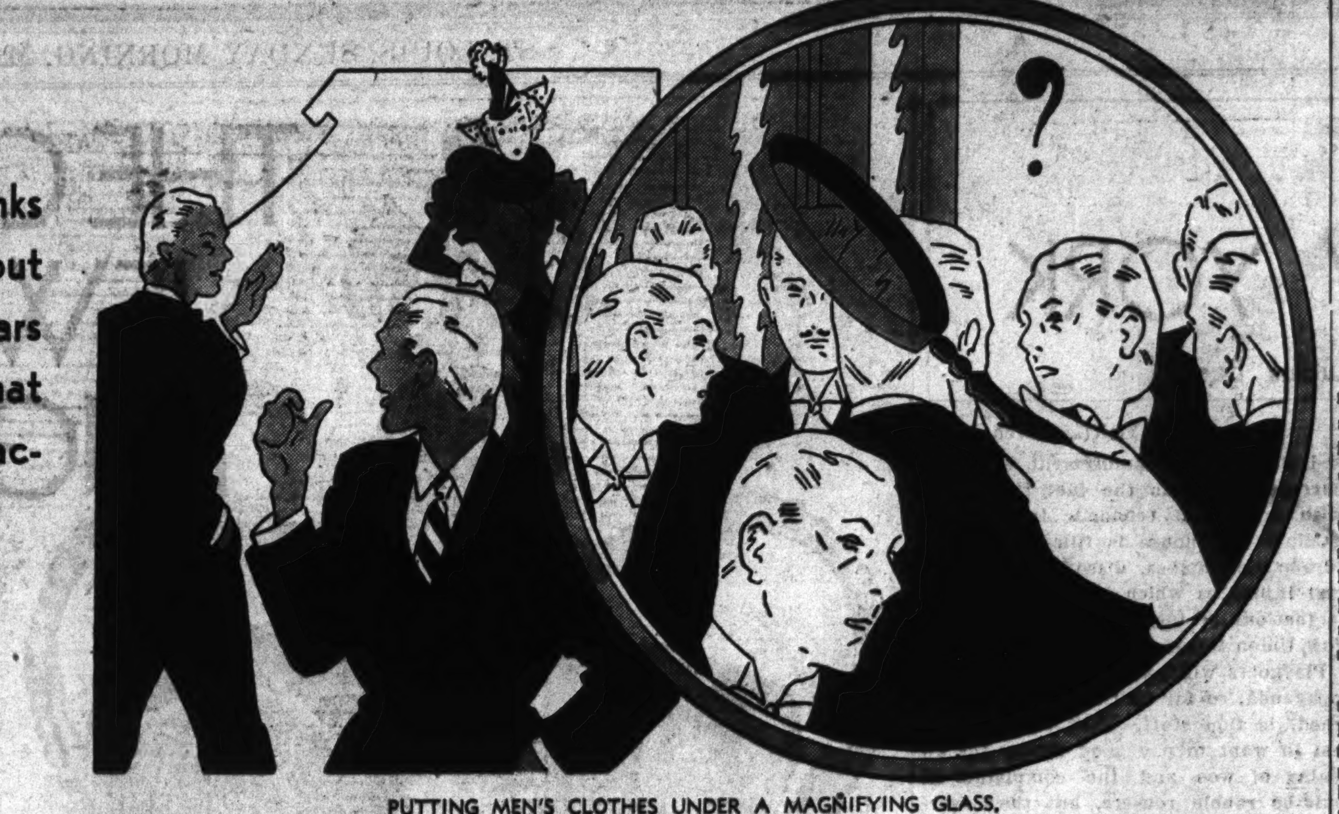
I wish young girls could see how foolish it is to marry in this way. I had work three years in one place, but had to give up on account of my husband's drinking.

What I want to do, Mrs. Carr, is to meet the woman who wrote about the "Hoosiers," so that we could go together down to the court and have this woman put away, as I think her mind is unsound and believe my husband is following in that. I don't know what to do, Mrs. Carr, but you can ask the people whose names I am sending you about how I stand. I want to get away as I am so unhappy and I am praying that you can give me good advice. P. N.

I do not think you will have to enter into any kind of conspiracy to have your mother-in-law taken to a hospital, if she is really out of her mind. And if you can prove that you have reason, you can leave your husband. Why don't you go to the Domestic Relations Court and put your case to them? Perhaps these friends you mention will help you and go with you, so that you can at least know that you have some backing, while you make these inquiries.

The American Male Thinks Women Are Illogical About Clothes, Yet He Wears Useless Neckties. And what About the Vest? Is It Practical?

By VIRGINIA IRWIN



PUTTING MEN'S CLOTHES UNDER A MAGNIFYING GLASS.

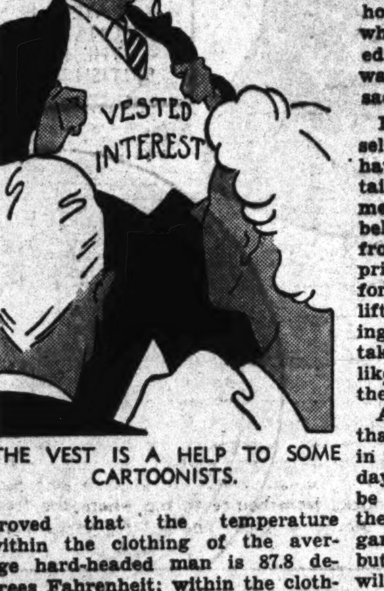
ARE MEN'S CLOTHES SO SENSIBLE?

THE average American male will tell you—if you ask him and even if you don't—that when it comes to clothes, women are illogical and utterly unfathomable. And once he gets started on the subject you might as well settle down to anywhere from an hour to an evening of listening to a harangue intended to prove that women are nuts on the subject of dress. He will point out that the gals curve their spines with spike-heeled shoes, that they invite pneumonia with revealing gowns, that they gad about in clown-like hats and that they get themselves up in outfits a self-respecting man wouldn't wear to a masquerade. The implication is that, in the matter of sensible dressing, the boys hold a corner on the market. They, lords logical of the universe, stick to the old coat, pants and vest uniform. No trouble, no discomfort, no useless gewgaws, no fripperies.

"All of which," you may say, "is the bunk. What about your silly neckties? What use are they?"

If he defends himself on the matter of looks, you have him whipped. Simply point out that women wear backless gowns for the same reason, and accomplish thereby, more in the matter of allure than any gent who ever paid three bucks for a cravat.

As a matter of fact, men's clothes aren't as sensible as those of the fair sex. A man binds his throat in a collar that saws his neck, wears a vest for no reason at all, and in general covers himself with some fifteen pounds of assorted leather, wool, cotton, felt and whatnot, with the result that he lives in a self-produced tropical climate in both summer and winter. A dog (which you have never heard complain of cold weather) carries only about one-fiftieth of his weight in fur, while a man staggers around under one-tenth of his body weight in clothes.



SO, MY GOOD FRIENDS, LET ME SAY....
VESTED INTEREST

THE VEST IS A HELP TO SOME CARTOONISTS.

Through experiments at Colgate University, Dr. Donald A. Laird proved that the temperature within the clothing of the average hard-headed man is 87.8 degrees Fahrenheit; within the clothing of the more sensible fair sex the temperature is only 80.6 degrees. Dr. Laird also established the fact that the relative humidity inside men's clothing is 70 per cent, while for women it is only 55 per cent. "The observed consequence," he concluded, "is that men suffer from heat stasis and from excessive perspiration."

But so much for the health side of the argument.

Men jeer that women try to suggest personalities other than their own by getting themselves up a la Jean Harlow or Maid of Salem. For instance, a plain little number buys herself a red satin of extreme decolletage and palms herself off on the unsuspecting world as a scorching siren with a past, present and future. Or a tigerish termagant gets herself into dull black crepe with an Irish lace collar and poses as a demure dame who can't call her soul—much less her hat—her own. Men, they say of themselves, are never guilty of such stuff, but how about the weak-chinned guy who struts about in a double-breasted suit, when by very nature he was meant for a single-breasted sack?

Look about you and see for yourself the single-breasted gents who have been transformed by their tailors into double-breasted supermen, who swagger and strut and bellow and bleat about everything from the state of the nation to the price of Sunday's potroast in an effort to live up to the coat that has lifted from them that terrible feeling of inferiority. There's no mistaking the breed. They puff out like pouter pigeons and lord it over their single-breasted brother men.

And speaking of coats, why is it that once a man puts on his coat in the morning, he must wear it all day, even though the temperature be 109 in the shade? Women shed their coats or any other removable garment in the name of comfort, but nothing short of a fist fight will persuade a man to take off his coat in any place but the sanctum of his own home. For any kind of civilized effort such as delivery of a political speech or pushing a lady around a dance floor, a man only buttons up his coat the tighter, when the sensible thing would seem unbuttoning it or taking it off altogether to allow for freedom of action.

—o-o—

"STATISTICS," says a male writer in a recent magazine article, "prove that women buy over 60 per cent of the men's clothes sold in this country." But where the expert got his statistics, he doesn't say, and personally I doubt if his information is correct, for there would certainly be more sense to men's clothes if the ladies had a hand in the purchase. Perhaps the feminine touch has added the color that can now be found in masculine pajamas and undies, but if women bought 60 per cent of the suits that men wear, the boys wouldn't all look alike. Look over the men you see on any street car, bus or in any meeting, restaurant, or what have you, and see how hard it is to tell your husband or boy friend (unless he has a mustache) from any other man present. Colors in men's suitings could never be blamed on women—oxford gray, navy blue, dark brown, unutterably sober, unromantically somber, and if you ask me, discouragingly dull. Two centuries ago men were dazzling the damsels with scarlet breeches and canary waistcoats, but the boys of today leave the sunshine shades to doormen and drum majors.

"MEN'S CLOTHES AREN'T SO SENSIBLE AS THOSE OF THE FAIR SEX."

But to get back to refuting the idea that women dictate the purchase of their spouses' social epidermis. Can you imagine a woman saying to her husband, "Dear, you simply must have that strap and buckle on the back of your vest. It looks like heck, but all the other men have them"? Of course, you can't imagine it, but men must have that strap and buckle because they believe that in the event of losing a few pounds they can tighten up their vests with the contraption and in the event of gaining pounds the darn thing can be left dangling. Leave the matter to a woman and she'd take a tuck in the vest if the old man lost weight and add a gusset if he gained. Really, she wouldn't wear a vest at all, unless she found some better use for it than men do. (Outside of the armholes as accomodations for the thumbs during orations or pacing the floor, the thing seems to have very little use. Of course cartoonists always picture the tycoons of finance as bulbous boys with the words, "Vested Interest" labeled across their vest fronts and it may be that poor downtrodden John Common People wears a vest in the hope that he may be mistaken for a big shot.

If the few touches of ornamentation on men's clothing could be justified in any way, the ladies would forgive the gents their little indulgences. But take the buttons on the sleeves. Of what good are they? In the time of Frederick the Great buttons on men's sleeves were put there to keep the boys from wiping their noses, but now that men are broken of the habit, the buttons still remain. The buttonhole in the lapel of men's suits would be justified if the male of the species could be persuaded to brighten up his gloomy uniform with a boutonniere, but most buttonholes in lapels are sewn shut.

"But look," says the blue-serge American hero, "men's suits have pockets aplenty."

And that might be the one sensible thing the men could point to in their arguments if they could ever find anything in the baker's dozen places provided for money, handkerchief, pocket knife, bills, fish hooks, chewing tobacco and the assorted cigar coupons and identification cards they begin to collect at age 16 and throw away at age 76.

In the matter of makeup, although not strictly a matter of dress, but which men invariably attack after verbally tearing a woman's clothes to ribbons, the most hardy of he-men pretends a profound indifference. But watch any guy get himself into a panic when he begins to lose his hair or waistline, and if you can find one who doesn't take more pains with his razor than you do with your powder puff, you've got an exception to the rule.

Ruffled Frocks

Ruffled evening frocks are the delight of prom queens who come into the campus limelight in the springtime. This spring the more ruffles that can be added to a sheer frock, the more effective it becomes. Alice blue marquisette is used for one attractive model which starts the ruffles at the hipline of the skirt and continues them to the floor. The bodice is quite plain but is covered on most occasions with an allover ruffled bolero. Another cleverly styled frock which is of black net has circular ruffles that are edged with narrow cire braid to suggest bands of patent leather.

Dalmation Embroidery

Dalmation embroidery no longer can be considered the exclusive property of the sportswear designer because it is being used extensively to adorn evening dresses. One black net frock which appeared in a St. Louis fashion display employed the embroidery to add color and decoration. The dress was cut along redingote lines and the embroidered bands edged the front opening. Short puffed sleeves also were finished with straight cuffs covered with the embroidery. The bodice was high of neckline both front and back—a feature of many spring formals which indicates a trend worth watching.

Portrait of Success

BY MARJORIE HILLIS

SHE is a very little lady, with white hair and a charming smile and definitely pretty clothes. And she sits in a charming office, with chintz at the windows and prisms catching the sunlight in the chandelier and flowers on a low table in front of a sofa. There is even a needle-point footstool at her feet.

You can scarcely believe that she has all the power attributed to her. Power is so cold and sharp, and she is neither. But when she begins to speak, you know that her mind can be both; that she can clear away the softness that blurs so much thinking, even among the most successful business women.

Her name is Edna Woolman Chase, and she is editor-in-chief of all three branches (French, British and American) of one of the most successful fashion magazines in our day. She started to work for this magazine, addressing envelopes, when she was in her teens, almost 40 years ago. It was a small, thin paper then, more of a society journal than a fashion magazine. But she didn't address envelopes long. She worked straight up, through the editorial department, to the very top, doing every single type of work that was there to be done, as she climbed, and doing it hard—and a little better than anyone else. One suspects that she didn't grow with the magazine; that the magazine grew with her.

—o-o—

SHE IS PROBABLY the most-widely known and most influential woman magazine editor in the world, but her greatest success is not merely that of an editor. It is what she has done for other women, both directly and indirectly. Her suggestions and guidance have trained hundreds of editors, writers, fashion experts, artists, photographers, buyers and stylists. For 30 years a constant stream of ambitious young women have passed through her organization, and only the very dullest of them have gone out without having their abilities sharpened by the contact—even though it was remote—with her alert mind. It was that mind that thought up and directed the first Fashion Show, given for charity years ago. The idea of a Stylist was originally hers. She has probably criticised and advised on a thousand advertised products, and there is no way of estimating the money that her infallible taste and trained judgment have made for innumerable companies.

EDITOR IN CHIEF

Like every important person, she is criticised. People say that she never compliments. But those who know her would rather have her criticisms than any number of pretty speeches from other people. They know that it comes from her interest in them, often from an affection which is warm and steadfast, and the wisest of them know that it can be more valuable than a gift of money.

She still sits at her desk, small, vital, authoritative, with her finger in innumerable important pies. She is a product of a new age for women, but also one of the outstanding factors that brought it about.

SOMEONE told me, complainingly, the other day that I never mention radio programs—which is certainly an oversight in these days when there are such good ones. But she spoiled her story by adding, "I use my radio all the time when I'm home, even when I'm doing typing or bookkeeping in the evening!"

I think that when you listen to the radio, you ought to listen. Trying to give your attention to two things at once is unfair to the performance and terrible for your own mind. It's all very well, of course, to have the radio turned on when you're doing housework, or sewing or anything else that is not primarily a mental activity. For such things, it's wonderfully companionable. But to read or write or hold an animated conversation in competition with a radio seems to me to show very little sense. As for playing bridge while a good program is going on—that, in my case, would be nothing short of moronic. I'm neither a frequent nor a skillful enough player to get on even passably without giving my full concentration to the game, and I don't want a good radio program to be going on unless I can give my full concentration to THAT. With better players, too, I suspect that the same principle might be applied with advantage.

MOST OF US live in a noisy and distracting world at best. And few of us know how to concentrate as well as we should. If we did, we would accomplish much more than we do. But our minds are pulled in half a dozen directions at once, which is wearing on our nerves and tempers, in addition to the damage it does to the minds themselves. That's one of the reasons so few of us have that most winning of all gifts—that of being a really good listener.

All this isn't against the radio—it's for it. It brings one the loveliest music there is, beautifully played, and surely one should listen to that with one's full, undivided mind. It brings one the most important news, adjusted and presented clearly and understandingly, which is an instructive and valuable time-saver. It brings one fine speakers and actors and entertainment of practically every type. If it brings a lot of trash, also, it is more than probable that that is because the public like it. But you don't have to listen to it.

If you live alone, try asking some friends in some night when there's a good program. Don't think you have to offer rival entertainment. Don't play bridge or anything else. Just listen, and have some simple refreshments afterwards, if you like. Perhaps your friends have got radios, too. It's more fun to listen to music and plays with someone else, just as it's more fun to go to the theater with another person, and to talk it over afterwards.

The radio is a much-abused instrument.

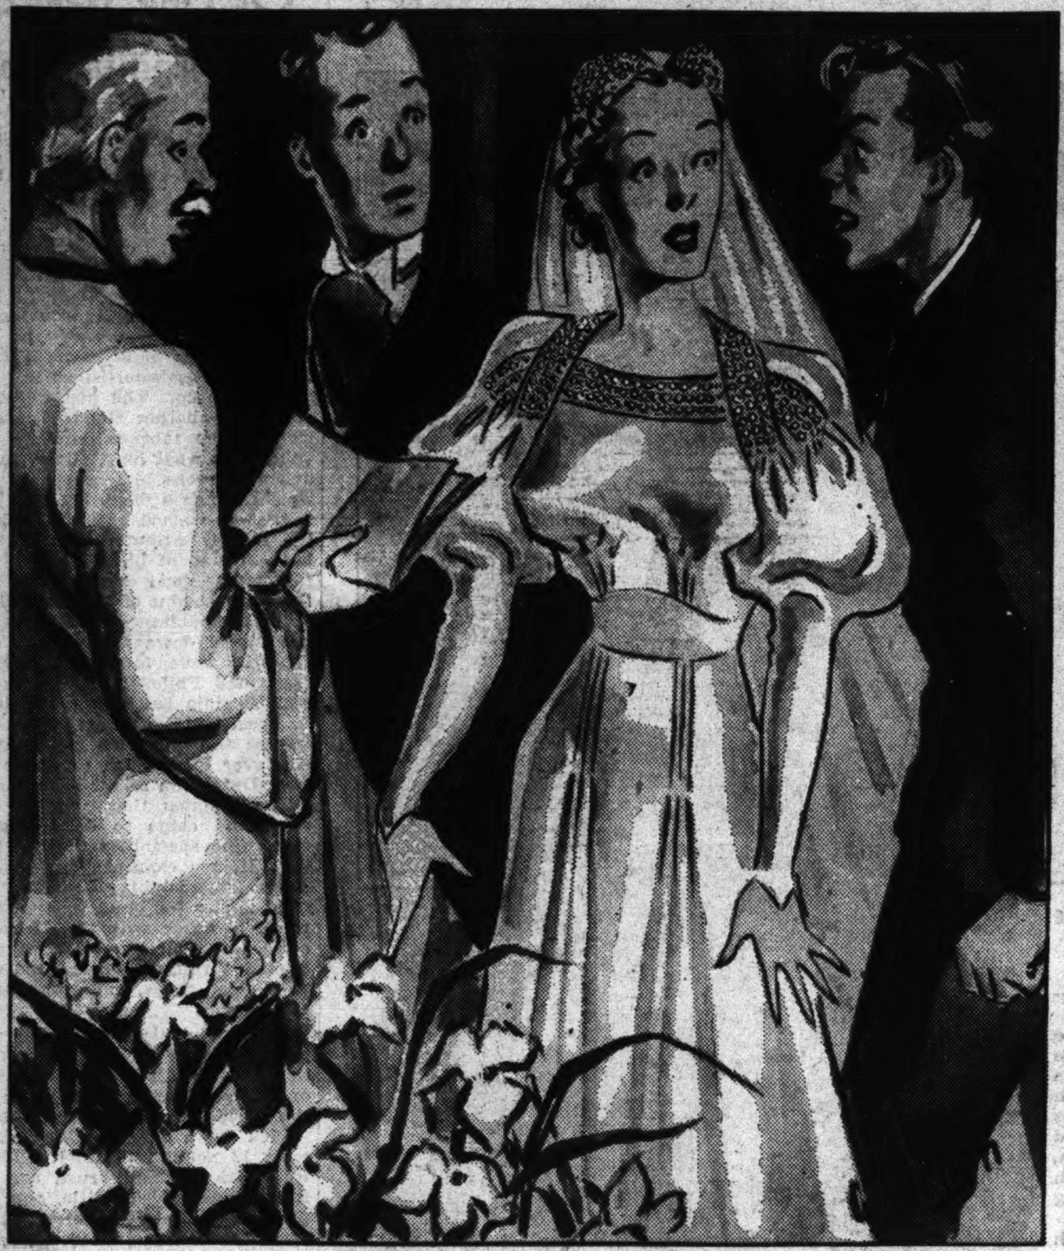
STYLE-SMILES -:- -:- — — — — — by Gretchen



"O. K.!—I'M THROUGH—I KNOW WHEN TO TAKE A HINT."

Do adopt the deposed swain's type of mind for the moment, just to the extent that the beauty of this bridal gown will filter into your consciousness gradually for full enjoyment of its perfection. An ivory satin robe, such as Romeo's Juliet might have worn, has deep tucks thickly banked with seed pearls surrounding the neck and crossing over rows of pearl-filled tucks at the square front neckline. (The halter effect thus achieved is a bow to tradition—and fashion decree—only.) And it serves, by releasing the tucks just below the shoulder, to create an abounding fullness in the sleeves—to just above the elbow where, as though echoing "for richer, for poorer," the satin narrows suddenly to a tight fitting sheath ending in a point extending well over the hand. A slim fitted waistline derives from inverted tucks from bodice to hip where the freed tucks ripple into big foamy satin billows. And, of course, a train, though a slight one in this case, and a filmy veil shed from a seed pearl headdress—for, even today, you might be a bride only once.

VII of England, founder of the House of Tudor.

After Charles I was beheaded Parliament ordered the regalia sold for what it would bring. The ruby was disposed of for four pounds. Breath-taking stories are told concerning the wandering of the fatal jewel, for its whereabouts were unknown until it was returned to the treasure vaults and placed in Charles II's imperial crown. From then to the present day its existence has been calm and undisturbed with the one exception of Colonel Blood's attempted theft of the valuables.

The four great pearls which hang beneath the arch in the King's State Crown were in the private collection of Queen Elizabeth. Could they speak they would tell of the defeat of the Armada, the dashing Earl of Leicester, the bold Sir Walter Raleigh, and the beheading of the Earl of Essex. Their story would include the details of the Puritan revolution, the riotous court life of Charles II, the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria, and the recent silver jubilee of his late Majesty George V and Mary, Queen Mother of England.

The State Crown is comprised then of the Black Prince's ruby, the four huge pearls which were the earrings of Queen Elizabeth, the tremendous Stuart sapphire, the 309-carat Star of Africa, 16 lesser sapphires, 11 emeralds, four pigeon-blood rubies, 1273 rose diamonds, 1376 brilliant diamonds, 147 table diamonds, and 273 perfectly shaped pearls.

FOR purity, color and brilliance the larger stones cut from the Star of Africa are the prized diamonds of the entire collection. This rare jewel was not discovered until 1904, and when found measured two and a fourth inches in width, and two and a half inches in depth, four inches in length, and weighed one and one-half pounds. The monster stone was first called the "Cullinan Diamond," named after T. M. Cullinan, manager of the Premier Mine at Pretoria, South Africa. Because a gem of such tremendous size could not be properly cut, the experts decided to divide it into the largest possible sizes. As a result of skilled craftsmanship the King's Sceptre now holds the largest portion, a perfect gem of 516½ carats; the King's State Crown is the resting place of a diamond weighing 309 3-16 carats. Two remaining portions, one 96-carat stone, is to be found in the band of the Queen's State Crown, and another 63-carat gem in the cross pate of the same diadem. The value of the original stone which weighed some 3025 carats, has been placed at 1,500,000 pounds.

When the Archbishop of Canterbury places the Queen's state crown on the head of Elizabeth, the assembled guests will again be awed by the sight of the Koh-i-nur diamond in the front of the glittering masterpiece. Appropriately called the "Mountain of Light," this unrivaled gem, weighing 106 carats, was cut from a mammoth stone of 1000 carats. It is believed to bring harm to any man who wears it, but its bloody history has brought only good fortunte to women who possess it. Worn by Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, and Queen Mary, it will now grace the head of Queen Elizabeth.

The Koh-i-nur was first heard of as the property of the King of Golconda, for it was found in his diamond mines in Southern India. The Great Mogul, Shah Jehan, desired to possess the gem and soon disposed of the lesser monarch, and added the jewel to his treasures, where it remained in the possession of various Indiana Emperors until 1739. Mohamed Shah, one of its possessors, lost his throne and not entrusting the Koh-i-nur to any of his retainers, always kept the diamond in his turban. The secret of its hiding place was divulged by one of his wives to the conquering potentate, Nadir Shah, who acquired the diamond through skill and diplomacy.

Persons of rank in the Orient wishing to pay respect to another man of similar station offered him his turban in exchange. Nadis Shah, King of Persia, arranged a great feast in honor of his captive, and as a gesture of peace offered to exchange turbans during the course of the banquet. Rather than lose his life in refusing to exchange, the guest of honor without the slightest hesitation or suggestion of the horror which seized his very soul, graciously donned the host's turban and in doing so lost the Koh-i-nur. Thus, the King of Persia acquired his prize, only to be murdered by his bodyguard, Ahmed Shah, who used the stone as a means of acquiring and founding the Durani dynasty in Afghanistan. Tracing the stone again to India, we find that it passed from one owner to another and that murder, death, unhappiness and disaster followed each one who possessed it until the Koh-i-nur was presented by the Army of the Punjab to Queen Victoria.

The four state swords in the regalia are—the Curtana, or Sword of Mercy, the Sword of Ecclesiastical Justice, the Great Sword of State, and the Sword of Temporal Justice.

—o-o—

AT the coronation of an English sovereign the symbolic emblems of royalty, besides those already mentioned, are brought from the Tower to Westminster Abbey where they are received by peers of the realm and high officers who, by right of heritage or appointment, take charge of them until the Archbishop places the regalia on the altar and later on the King's person. The important treasures in a royal coronation consist of the Ampulla or Golden Eagle, and the Spoon, holy relics which contain oil for the annointing of the King; the gold and diamond orb, surmounted with a cross, sign of Christian dominion in the world; the Scepter with the Cross, symbolic of kingly power and justice; the Scepter with the Dove, symbols of mercy and equity; the King's coronation ring, which dates from the reign of William IV and contains a large sapphire in the center covered over with a cross of narrow rubies in the form of a cross of St. George—the insignia of the Order of the Garter; and the Queen's ring of remarkable beauty.

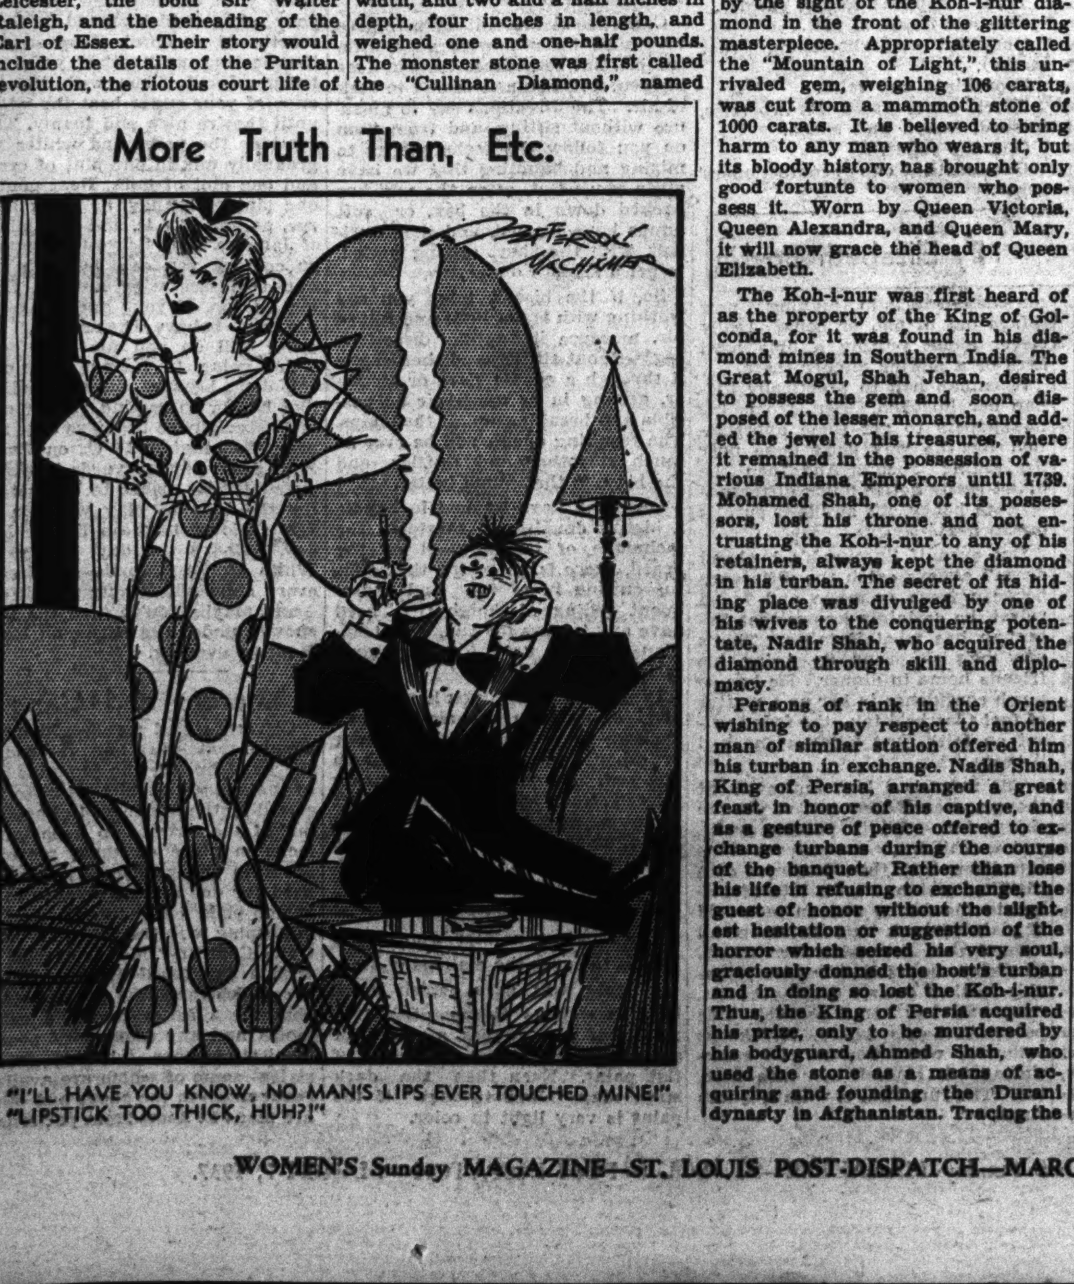
During the definite act of coronation the ruler holds the two scepters in his hands. The three crowns used are St. Edward's Crown, which is placed on his majesty's head by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and immediately exchanged for the Crown of State—the priceless emblem of royalty. The third, the Imperial Crown of India, is used when the King of England is crowned Emperor of India at Delhi.

The regalia of Queen Elizabeth at her crowning, which follows immediately that of George VI, will consist of regal robes similar to those of his majesty, two scepters, the orb, a ring and the State Crown.

The States maces of gold, weighing from 34 pounds, which is the lightest, to 50 pounds, the heaviest —are carried by officers of the State, accompanied by heralds who blow the fanfares on the silver State trumpets, announcing the entrance, crowning, and leave-taking of their majesties at the coronation service.

Thus sceptered, robed and crowned their Brittanic majesties George VI and Queen Elizabeth will ride forth in state. Guns will boom while millions cry "God Save the King!" "God Save the Queen!"

More Truth Than, Etc.



"I'LL HAVE YOU KNOW, NO MAN'S LIPS EVER TOUCHED MINE!"

Giving Proper Attention to Dress Details

Smart Ensembles Are Often Spoiled by Bit of Carelessness.

By Esquire

A SMART ensemble is often spoiled by lack of attention to the details of dress. For example, a man in a topcoat who does not wear gloves looks incompletely dressed. The absence of a breast pocket handkerchief in a good-looking suit leaves the observer with a feeling of something lacking.

It is only by giving the proper attention, which these details of fashion merit, that a truly smart ensemble may be achieved. Until the weather gets very warm indeed every man should wear gloves out-of-doors. In London and many continental cities, they are worn all through the summer, but this custom does not prevail in America.

The accepted types of gloves for men are: Buckskin, suede, chamois, cape, pigskin and mocha, and, in certain locales where the climate permits, the fabric glove. All of these, as well as string gloves, are suitable for spring wear.

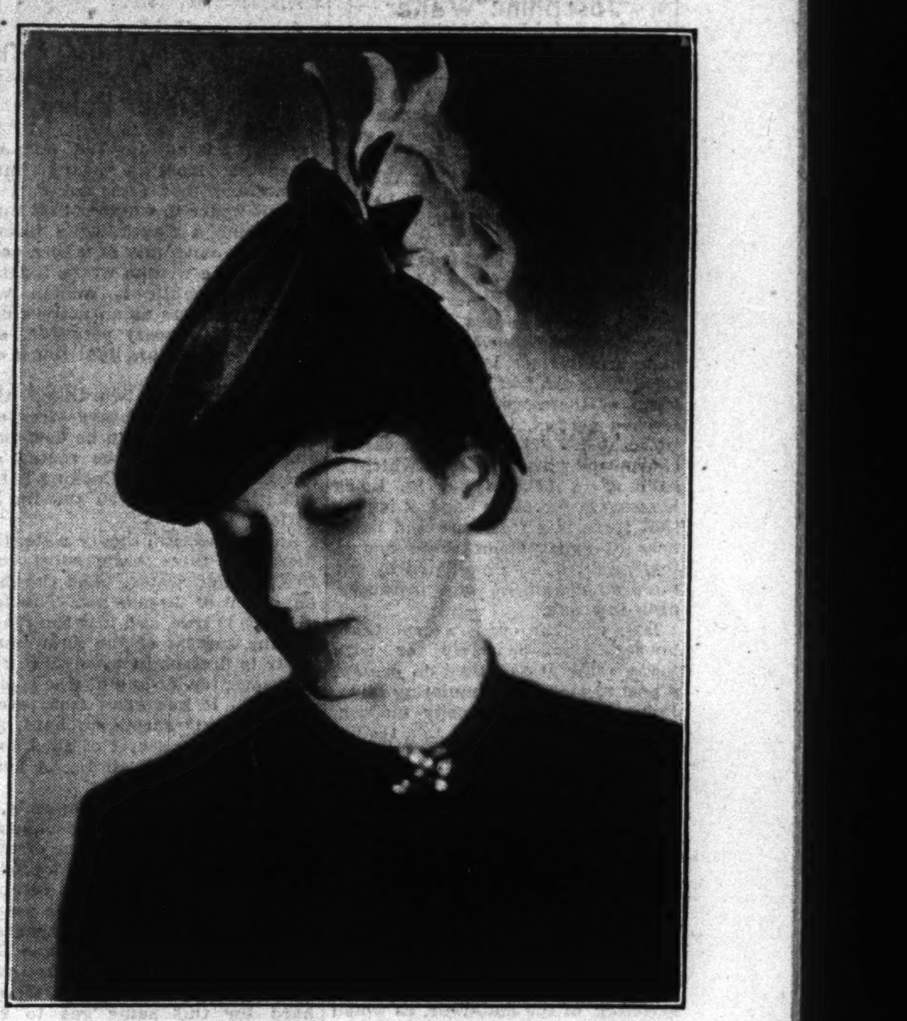
Heavy leather gloves, fur-lined gloves, and woolen gloves are designed for winter wear exclusively and have no place in the spring wardrobe.

The above types of gloves cover nearly all of the accepted leathers, but these are by no means interchangeable. In other words, each glove has a specific use. For town wear, with the homburg or bowler hat, the buckskin, chamois suede, or cape glove is recommended.

In the country, where a snap brim, semi-sports or pork pie hat is worn, a pigskin or string glove is best. The string glove may also be worn in town. Another smart accessory is a cigarette lighter. These come in a variety of models. One popular lighter carries no flint and is flameless. When it is snapped open a small circular receptacle for the tip of the cigarette pops up. A cigarette is inserted in this and by drawing on it, the cigarette becomes lighted.

The boutonniere has long been the hall mark of the fastidious man. Nothing adds so much to a smart ensemble as a flower in the buttonhole.

SPRING TURBAN



A SMALL ROLLED TURBAN OF NAVY STRAW, WITH GIANT MAGNOLIA AND GREEN FOLIAGE TRIM. A DRAMATIC EASTER HAT, IT IS CONSIDERED BY AMERICAN FASHION EXPERTS AS ONE OF THE MOST DARING AND BEAUTIFUL HATS FROM THE RECENT PARIS SHOWINGS.

"Parents Should Not Live With Their Grown Children"

By Elsie Robinson

IT'S a short, far too short, anonymous article in a current monthly magazine—the "Confession of Somebody's Mother," as told to Viola Paradise. But it should be proclaimed compulsory reading for all mothers of any age—and voted at least six Congressional Medals.

Instead of which, it'll probably start 7895 domestic riots—and I'll get the gong for applauding it. All because it blasts to smithereens the sentimental, traditional notion that mothers should live for and on their children forever and ever.

The writer of said article is a Dear Mother—aged 58—a widow with three grown children. Her children are all married, devoted to her, models in every respect. She spends nine months of the year visiting in their respective homes.

But does she enjoy it? SHE DOES NOT! To the contrary, she considers it a tiresome, exasperating, useless and generally revolting duty. And, despite their affectionate protestations, there is every evidence that her children regard it likewise.

All of which, she declares, is the natural reaction when parents are forced to live with grown children. And we'd have an infinitely happier and healthier world if we regarded it as such, and acted accordingly!

—o-o—

"THOUGH I LOVE my children dearly," says she, "and though they are above the average in considerateness of me, I hate living with them. My creed in this matter is this: Grown children should not need their parents. Parents should not need their grown children. Parents and grown children should not live together."

Reason being? Though there is plenty, or even a surplus, of "affection" between parents and grown children, there is rarely any real friendship. And this, the anonymous mother bravely declares, is Mom's own fault. She has disqualified herself for friendship by being "all mother."

"Mother love can be intelligent and beautiful. It can also be a devouring possessiveness. Most of us, on the birth of our young, degenerate from the allround persons we used to be, into mere mothers."

This she declares to be a delightful and necessary condition while the child is an infant, but an increasing burden and blight when Sister and Junior cease being precious pets and become real people.

How often is Mother willing, how often is she qualified, to meet and make that change? Mighty seldom!

The anonymous author does not make this point, but I do—with feverish enthusiasm. As a mother myself, I am fed up with the misuse of the term. Motherhood SHOULD be the most intelligent and inspiring service on earth, as well as the most sacred and beautiful. Actually, mothering is all too often a blanket alibi for 57 varieties of mental laziness, emotional self-indulgence, stupid sentimentality and allround cussedness.

—o-o—

WHY IS A MOTHER so often a total blank as a citizen? That's why. Motherhood gives her the chance our lazy human nature always seeks, to lie down on the job. With her baby's first cry she automatically acquires a pedestal and halo. And as much power as a dozen dictators. Why, then, should she struggle further? Answer is—she doesn't.

Then she wonders why her high school daughter doesn't seek her advice—why, later on, she frankly ignores it!

All of which boils down to the plain fact that mothers are people and should qualify as such. Nature never intended any maternal animal to "live for its child alone." Human parents, as well as the lower orders, were meant to separate from their offspring after the period of infantile helplessness has passed, and pursue their separate careers with mutual affection and regards.

That's the law. If you break it, Mom, there's hell popping! And you've only yourself to thank for lonely hours and dirty looks.

Armed with a knuckle duster against the possible attentions of "ossossins" and schooled in the canny knaveries of Dumbarton Road, Mr. Glencannon has prevailed against terrific odds in some of the most hair-raising adventures of modern times. The legend of his wanderings in pubs from Singapore to Galveston has been brought together by Mr. Gilpatric in a homeric volume known as "The Glencannon Omnibus," which reposes on our library shelf between "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" and "The Forsyte Saga."

EVERY SO OFTEN we drop around to the West Forty-sixth street shop of our scandalously color-conscious friends, the brothers Will and Sam McCrory. They make shirts and pajamas and such for Bill Leeds and Odd McIntyre and Johnny Weismuller and Jack Devereaux, and between them they haven't an inhibition so far as flaming, screaming broadcloths, silks and foulards are concerned.

Their present crop of shirting bolts run to polychromatic hysteria that would frighten a cowboy. Yellow backgrounds, with three-inch square overplaids of lavender and green and black, alternate tan and crimson checks as big as calling cards, puce and cinnamon candy stripes and vermilion and ochre checkerboard effects fit to induce hypnosis on the beholder.

Their window display resembles nothing as much as a blend of the techniques of Turner and Dali, and the brothers themselves subscribe to a sort of super-Dexter Fellows sartorial tradition, suits in race-track checks and shirts, ties and braces from their own fearful and wonderful stock. They say everybody will be wearing louder shirts by next summer and the terrifying part of it all is they are seldom wrong.

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 6.

CONCLUDING my stay in Florida, I would like to gather all my impressions together to give you a complete picture of the houses in this fantastic land. But that is almost an impossible thing to do, for there is so much good and so much bad, all gilded over by this glorious sunshine, that it is difficult not to lose one's sense of proportion.

Most of the houses that I have seen are extremely well co-ordinated as to architecture, landscaping and furnishing. In fact, my biggest criticism of them would be that they are too perfect, too mannered, too "decorated." They lack the casual charm and "lived-in" look which is so much a part of our St. Louis homes. On the other hand, it is true that there is a freshness and lightness of spirit about these houses that might well be emulated by our more staid and, in some instances, drab interiors.

But, whether you accept these houses whole-heartedly or with many reservations, they do present a host of new and stimulating ideas. Being in a vast majority modern, they might also be used as a testing ground by the rest of the country, as to what will prove livable and practical, as well as pleasing in the newest of all decorating styles.

—o-o—

● AS I HAVE SAID over and over again, most of the new houses down here are completely contemporary in spirit. But one has the feeling that the modern furniture here has been designed with the same attention to detail, the same care in the selecting, of the materials, as would go into the making of a fine Adam chair or a Louis XV desk.

—o-o—

Perhaps most interesting of all features of this furniture are the many new and exotic woods used in their construction. Acacia, Swedish oak, Hungarian olive ash, tamern, prinzwood, betula and kelabra are merely a few of these woods, their names alone giving some indication of their rarity. Most of these woods are blond in tone, for the new light finishes are even more popular down here than they have become in the North. Many of them are highly figured and most of them are merely given a clear lacquer finish to bring out the figure, and the blond tones of the wood.

—o-o—

● FLOORING, that feature of a room which many people regard merely as something to walk upon, is given its just decorative due in Florida homes. In fact, the floor is often one of the most decorative features of the entire room. Of course, many materials that would often seem cold or out of place in our homes are perfect in this warm climate. Tiles, Terrazzo, and marble are merely a few of the materials used over and over again, but most attractive of all are the wood block floors, laid in decorative patterns.

—o-o—

These floors, usually of oak, are most effectively and attractively finished without any stain, merely a coat of varnish, to give the blond finish that is so much in demand. The most beautiful floor I saw down here was one of these block patterns, made of burl maple and given a blond finish.

—o-o—

● DUE TO THE decoratice quality of the floors themselves and the warmth of the climate, rooms here are rarely carpeted and in fact, seldom have room-sized rugs. "Group" rugs are usually used—that is, small rugs, all of the same pattern, used with each individual furniture grouping. And these rugs are really very beautiful. Usually they are specially designed to fit the space they are to occupy and to blend with the general style and coloring of the room and its decoration. Most attractive of all are those with a flat background and the design worked out in hand tufting. Very clever and inexpensive, too, are rugs fashioned of regular carpeting felt.

A LITTLE DIFFERENT than the usual modern house, was one of Monterey, or as they call it down here, "Bahama" style. One of the most attractive and ingenious details of this house were the green "jalousies" or slat shutters used on both the exterior and interior. In addition to shutters on the windows, these slat doors were used with concealed wiring as screen doors, a most pleasant solution of an always awkward problem. These same slat doors were used most originaly off a gallery on the second floor. There was an upstairs sitting room with one entire wall of these shuttered doors opening into the gallery. They could be roled back completely when the room was being used as a sitting room, or they could close the room off when it was being used as a guest room.

LIGHT TOUCH Necessary in COOKING

Everything in Life Shrinks From a Heavy Hand, Including Biscuits

By Esther Foley

THE PRETTY TOPPING OF THIS PIE COVERS AN EVERYDAY STEW.

A CRISP CRUST OLD-FASHIONED SHORTCAKE.

THERE is nothing that does not shrink from a heavy hand, nothing that does not curl up and die under it, whether that thing is a child, a flower, or a biscuit.

When women talk of a born cook, they mean a woman whose touch is light and gentle—a woman who uses her fingers as an actress uses her voice to coax, persuade, and conquer. And, this light touch can be acquired.

There are just two things that can make a hand heavy—fear and dislike. The fear can be overcome, and dislike should be rooted out like a weed. Shoo! Cooking is fun, and it is good for you and for the nation.

An old chemical theory states that there are three basic substances: fire, air, and water. And the most important of these is air. This last, at least, is true, and it is the reason for the success of the light touch.

Air is present in everything that is porous, tender and of fine spongy texture. It has gone from everything that is shrunken, hard, and tough. So the secret of good cooking is to keep the air in. A heavy hand forces it out.

Baking powder, baking soda, or yeast are used to leaven doughs and batters, it is true, but none of these things can produce a light product if put to work in a hard, compact mass. It is so easy for the gas released by these leavening agents to fill air passages in dough and then expand in the heat of the oven, making the product light; it is so hard for this same gas to first force a passage, and then leaven. It cannot always do both, and as a result, muffins and cakes often have a damp grain full of tunnels.

Cooking lessons always start with biscuits, because every woman has to know how to make them, the need for them springs up so unexpectedly. Company comes, unannounced, for dinner, and a common, everyday stew must be turned into a meat pie; strawberries are in season, and the family demands the old-fashioned biscuit-type shortcake; it is your turn to have the bridge club, and when funds are low, fancy little biscuits fill the gap.

It is easy to keep air in the biscuit dough, and unless it is kept in, the biscuits are not fit to eat.

The flour must be sifted before measuring. Flour packs on standing, so don't sift a quantity today, and then use it tomorrow. Sift it just before measuring. The standard recipe yields one dozen medium-sized biscuits, and since biscuits are good toasted or reheated, make the whole recipe, even if there are just two of you to eat them. It requires some little experience to cut a biscuit recipe in half and still get good results. The amount of dough is so little that it just invites too much handling. Better start with the full recipe.

BISCUITS

Two cups sifted all-purpose flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-fourth cup shortening (not butter).
Three-fourths cup milk.

Add baking powder and salt to the flour, mix well, and sift together directly into the mixing bowl. With a pastry blender, two silver knives, or quick finger tips, cut the shortening into the flour. Work with the same motion you would use if you were beating egg whites with a wire whisk. This encloses lots of air. If you are using your finger tips, lift the flour from the bowl as you rub in the fat, letting it collect air as it falls back. And practice makes perfect.

When no large pieces of fat are visible, and the mixture resembles coarse cornmeal, make a well in the center, and add the milk all at once, stirring as quickly as possible until all the flour has been gathered into a dough.

Flour a board slightly, turn the dough onto it, and flour the surface of the dough very lightly, almost as though you were sprinkling it with sugar. Now, with the finger tips and the palm of the hand, knead the dough as lightly as you can, folding it toward you—just enough to smooth out the surface, making the dough easy to roll.

Dust the rolling pin lightly with flour, place it in the center of the dough, and roll toward you, lifting the pin in a sweeping motion, as it reaches the edge of the dough. Then, place the pin in the center of the dough and roll away from you. Never roll back and forth, as this flattens and crushes the dough.

When the dough is rolled evenly to one-half inch in thickness, cut with a biscuit cutter that has been dipped in flour. Cut straight down with one motion, no twisting. Biscuits cut this way will rise straight and even during baking.

Place the shapes on an ungreased sheet and bake them in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) 15 minutes or until done.

Do not squeeze the remaining scraps of dough together. Join them neatly side by side, pressing just enough to make them cling together; pass the rolling pin lightly over the dough, then cut in squares with a sharp knife and bake. The biscuits will be tender and light, if not as smooth in appearance as the first batch.

It should take about six minutes to make biscuits after all the ingredients have been assembled. We have included air by sifting the flour and cutting the fat. We have kept it in by touching the dough lightly, kneading it slightly, with all respect for its spongy properties. Never linger over a quick bread dough. The quicker the dough is in the oven, the better the biscuits.

Biscuits for a meat pie or for topping a stew are made the same as the standard biscuit recipe. They make a very pretty topping if they are placed on the stew mix in an interesting manner. Overlap them, like the petals of a flower, or cut crescent shapes, and place them in an attractive pattern.

Slip the casserole into a hot oven (450 degrees F.) and bake 15 to 20 minutes or until the biscuits are delicately browned and done through.

An old-fashioned shortcake has a special recipe, although the manner of mixing and handling it is exactly the same as the biscuit recipe. This shortcake is crisp and delicate, the berries are not crushed, but sliced and allowed to stand at room temperature with a sprinkling of sugar for an hour or more to bring out the juices. The berries are put between and on top of the shortcake about five minutes before it is served, so that the juice will have a chance to seep through the crisp crust bringing its sweet fragrance and lovely color with it. As every woman knows, every man likes a strawberry shortcake. When the luscious fruit of the trailing plant is in season, there's nothing else that quite takes the place of this particular dessert in the male's estimation.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

Two cups sifted all-purpose flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-third cup shortening (not butter).
Two-thirds cup milk.
Three pints fresh strawberries, washed, hulled and sliced.
One cup sugar.
One-fourth cup confectioners' sugar.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until mix resembles coarse cornmeal. Add milk, mixing quickly to form a soft dough. Turn onto lightly floured board. Knead slightly. Divide into two parts. Roll each part into a seven-inch circle. Fit into two ungreased layer cake pans. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 15 minutes or until done. Remove to cooling rack. If desired, spread tops generously with butter. Place one layer on serving plate. Mix berries and sugar. Cover first layer with half of berries, place other layer on top and add remaining berries. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Let stand five minutes before serving. Approximate yield: six portions.

For delicious crisp little tea biscuits, use the shortcake recipe, roll the dough to one-third inch in thickness, cut with a small cutter, sprinkle with coarse sugar mixed with a little cinnamon or grated orange peel. Bake in a hot oven 10 to 15 minutes. Approximate yield: Three dozen tea biscuits.

Commercial biscuit mixes give very nice biscuits with very little trouble, but sometimes trouble does happen, and again it is due to lack of air. The directions say to measure without sifting, and from then on you follow the technique as to mixing and handling that we have given you. But, often the mix has packed down in the box, or soft lumps have formed, and it is difficult, with the short mixing period, to get a smooth dough.

So, if the biscuit mix you are working with is not light and full of air, measure it as the directions say, without sifting, and then shake it through a coarse sieve or strainer, getting in as much air as possible and breaking up all the lumps. The resulting dough will be ever so much smoother and fluffier, and the biscuits that much better.

Once you have learned to handle a biscuit dough, and mastered the technique of handling it on the board, there is no recipe that calls for cutting in of fat, and consequent rolling of dough that need have any terrors for you. This technique can be used for any such recipe, even pastry.

In making pastry, you have to depend entirely on the air you can enclose—there is no baking powder or other leavening agent to help you out. Of course, the steam formed from the water does act somewhat as a leavening agent, but again, unless there are air passages which the steam can fill, the leavening action cannot take place.

The amateur painter who is ambitious to cover the mahogany stain on doors will save herself much time as well as disappointment in results if she applies a coat of aluminum paint before the coats of flat paint. Even then the dark stain may "bleed through" if the paint is very light in color.

FURNITURE IN BALANCE

By Elizabeth Boykin

"WE had the movies at our house last night—not by television, either!" remarked one of our friends when she stopped by to borrow our pinking shears (our most popular possession!)

She went on to say that she and William, her husband, had just been moving the furniture all around. Something had been out of balance with the old arrangement, but they hadn't figured out just what the trouble was till they started experimenting.

Then they discovered that in their attempts to get their comfortable furniture in conversational reach, they had all the fat fabric furniture together in one end of the room and all the wooden furniture in a clique at the other end of the room. And a large handsome secretary of mahogany didn't do its best for the room because it had been against a wall space just wide enough for it with no margin to frame it graciously.

What they did was to loosen up the arrangement. One longish narrow console table they grouped with two chintz covered chairs. And the sofa they moved where they could have it ensembled with a table big enough for tea things. This with a pair of wood frame open arm chairs made seating facilities for five, which is about as sociable as a grouping need to be. The other upholstered chairs and console did for more intimate occasions for two to talk. By making these two groups with the big pieces of the upholstered suite separated, the mood of the room was lightened and balanced.

Then the secretary was moved from the space it had occupied between the windows to the center of a wider wall area. Being a handsome piece of furniture they felt that it not only seemed more graceful in this more important place, but it had there more to contribute to the pattern of the room.

—o-o—

NOW, ON ANOTHER line for a moment—not that we advocate taking a husband by the ear and dragging him in to exclaim over the curtains you've just finished, or the new chair covers you've broken all your finger nails over, but honestly, a woman does need some enthusiasm once in a while over her accomplishments in making new things out of old, or being really clever about putting a blue bowl here or a pewter pitcher there.

Susannah had to practically kidnap her husband, Ben, from his newspapers to get some appreciation for the way she's done over her dining room. And then he didn't really notice much difference—"Sure honey, it's swell—it sure is pretty neat."

But even if Susannah's husband doesn't always catch the difference between fresh cretonne and faded velvet, he certainly knows that Susannah has what it takes. That's why he's so proud to bring his friends home to dinner. He has so much confidence in her as a matter of fact that he'd take the faded velvet on faith, just because she had it there.

The room is a big improvement though, even if Ben doesn't get the fine points. White painted walls, yellow ceilings, a peacock blue broadloom rug, then draperies of a thrilling cretonne with lots of yellow in the design and an inch fold of plain peacock blue for accent all around the draperies for finish. The chair seats have white washable leather seats. On the buffet, Susannah has some peacock blue porcelain bowls where she keeps yellow or white flowers. Or sometimes pink gladioli are nice here, too. The furniture is walnut-Queen Anne.

Rector Writes Of Fine Baked Virginia Ham

And Discusses Other Dishes of States Bordering Southland.

By George Rector

WHEN Hendrik Hudson landed near Chesapeake Bay he and his crew made a meal from dry currants, whortleberries and green tobacco. The history books don't say whether Hendrik ate or smoked the tobacco, and we can only guess what his feelings, inside and out, were like when he had finished such a meal. My own idea is that he wished he were back on the stormy Atlantic with nothing but a pound of black biscuit. Certainly that meal doesn't give you the vaguest hint of how exceedingly well inhabitants of that region have lived down the years. Could Hendrik have foreseen Maryland crabs and Philadelphia pepper pot and Virginia baked ham? I doubt it, because I imagine the whortleberries and green tobacco canceled whatever talents for prophecy the good Dutchman might have had.

These states that border our Southland came to develop some extra fine specialties in the food line. If, for example, you've ever eaten Philadelphia scrapple and fried apples for breakfast you'll be prone to agree with me. If you've come up squarely against a well-cooked Virginia ham, poured over with cider sauce, you won't argue at all.

Baked Virginia ham, by the way, is all the more appropriate to mention because it's the mainstay dish of Easter Sunday in this part of the world. Here's the way to do it:

Pick out a ham weighing at the most 12 pounds. Scrub it all over well with a small brush and put it in a good-sized kettle, cold water to cover. Into the kettle put one small bayleaf, one sliced onion, two or three branches of celery, two sprigs of parsley and two sliced carrots. Bring your water to the boiling point and simmer the ham slowly for four full hours. When time's up, lift out the ham from the broth, put it down on a firm surface and peel off the top skin, leaving a little around the shank end. Then put the ham in a baking pan, fat side up, together with one cup of hot water and one cup of cider. Put it in a moderate oven for one hour, and baste every 10 minutes or so. When it is finished, score the fat surface evenly and spread it with brown sugar and bread crumbs. Dot it with cloves and put it back in the oven for browning. Do not baste during the time it is browning.

—o-o—

NO VIRGINIAN will forgive you if you forget the cider sauce—which is as follows:

Put one cup of the ham liquid into the pan in which the ham was baked. Cream butter and flour for thickening purposes and bring the sauce to a boil. Then add one-third of a cup of cider. Season the sauce with just a few grains of paprika and be sure to strain it before you serve.

The citizens of Philadelphia and round about have a pleasant custom of drinking eggnog on Easter Sunday. It's just like having New Year's day twice over, and this is the prescription:

Separate six eggs and beat the yolks with one-half the portion of your sugar—which should be three-fourths of a cupful. Keep on with the beating until the yolks are lemon-colored. Then with the balance of your sugar beat the whites until they're nice and foamy. Then combine the yolks and whites and gradually mix in one pint of cream and one pint of milk. Next pour in one pint of brandy, or one pint of rye, as you like it, and two ounces of Jamaica rum. Serve the eggnogg as cold as you can get it in six-ounce glasses with nutmeg floating on top. If your guests are polite and behave themselves, this order will do you for 12.

I'm going to include one more egg dish, because there's nothing like Easter to remind you of eggs, and especially so if you've ever been near Washington, D. C., on Easter. Eggs from poultry yards the world over must be rushed to Washington for the kids to play with on the White House lawn on Easter Monday. That's the day when the White House grounds are free to every child who wants to roll eggs—and maybe you've seen the lawn, snowed under egg shells, on Easter Monday evening.

Aprons and Caps

Cleverly styled aprons which have caps to match are not intended for the maid but for the feminine head of the household. The caps are suggested by the designers to keep dust out of the hair or to keep unruly locks in place on those mornings spent in the garden. Gingham is used for one set which goes in for Scotch plaid designs and adds a cap in keeping with the theme. A "Mary Quite Contrary" idea is carried out with a gay floral print which has a cap designed like grandmother's bonnet. A sailor theme, a soldier model and any number of peasant inspirations are included in the styles—some of which are available ready made in the shops and others are made at home from patterns.

SCIENTIFIC EQUIPMENT FOR MODERN GARDENERS

By Harriet W. Chandler

THE old-time garden hotbed is in the discard, along with the horse and buggy of another day. Now, instead of the old hotbed, we have electric wires and thermostats for seedlings in the garden, like incubators for babies in a hospital. And with this scientific equipment our young plants come through with greater certainty than ever before.

The heat in the old hotbed was created by the fermentation of fresh manure, a thick bed of it beneath the screened soil in which the seeds were planted. The first day or two the sash was raised in order to let surplus heat escape. Then the seeds were planted and the sash was lowered.

When we forgot to raise the sash on a sunny day, the heat from below might kill some or all of our plants. If we forgot to cover the sash with a mat or blanket in a sudden cold wave, the heat from below might not suffice to keep some or all of our plants from freezing.

After the automobile displaced stables the hotbed became somewhat of a problem. It was then that the electric hotbed stepped in as answer to the home gardener's prayer. There is nothing novel about the electric hotbed except a new heating unit as simple as an electric toaster on a large scale. Once installed it is there and ready to serve year after year at any desired temperature as well as for a cold frame. No longer is there need for purchasing new heat each season and digging the whole place deep again and again.

—o-o—

THE HEATING WIRES or cables are heavily protected by a lead coating, and run back and forth across the hotbed about six inches beneath the surface of the soil and 18 inches apart. A thermostat completes the outfit, attached to a thermometer so as to turn on the heat for cold nights and to reduce it during the warmer days, maintaining a temperature between 70 and 75 degrees. Germination is no more rapid, bu is surer than in the old beds, and there is far less "damping-off." A the roots do not go down into the richness of manure they make a more compact root system which i easier to transplant.

Annuals which are of slo germination can be started as earl as the middle of February and b the first of March any of the re can go in. A little extra heat wi develop the plants so that they wi bloom two or three weeks ahe of those started in a cold frame.

As the plants are hardened of in a cold frame before taking thei places in the garden, the hotbed can be used for the summer flowering bulbs. Tuberous rooted begonias, tuberoses, and montbretias planted in individual pots will develop fine roots in its cozy shelter and be ready to bloom earlier for their experience.

Cuttings of roses and oth woody plants will come along fi in this hotbed, for the electricity will supply just that bottom heat so much recommended for them in books. When the plants can take care of themselves the heat i switched off and the sash become an ordinary cold frame.

—o-o—

IN MANAGING an electrically heated hotbed one should remember that there is no such reserv supply of moisture below, as there was in the damp manure of th old-fashioned bed. These bed must be watered every day becaus of the constant drying which oc curs as the heat emanates from th cable below.

Another thing to remember that watering of seedlings shoul always be done in the early mor ing and never at evening. Th spores of disease thrive in da darkness and cause seedlings "damp-off." When watered in th morning the sun will dry the su face of the soil somewhat befor night.

warmer weather put an end to the irregularities. The librarians gave no further thought to the phantom guest until one day along in the summer a letter came.

The writer identified herself as the girl who sat back in the stacks reading many hours every day for a week or more. She thought they might have noticed that someone was spending the night in the library. She was the culprit. She had slept on the couch because she had no place else to go at night. She had taken the dabs of food and the compact and the coins. That was all that had kept her together. Now she had a job, for which she felt the library's hospitality was indirectly to be thanked.

In the next mail came the "borrowed" compact and the money.

Features of General Interest

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, March 6.

WITH Lent drawing to its inevitable close, the Broadway theater nears the end of its appointed tether. Twenty new shows are hoped for, but not definitely promised, during March and April—after which Thespis moves to the nearby reformed cow-barns of Connecticut, where she will try out new plays for the coming season.

The great Theater Guild, having run out of Lunts and Fontannes for the year, has another show to do—this time a thrilling dog comedy which has to do with an unpaid dog—certainly a novel dramatic subject. Helen Deutsch, the press agent, had a field day trying to sign the proper pooch, and finally settled on a shaggy mongrel named "Colonel," which got his picture in the papers together with lovely Claudia Morgan, the daughter of the clever Frank, and who has a speaking role in the opus. Thus it will take a "Colonel" to brighten what looks like a dull spring in Times Square.

We shall have, of course, some performances of Shaw's "Candida" by the wide-eyed Cornell, and they'll be well worth visiting. And we are definitely promised something from California called "Sun-Kissed" — oddly enough, not a satire on the movie people. We've had more than enough of those in the theater, good as some of the shows have been.

So from now until hot weather we shall have to be content with our hits—"You Can't Take It With You," "Stage Door" and a few more, including "Victoria Regina," a sturdy holdover.

—o-o—

Speaking of Victoria, little Helen Hayes is still determined to shut up that spanking hit and go to London in time for the Coronation. The show could probably run all summer if little Mrs. McArthur didn't have such a whim of iron! Even so, that's a hard baby to play, and she's earned a rest.

—o-o—

● AND SPEAKING of the ceremonial crowning of George, I hear they've already closed the greater part of Westminster Abbey to prepare the great old fane for the glamorous affair. Normally seating 2500, the Abbey will get three additional tiers of wooden seats for the occasion. Wonderful how the obscure peeresses turn up for this imperial show, which happens so rarely!

—o-o—

The big movie hit of the hour here is the new Grace Moore film, "When You're in Love." And is she a smart show-woman, this big Jellico blonde! At the premiere at our Radio City Music Hall she turned up on the dot at intermission, swimming in floodlight, and that lovely smile going full blast. She even waved her hanky at the 6000 worshipping customers, then was hostess to a big group of Large, Invited Names. In short, it was a typical Grace Moore triumph, and when Grace bears down hard, such things are guaranteed!

—o-o—

● NOW THEY'RE hunting frantically for a movie name to replace Margaret Sullavan when Mrs. Heyward retires from the cast of "Stage Door" to have her baby. At the moment of rushing to press, the two mentioned most often are Janet Gaynor and Joan Bennett. Either would be a fair choice, I think. But Sullavan is well in the part, and will really be hard to replace.

—o-o—

Who remembers Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, as pretty a lass as ever faced a jury? You may be interested to know that Evelyn is still earning her living as a cabaret entertainer here and about. At present she's working at a place called Flynn's over in Brooklyn, and getting, they say, $175 a week, which is not soy beans. The girl is still pretty, for all the 30 years that have rolled away since the notorious Thaw trial. Her big son, Russell Thaw, is one of the country's leading transport air pilots.

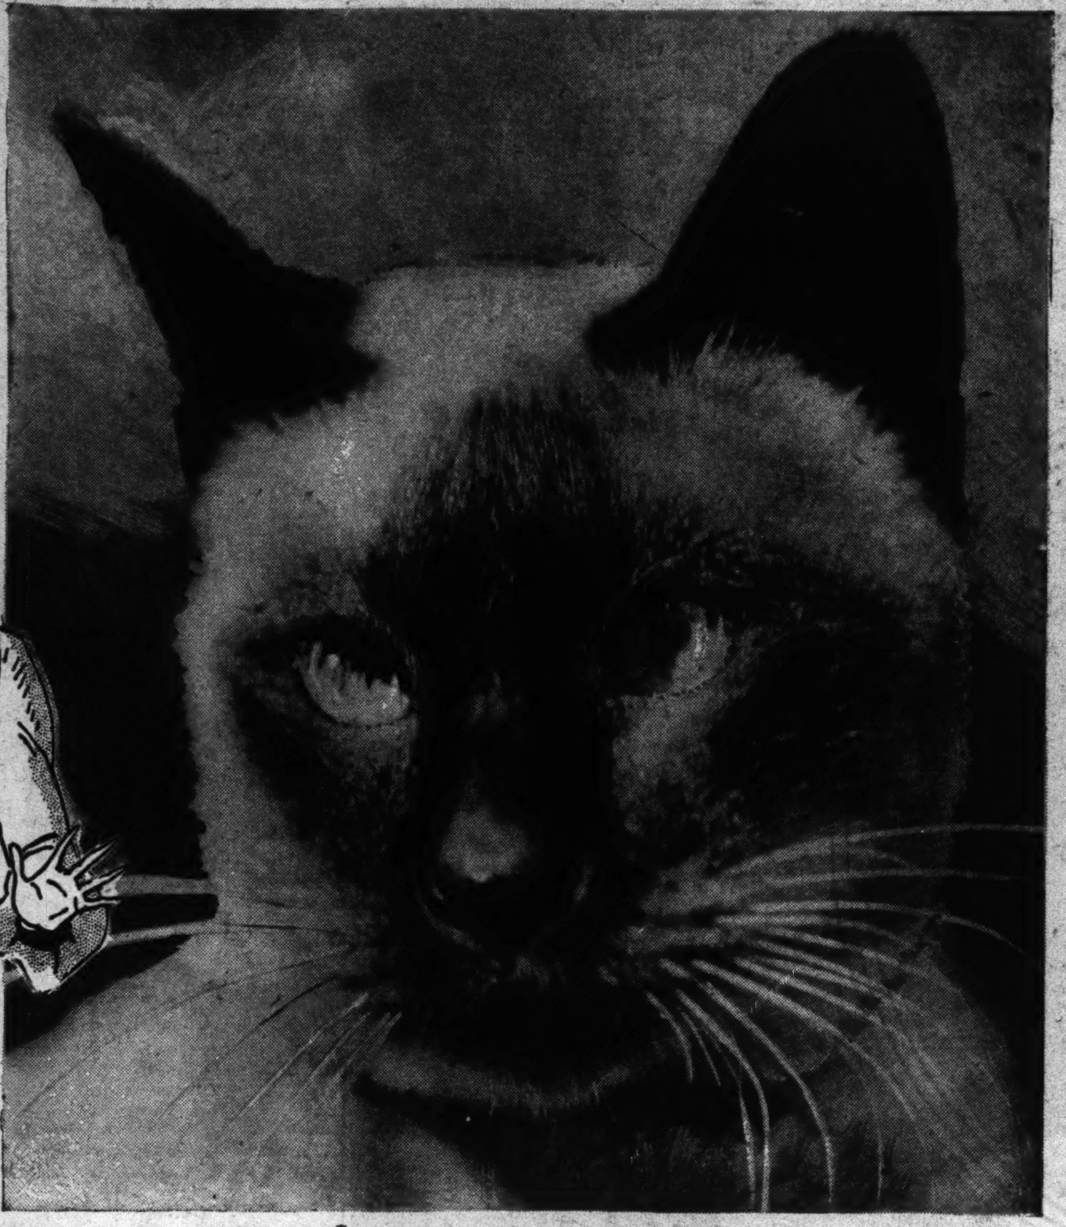
SHE HAS BITTER HATRED for CATS

Woman Writer's Charitable Disposition Doesn't Extend to Feline Family

By Mary Cambridge



... SADISTIC FIENDISHNESS MARKS EVERY CAT.

BEWARE THE TREACHEROUS PURR OF FRIENDSHIP.

I'M A LOVER of nature. I adore the birds, the bees and the elephants in the zoo. Practically every manifestation of animal or vegetable life to be found in Mother Nature's earth-sea-and-air-lined pockets is dear to my heart. But I hate cats.

My disposition is charitable and affectionate to an extreme. "Peace on earth, good-will to man—and beast," is my motto. Tolerance is my chief virtue. But I hate cats. I despise them with a passion contrary to every tenet of my faith and philosophy. I loathe them with a revulsion born neither of fear nor of exasperation aroused by the contempt and indifference with which they regard the attempted friendliness of humans. I abhor them only because they are cats, and—being cats—possess all the sneaky, treacherous, perfidious traits common to the species.

Cat haters—and you find that nine out of every 10 individuals you query on the subject may rightfully be classed as such—fall into three general categories. The first group's animosity is largely pathological in origin; these people suffer from "cat-fear." Many cases, at some time in their lives, in early childhood usually, were frightened by a cat and developed a resultant phobia—a mental idiosyncrasy which often induces physical illness on even so slight a provocation as the distant appearance of a cat to the vision of a sufferer from this psychosis.

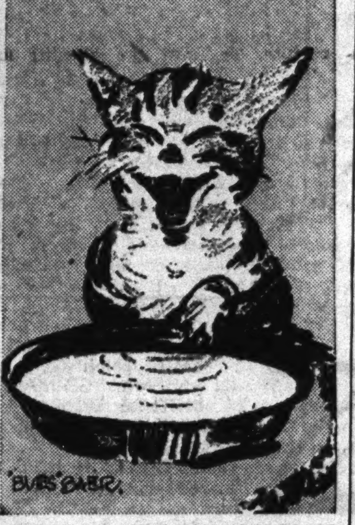
It is not far-fetched to see as the causation of this unfortunate "disease" more than simply the subconscious memory of an unpleasant incident connected with a cat. Nature, ever maternally protective, invariably affords her children warnings of imminent danger. When, for example, an individual's physiological system is such that certain ordinary healthful foods are poisonous to him, his body signals "beware" by producing skin-rashes, nausea and other sentinels of alarm. So, too, I believe, "cat-fear" and its attendant physical and mental disturbances are harbingers of the venomous character of the furry, night-prowling parasites we so blindly refer to as "pets."

People comprising the second group of Cat-Haters take exception to the hypocritical, "un-petlike" nature of the cat. They resent the condescending attitude with which the creatures accept gratuities from their human benefactors. Cats are notoriously barren of the saving graces of allegiance, good-fellowship and gratitude which we expect of any constant guest within our home—whether the recipient of our hospitality is two or four legged.

A majority of cat-haters, however—constituting the third group, of which I am a member—detest these so-called "pets" only because of their basically insidious and anti-social characteristics. The universal struggle for existence perhaps justifies the murderous maraudings to which any living organism must be a party in order to maintain his own life. But who can condone the perverted "sense of humor"—the sadistic fiendishness—which underlies every cat's favorite sport of first painfully crippling a lesser adversary—such as a bird—then playing with the tortured creature almost endlessly before striking the mortal blow which would put the poor suffering object out of its misery? Even the dictionary bears printed testimony of the justice of the inherent feelings of the third group of cat-haters. To quote: Feline, adj. pertaining to, or resembling a cat; stealthy, treacherous."

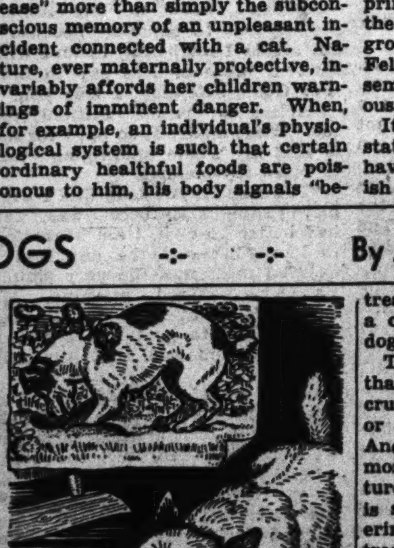
It is significant that innumerable statues, poems and other laudations have been dedicated to the unselfish heroism and loyalty of dogs: but very few cats, if any, have been so honored.

No doubt there is a minority of people who are not ashamed to identify themselves as cat-lovers and who will take exception to these arguments. Well, it takes all kinds of people to make up a world. BUT—I hate cats! And so does 99 per cent of our population.



... EVEN A CAT'S LAUGH IS FALSE. (ONE OF ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER'S FAMOUS SKETCHES OF GRINNING KITTENS).

CALLING ALL DOGS -:- -:- By Albert Payson Terhune



THERE are two bad habits which seem to come naturally to many young dogs, turning them from pets into pests. One is chewing. The other is digging. Both habits are breakable. At least I have found them so, with my own dogs. The digger dog is a scourge to lawns and to flowerbeds. He loves to dig deep and raged holes in these. If he lives in a city flat or house, he is liable to dig holes in rugs.

Here is a cure I have tried, many a time. Always, after a few repetitions, at most, it was successful: I sprinkled red pepper liberally over the flower border or section of the lawn which was his favorite digging ground. Sneezing and with smarting eyes he backed away from his task of destruction. Presently he found the fun wasn't worth the pain. He dropped the habit.

When a young dog of mine chews cushions and rugs and the like, I steep the edges of such cushions or rugs in a strong solution of quinine. The horribly bitter taste cures him.

By way of warning, let me say a man wrote me years ago that he had tried the red pepper cure for a digger dog, and that the poor brute sneezed himself to death. It is only fair to you that I quote his statement. But I don't believe it.

—o-o—

I HAVE TOLD YOU dogs differ as much in character as do children. One dog cringes at a sharp word, as piteously as at a blow. Another would be unimpressed in mind and spirit by far harsher treatment. It is up to you to make a careful study of your own new dog's disposition.

Treat him accordingly, as long as that treatment does not involve cruelty or brutality. High-strung or clever dogs are easy to spoil. And a spoiled dog is one of the most worthless—if amusing—creatures on earth. The highstrung pup is still easier to turn into a shivering coward, if he be unwisely treated.

Above all, teach your dog, at the outset, to obey you. This is more or less easy, if you go about it sanely and with wise patience. And it is all-necessary.

Give him as few commands as you can. But see to it that he obeys those few, even if you have to spend an hour at a time to teach him to do so. Throughout, keep your temper.

Patient human will-power at last has a tremendous effect on any dog. If you give him an order and then do not insist on its enforcement, he knows at once that he can disobey you whenever he may choose to. Teach him to mind, when he is young, and he will be obedient for life.

Odd Adornments

A boutonniere made up of the commonest types of field flowers is hard to equal in springtime chic, but if you want to be original, why not wear a beaded bug or a colorful feather butterfly? Odd-looking accessories to adorn spring suits are appearing in the shops.

Included in the costume pieces for more formal use are jeweled flowers for wear on a dress, frail feather flowers for wear in the hair and beaded novelties to adorn belts, cuffs and handbags. Glittering effects are stressed in the knickknacks for evening wear, the tendency being to create illusions of grandeur.

Paisley Turban

A Paisley turban is the type of early spring hat which can be worn for daytime as well as for evening and with winter coats or spring frocks. Since a spot of bright color continues to be important in the planning of a costume, the little hat can supply this emphasis for black, navy, red or brown. Most of the turbans are designed with that careless draping which suggests manipulation of a bias strip of material with every wearing because casualness is part of their charm.

Medicine as Practiced by The Chinese

New Methods are Replacing the Old, Physician Writes.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

ABOUT all that most people know concerning the practice of medicine in China is that the doctor is paid to keep you well: no fee when he attends you for illness. And that isn't true.

I recently saw a collection of instruments and objects used in medical practice in China. Also textbooks in medicine.

One curious object was a small soapstone image of a Chinese lady. Every Chinese household of the upper class had one of these, for the benefit of the doctor. A doctor in China, in the old days, would not be allowed to examine a woman's body under any circumstances. So the sick woman made a mark on the little naked image where she had a pain, and the attendant took the image to the doctor, who thereupon prescribed the treatment.

A great deal of the practice of medicine was taken up with acupuncture. This was a system of sticking needles underneath the skin of the sick person. Elaborate charts of the human body were made, and spots marked on them where the acupuncture needles were to be inserted for various diseases. The makers of these charts must have known a great deal about anatomy, for the needles are stuck in exactly where there are no blood vessels or nerves in the way.

—o-o—

I HAVE HEARD an eye witness tell of seeing a Chinese doctor insert one of the acupuncture needles into the soft tissue of the neck exactly over the top of the breastbone to a depth of three or four inches. That would take some skill to keep from hitting the large blood vessels. The needles are not sterilized; in fact they are lubricated in the doctor's hair. If the patient gets worse after the treatment this is always ascribed to the disease. Clever, these Chinese.

The tongue book was the one in the collection which particularly caught my attention. Pictures of the appearance of the tongue in different diseases. People of my generation will remember when the doctors of our country used to look at the tongue first thing. They seldom do it now. Perhaps the interest the Chinese show in it is due to the fact that the tongue is affected in conditions of poor nutrition, when vitamins and fresh food are absent from the diet. Such conditions would be very common in China.

New scientific methods in medicine are coming into China to replace the old methods. In this same exhibit were a number of the health posters of the new China. They teach graphically by pictures: one set shows the care given the prospective mother and the new-born baby. Others show foods containing vitamins, and vaccination against smallpox and diphtheria. Most graphic were the ones designed to prevent the spread of animal parasites—liver flukes especially, so common in China, almost unknown in this country of comparatively good sanitation and plumbing.

The new medicine will overcome the old Yang and Yin medicine, as described by Mrs. Alice Tisdale Hobart in her recent novel of that name.

Paisley Patterns

Paris has become so enthusiastic over Paisley patterns that the owner of an heirloom paisley shawl may consider herself lucky. Evening wraps, daytime coats, blouses, hats and sashes all show the influence of the rich Scottish designs. Daytime modes adopt the theme for decorations rather than entire costumes, a striking example being a twilled bolero suit which has blouse and skirt binding of the printed fabric.

Separate Sleeves

PARIS.—A white hostess gown has separate puffed sleeves that start at the elbow and finish at the wrist, leaving the arm bare above the elbow. Exotic-looking bracelets made of satin bands studded with colored stones head the sleeve puffs and match the jeweled belt.

BACKWARD PUPILS NEED HELPFUL ENCOURAGEMENT

By Angelo Patri

CHILDREN who are struggling with their lessons need hope and encouragement more than they need criticism and correction. One little boy could not spell. Every day his paper was handed back with a column of crosses down the side. A big number at the top, in red, so all who looked might see, said, "Nine wrong."

Nine words out of 10 wrong. Dreadful! Complete failure. "Your spelling is simply awful, George Johnson. You remain in at recess time and write every word 10 times. Maybe you'll learn to spell another one."

Nothing worse than that could happen to George Johnson. Of all the children in the class, he needed encouragement. More than any of them he needed the teacher's smile and a word of understanding to give him hope of a better day. More than any of them he needed to play with a light heart for the few minutes of the recess. None of the help he needed was allowed him. He was shamed and punished and deprived of the relief he needed, deprived of the power he must have to succeed.

—o-o—

IT IS ALWAYS better to show a child how many he had right than to put the emphasis on the number he had wrong. He will not forget them, never fear. The ones he missed stand out like sore thumbs in his memory.

He did not fail because he wanted to. He would love to have a hundred per cent, love to have the teacher say, "And George Johnson has the best paper, the neatest, the best written in the whole class. Stand up, George, and let the class look at a fine pupil." How he would love that. He even dreams about it. And then he gets eight, nine, 10 wrong.

When a pupil fails like that, don't stop to worry about the number he has wrong. Tell him he is going to do better by and by and that you are going to help him. Take him for an examination by a specialist. Find WHY he cannot see and hear and feel the right way to spell a word. There is a reason, and it is beyond his control.

Scolding children, who fail spectacularly, is useless. Punishing them is cruel. By sorting the work of the class for a few weeks the teacher soon sees the group that cannot do the work. What they need most is to discover a way to succeed in something. Success is a tonic to the body and mind. The first task of the teacher is to find a way that allows each child in the lowest quarter of the class to shine, if not in the field of the curriculum, then in some other field.

—o-o—

AFTER WINNING the children's confidence and trust in this way, have them tested. If there is no possibility of this, get hold of some tests and practice giving them, according to directions, until you are sure you can give them the right way. Don't be satisfied with one test. Keep giving it, in different forms, until you are sure you have the right answer.

Ask the nearest doctor for help. He will have eye and ear tests and some other tests that will help you get to the root of the children's troubles. Doctors in country towns are proverbially kind. Ask them for help. Keep searching for ways to help these failing ones and you will at least make them happy, at least find a way to make them useful to themselves and other people.

Begin by marking how many they got right, and smiling encouragingly at them.

Turbans Popular

It's been a long time since the milliners took so much interest in draped turbans as a spring style. Those little Persian headdresses which are seen about town seem to be responsible for the enthusiasm and have started the women off on a between-season orgy of turbans. In addition to the printed types there are turbans of the new pliable straw and of straw combined with felt. The alliance of two colors or two materials invariably goes with the trend.

Variety In Daily Fare

By Damon Runyon

NEW YORK, March 6.

A DISPATCH from Washington states that Mr. Roosevelt has demanded a little more variety in his daily fare. He has filed a protest against too much liver, and string beans.

What is more, he is getting somewhere with his squawk. The good wife has called a meeting of her kitchen cabinet to think of something new.

We extend to Mr. Roosevelt our hearty congratulations. We hope we may one day have the privilege of meeting him, and shaking his hand, and personally expressing to him our admiration of his stand in this matter. He is a man among men.

Now, we have no personal quarrel with the string bean. It is an unassuming, unprepossessing offshoot of Mother Earth, and we doubt that it is altogether to blame because it happens to come under the classification of "green vegetable" that housewives deem a necessary fodder for their husbands.

Left to its own devices, the string bean would perhaps not obtrude itself upon our notice. It would, we have no doubt, be content to go on growing to maturity, and quietly returning to seed, or whatever it is a string bean returns to, without ever once offending the gastronomical sensibilities.

—o-o—

But, unfortunately for the string bean, it has a nature that keeps it green at seasons of the year when there are few other vegetables around. Thus it is the first thing the housewife, more mindful of her husband's stomach, than of his palate, reaches for when she goes to market.

So the string bean, innocently enough, we think, has acquired a poor reputation in husband circles. We have heard low mutterings against the constant overplus of string beans in husband circles for years.

But it has taken the President of the United States to come out in open revolt against it, a mighty brave gesture when you consider that it may cost him the support of the string bean growers of America.

—o-o—

● IN OUR OPINION, the trouble with the string bean in this country is the way it is handled. Under certain culinary circumstances and in moderation, the string bean is by no means as bad as it seems to be painted in New York restaurants, where they seem to paint it an emerald hue.

Down South, their method of dealing with the string bean is to boil it in with ham hocks, and new potatoes, all properly seasoned. This produces a mighty savory dish, and you scarcely notice the string bean.

The Italians can do tricks with the string bean, too. They take a string bean and cook it with cheese on it, or with a brisk condiment known as marinera sauce.

—o-o—

THE RISE OF LIVER to a place of prominence on the dining room table of these United States of America is one of those from-rags-to-riches stories.

We knew liver when it was practically a pauper. The lads around our old home town out in Colorado used to go down to the slaughter house on killing days when they were knocking off steers, calves, pigs, sheep and the like, and the slaughter house men would toss them more liver than the boys could lift. It was good for fish-bait.

There was no difference in liver, as far as the slaughter house men were concerned. They chucked out calves' liver as freely as they did sheep liver. The fish did not seem to notice any difference, either.

The butchers in our town always kept a little loose liver handy, so they could throw in a chunk of it for the cat with a purchase of round steak or pork chops. Cats are notoriously fond of liver. If a butcher in our town had charged for a piece of liver, he would have been regarded as an usurer.

—o-o—

It is true that we occasionally heard of people who cooked, and ate liver. We were inclined to doubt the tale.

Now they sell liver in this country by the karat. It got bruited about some years ago that liver contains an ingredient that is good for what ails you, and people took to eating it for their health. The price went up. The liver tastes just the same to us.

—o-o—

● WE DO NOT RECALL just what it is that the liver is good for. However, we have learned that the only way we like liver it is no good for us. Nothing we like is good for us, as we understand it. We fancy an occasional jolt of liver for breakfast purposes.

Then we like the liver cut very thin, and cooked well done. We like it sauted, too, which is to say with a nice, buttery gravy over it. We like a bit of bacon with it. This serves to disguise the taste.

We are told that this is all wrong. We are told that we should eat the liver a trifle rare, that we may get the health-inspiring juices that are alleged to be contained in the liver. We would just as soon eat raw tongue.

We are told that the liver should be as thick as two decks of cards. So on liver days around our house, we eat out.

While we are on this general subject, we would like to ask Mr. Roosevelt how he stands on the matter of egg plant, in any form.

EARLY LIFE OF MARLENE DIETRICH

Film Star Reveals Details of Her Start on Road to Fame; How She Met Her Husband

By Charles Graves
(ENGLISH NOVELIST)

CHAPTER TWO.

ONE of the penalties of being a film star is personal and often impertinent questions asked by strangers.

I was driving back from Denham Studios with Marlene Dietrich when she turned to me and said:

"Just before you arrived a woman actually asked me what it was my husband had that kept me happily married to him for 12 years.

"I listened patiently and then kidded her: 'You don't think it might perhaps be love?' "

Dietrich laughed deliciously. "Actually Rudolf is the perfect father and the perfect husband."

I can vouch that Rudolf Sieber is a charming man, good-looking, blond. He is friendly with Von Sternberg. Recently, when the latter had his operation, Mr. Sieber stayed all day at the hospital so that Von Sternberg might see a familiar face when he came out of the anesthetic.

We drove along through the darkness in silence for two or three miles. "Why isn't he living with you in America—except for brief visits?" I hazarded.

"Because he has a job in Paris, of course. He is doing French versions for Paramount. He has found an actress with a voice just like mine, and it is real magic.

"You really ought to see 'Desire' in French. For a long time I didn't want my pictures to be done in French because I thought it would be impossible."

She told me of her romance with Sieber, and in the telling, she went back to her beginnings.

—o-o—

ON DEC. 27, 1904, under the sign of Capricorn, Frau von Losch, living in Berlin, presented her husband, a Captain in the Ninety-second Infantry Regiment, with a second daughter.

She was called Mary Magdalene. In time she contracted these two names into Marlene, and adopted Dietrich for stage purposes.

As a child Marlene was shy. She played by herself.

"Mother never told either me or my sister, Elizabeth, that we had any looks. That was a mistake, I think," she told me. "It is nice for a girl to know that she is pretty.

"We Germans have an inferiority complex, you know. It would have given me much more confidence if I had been complimented."

When the war came Marlene was nine. Capt. von Losch was with his regiment at Brunswick and was sent straight to the front.

"Everybody was very happy," she smiled queerly. "Of course, we thought the war would be over in a month. Every day there were festivities and victories and more festivities. It was lovely."

Capt. Von Losch was killed in a battle with Russians near Kovno and was buried there.

"We did not know that there was an armistice until several days afterwards, when the revolution had broken out," she went on.

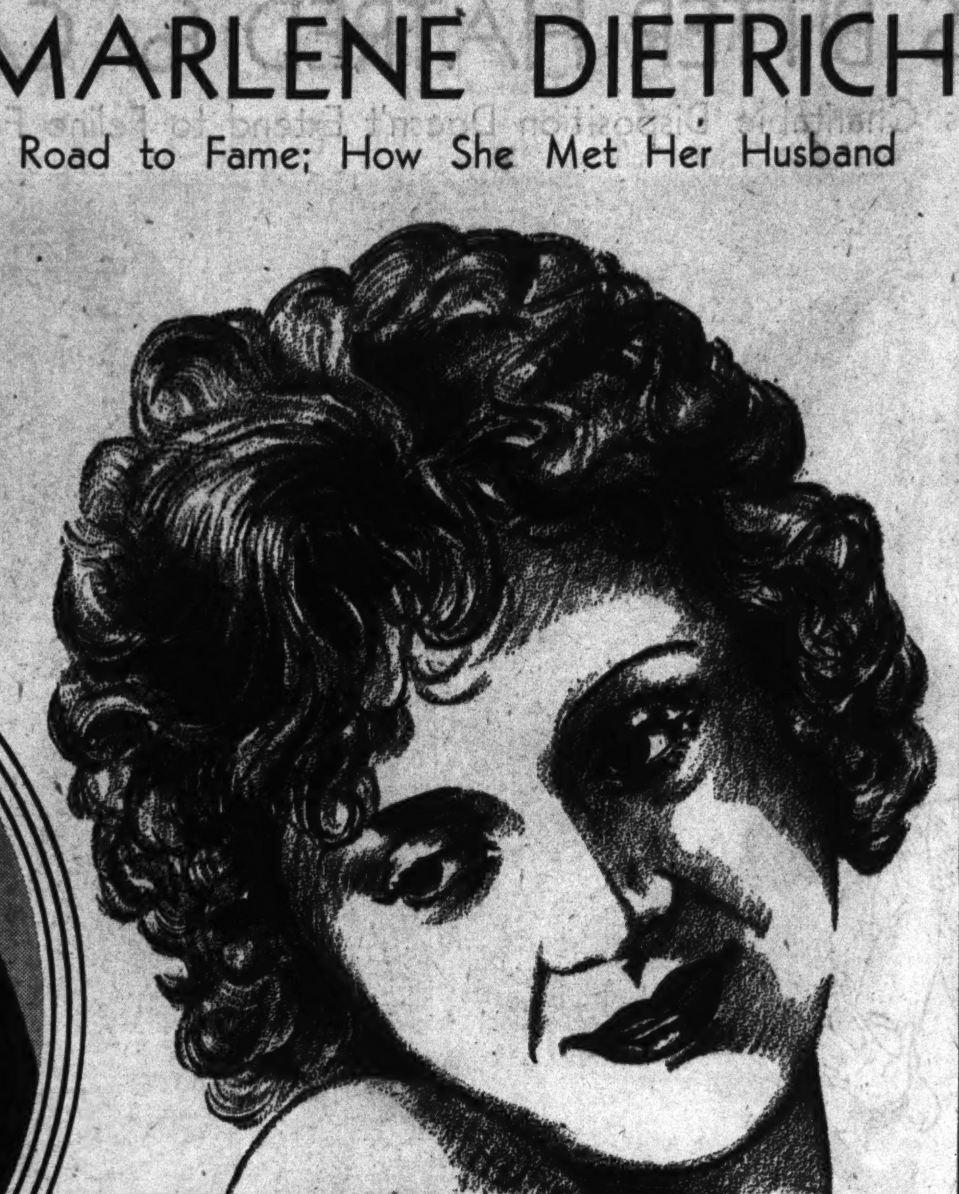
"The last three years of the war were awful. All my uncles and cousins had been killed, including my Uncle Max, who had commanded a Zeppelin which was shot down in flames over England.

"All we had to eat were potatoes and turnips. Everything was made of turnips."

There was no way to escape war memories except in work. One day she read a poem called "Death and the Fool," by the German poet, Hofmannstahl. The words sounded so lovely that she started to read them aloud.

She thought it would be fine to become an actress and say them in public. She persuaded her mother to let her go to the Max Reinhardt School, which was connected with his theater. While she was there she wrote two movie scenarios which all the companies rejected. The manuscripts were lost long ago.

The first part she was given on



AS MISS DIETRICH LOOKED BEFORE SHE CAME TO THE UNITED STATES FOR THE FIRST TIME TO MAKE PICTURES.

MISS DIETRICH AND EMIL JENNINGS' IN AN EARLY GERMAN PICTURE, WHEN JANNINGS WAS THE STAR AND MISS DIETRICH JUST ANOTHER ACTRESS.

the stage was that of the widow in "The Taming of the Shrew." Elisabeth Bergner, already famous, played Katharina, and Dietrich at once became an intense admirer of her. She also had one-line parts in "The Circle" and other plays in which Elisabeth Bergner starred.

She was 18 years old when one day she went to an audition presided over by a dialogue writer named Rudolf Sieber. They were married in 1923. Their daughter, Maria, was born two years later.

When the subject of Maria crops up Marlene Dietrich becomes extraordinarily voluble. Maria is the great love in her life. She would do anything in the world for her, and she is intensely proud of the blonde girl with her blue eyes and reddish-auburn hair.

"Maria is completely American," Marlene will tell you. "She loves to play and watch football; she likes to ride; she adores the movies; she is very proud of being American.

"She dances beautifully, and I hope will do all the things I would like to myself and cannot. She is learning French, and also how to ski.

"She was born on Dec. 13. That alone is enough for me to think that 13 is my lucky number. And yet it was on Friday, May 13, that the gangsters started to threaten me in Hollywood. They demanded $50,000, or otherwise they would do terrible things to Maria.

"I did not go to the police at first. I hired private detectives, who were dressed up as gardeners and other kinds of servants. Finally the gangsters muddled up their demands for ransom between me and another woman they were threatening.

"Maria's great friend is Jack Gilbert's little girl, Leatrice. They are just the same age.

"But I don't let her play with boys of her own age as a rule. It is much better for her after a game of tennis to have an ice cream with Clark Gable, or to go to a movie with Brian Aherne or some other grownup."

"What about Maria's career on the screen?" I asked.

Dietrich paused. "She was one of the little girls in the convent school in the sceen in 'The Garden of Allah' where the nun walks up to the camera," she said. "She is the first little girl that the nun talks to, and who shows her needlework to her.

"Maria played with me as a child in the 'Scarlet Empress.' So this is already her second film. But I don't let her play in other films—the fact that she was in 'The Garden of Allah' was because I wanted to have her in my first colored film.

"My mother made acting difficult for me. My whole upbringing was to mask my feelings. Why, the last slap I had from my mother was because of that." She stroked her cheek as she recalled the incident.

"I was having dancing lessons, and had to dance with everyone in the room, including a young man whom I did not like. I made a long face. Mother saw it and slapped me as soon as we were alone. 'You must not show your feelings, it is bad manners,' she said."

Her mother, very proud of Marlene, lives in Germany.

—o-o—

A FAMOUS film star told me that she felt like giving up her whole career in order to marry the man she loved, and raise a family.

I told Dietrich. She smiled.

"I like work. Of course it is fun, too," said Dietrich. "In pictures you can do all the things you cannot do in real life.

"Very romantic adventures happen to you which would never occur away from the pictures. And even if they are rehearsed, they are fun."

"It is not a question of money?"

"No, for I could earn almost as much on the radio or on the stage. But, you see, I adore films.

"Then there is the contentment you get if you like the picture you have made and the public does, too; though sometimes I am rather sad if they like something of mine that is not good."

That evening I went with Miss Dietrich to "The Garden of Allah." It was eerie to have her sit next to be in the flesh and yet see her and hear her on the screen.

She told me: "Many times I am embarrassed to tears by the things I have to say in films. Imagine having to say, as I did, 'Nobody but God and I know what is in my heart.'

"The conceit of it! I tell you, I nearly died."

When it was over and we had escaped through the crowd, she recalled:

"It was made in the Arizona Desert, an hour by auto from Yuma. It was terribly hot. The sand storms were so awful.

"We had to get up at 2:30 a. m. and work from 4 a. m. to 10 a. m. The sun was far too bright for the next few hours, and so we did not work again before three, going on till five.

"Either we drove back to Yuma in the meantime or we saw the 'rushes' in a tent in our camp. The food was good and at Yuma I had the best steaks I ever remember.

"The heat made some of the company ill, and once it got me, too.

"You remember the scene where Basil Rathbone jumps from his horse to greet me outside my tent? Well, I fainted dead away. I suppose it was a sunstroke, for I did not come round for at least 10 minutes. However, I was working again next morning.

"But the Arizona Desert is beautiful. Charles Boyer and I walked and walked in the evening. The sky seemed so near you could almost touch it."

"What about Boyer?" I asked.

"Oh, he is a marvelous actor and a very charming man. I had seen him on the stage in Paris and persuaded Paramount to get him to come to Hollywood to play in that picture 'I Loved a Soldier,' which we never finished. It was fun to talk French with him all the time."

Dietrich, by the by, talks French perfectly, and without a trace of accent.

At another time I asked her:

"What was the easiest picture you ever made?"

Marlene stared into space for a moment.

" 'Desire,' I think," she said softly. "Borzage directed it. I was terribly happy at the time. Gary Cooper is the nicest man I know to work with. He was just the same to me as he was in my very first picture, 'Morocco.'

"He is never ungallant. He took care of me all the time and was always perfectly charming.

"Gary has none of those funny ways of many actors. American actors are much easier to work with than Europeans."

Dietrich drew a rug over her knees and snuggled back cozily. Again there was an intimate silence. After a minute or two I offered her a penny for her thoughts, guessing that it would be about some love scene with Gary Cooper.

I was wrong, it seemed. "I was thinking that they will have to alter some of the settings for my new picture."

But I was not to be denied, and, thinking of what the public had said about her performance in "Desire," I reminded her that everyone said she must have been in love with Gary Cooper, so warm and human she had been.

Dietrich sighed. "Even the critics continually muddle up the actress or the actor with the part.

"Until 'Desire' I always had to conceal my feelings, and still show that I loved the man, whoever he was. That is the most difficult thing of all. Nothing is easier than to play straight sentiments.

—o-o—

"IN 'Knight Without Armour,' I don't have to tell Robert Donat to go away because I am afraid I might fall in love with him. I more or less say to him, 'For God's safe stay, I love you.'

"Acting is really difficult for me. What makes it so hard for me is that my whole upbringing was to mask my feelings.

"The most interesting line I ever had to say—in 'Morocco'—was, 'You had better go now, I am beginning to like you'; and the one that I enjoyed most was the very simple remark, 'Good morning, Mr. Bradley.' That was in 'Desire,' when I had to go into Gary Cooper's bedroom and find him still there."

"What about some of the unrehearsed incidents in your pictures?" I suggested. "That time when you were making 'Morocco' the scene where you had to walk after the troops through the desert. Von Sternberg says you walked and walked for about 10 miles, not realizing that he had finished with you and was shooting a totally different scene."

"Yes. Finally I fainted and was brought back," Dietrich admitted. "I was just coming round when they were going to throw water in my face. Mr. Von Sternberg was standing near me. 'Is there going to be another close-up?' I asked Mr. Von Sternberg feebly, because I realized that if there was the water would destroy my make-up.

"All Mr. Von Sternberg said was: 'The word is close-up, not cloze-up.' You see, my English was not very good then."

SOPHIE TUCKER TRYING TALKIES A SECOND TIME

HOLLYWOOD, March 6.

SOPHIE TUCKER'S first talkie sent her scampering to London for refuge after it was released.

After eight years buxom Sophie of the powerful lungs has worked up courage to try another. That is, somebody finally has asked her to, and she will play the theatrical boarding house operator in the next "Broadway Melody."

Sophie hasn't changed much, unless you count dropping 30 pounds a change. She says she did it by eating anything she wants but less of it, and that includes French pastry. She weighed in at 210 pounds.

"Honky Tonk"—that was Sophie's first talkie—nearly ruined her. She used Rochester, N. Y., as a gauge of her destruction. She played there in person shortly after the picture, and Rochester, which always had turned out for her, practically stayed home. When Syracuse did the same, she phoned her manager to book her to London right away.

But when Sophie came to Hollywood she left "the last of the red-hot mammas" behind. Her old sobriquet was outmoded, she says. Anyway, that's how a girl gets ahead, by keeping up with the times.

—o-o—

THAT'S HOW Sophie Tucker has kept on top, these 30-odd years since she first ran away from home and took a $15 a week job singing in a New York restaurant. That was when Sonya Kalish became Sophie Tucker.

Her first husband was Louis Tuck, and she adapted the surname. She has married twice since then—and for the past 17 years she has been Mrs. Albert Lackay.

Sophie says she is 50. Maybe she's a little more, but what's the difference? She's the same big-hearted Sophie who knows all the answers and can sing them.

"But I'm always broke—always gonna be broke," she says. "I make it and give it away. I'm able to keep on making it because I've got the writers—Jack Yellen and Harry Harris—and you newspaper boys are nice to me, always have been.

"This studio is being marvelous to me, too. Why, they treat me like Joan Crawford, with fittings and tests and giving me Tucker material."

But Sophie wants an airing, too. She wants to "show" that radio sponsor who turned her down because the typical Tucker number of the past was too risque for the kiddies.

"Why, I do everything," says Sophie indignantly. "I keep a Tucker number or two up my sleeve for night club work—but I've been around enough to know you pick your songs for the audience you're singing to. And I'm going to get on the air if it's the last thing I do!"

FILM FAME is so fleeting that even a name engraved on silver is no guarantee of permanence.

Part of the ballyhoo for the opening of the Carthay Circle Theater—the local road show movie house—in 1926 was the glorification of seats occupied by the stars of the day. Wherever a star sat the opening night, a silver plate bearing the name was attached to the seat.

Times change, and managements, and stars. Part of the ballyhoo for the current run of "The Good Earth" at this house is a new silver-plating for posterity, that today's great ones may not be forgotten. At this writing Lionel Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Claudette Colbert, Gable, Harlow, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy, William Powell, Robert Taylor and Garbo—she slipped in one evening, sat 'way off to the side—are among those assured of this particular brand of immortality.

These are the stars of '26 whose plates were yanked—tenderly, we hope—from chair arms: Olive Borden, Vera Reynolds, Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers, Sally Long, Norman Kerry, Gertrude Olmstead, Robert Edeson, George Sidney, DeWitt Jennings, Kathleen Key, Huntley Gordon, June Marlowe and Alan Brooks.

And how many can you place, offhand?

An excellent base for a moulded salad is made by using a can of plain tomato soup rather than clear water in dissolving the gelatine. A lemon flavor improves the taste.

Anybody's Guess Goes On Screenland Divorces

Marriages a Little More Difficult of Prediction by "I-Told-You-So" Citizens—How Notable Romances of Picture Players Have Failed to Come Through.

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, March 6.

HOLLYWOOD—around the studios, the restaurants, the night clubs and even what are laughingly called the private homes of the movie stars—is a hotbed of gossip and rumors. Pretty frequently the rumors turn out to be true, especially when the word is circulated that a couple of stars who were married yesterday, or, maybe the day before, are already thinking of Reno. With the records what they are, the journey to Nevada is a fairly safe thing to say about almost any movietown couple. If it doesn't take place for a couple of years after the report was put in circulation the circulators can always point with pride and say, "why I told you that two years ago."

Next to predicting divorces the Hollywood gossipers concentrate upon predicting marriages. Let a man and woman of the screen colony be seen together for lunch at the Brown Derby and even before the check is paid the rumor of their engagement is abroad and by the time they leave the cafe the autograph hunters have assembled in the doorway to get them to sign the books together. If the same couple follows up the luncheon with a dancing date at the Troc or the Grove a night or two later, it is rather generally believed that they have slipped down into Mexico and been secretly married.

But that is where the rumor hounds fall down. Divorces are far easier picking. So the next time you read, in these columns or anywhere else, that little Trottie Coughdrop—as she was known back in Clinton, Mo., before she won a beauty contest and became Beverly Wilshire of the films—is going to marry Stirling Du Lancy—nee Joe Doaks—Super-Awful's' he-man star, just as soon as he is free from his present wife, don't bet any of your hard-earned cash on the information being correct. Save your money against the day when, if by any chance they are married, the word gets about that a divorce is in the air. Then do your betting.

THE latest engagement rumor which, we believe, we have printed ourselves, concerns the beautiful Anita Louise and handsome George Brent. But don't risk your money on it just yet. Most of the late crop of engagement prospects hasn't panned out. There was the Herbert Marshall-Gloria Swanson affair which looked like a sure-fire event even though Edna Best, who happens to be Mrs. Marshall, was, and is, alive and well and, maybe, kicking a little in England, some 8000 miles away from Reno. The Marshall-Swanson companionship was, for conversational purposes at least, one of Hollywood's most glorious romances. Now it is colder even than the winter which Southern California has just been through—but doesn't talk about.

Pretty little Betty Grable, from St. Louis, and Jackie Coogan, ex-child star and present youthful millionaire, have really been engaged for a long time but the latest bulletin from gossip headquarters is that the affair is cooling off considerably. Take that report, or leave it, as you wish.

Gail Patrick, one of the real beauties of Hollywood and one of the genuinely fine young women of the screens, sorter crossed the wires when she married Bob Cobb, proprietor of the several Brown Derbies. The gossips had them engaged for months but Gail denied it emphatically. "The talk is going to break up a dandy friendship" she told me one day and to prove that the engagement rumor was all wrong she began going places with young John King. That didn't stop the talk. The talkers simply moved Mr. King into the No. 1 spot—and then Gail and Bob Cobb slipped away and were married. There are no rumors of a divorce in this instance, by the way, and probably won't ever be.

What about Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor? For some months, even before her divorce from Frank Fay, the Stanwyck-Taylor romance furnished the main topic of conversation around Hollywood. They were seen everywhere together. They still are, for that matter, and both of them are free, over 21 and independent. But they are not married and Barbara, almost daily, turns up in an interview, somewhere, with a denial that she intends to marry Taylor or anyone else.

Mary Brian furnished a lot of engagement talk and the talkers had her practically married to Dick Powell. Dick married Joan Blondell. Next Mary's name was linked with Cary Grant, former Municipal Opera Star. If that affair was serious at all, which it probably wasn't, it ended quickly.

Carole Lombard was reported thoroughly engaged to Robert Riskin, the writer. Then she started "going around" with Clark Gable. That is another of the present great Hollywood romances but it is slightly complicated by the fact that, although Clark is separated from his own Mrs. Gable there has been no talk, on her part, of a divorce.

You could go on that way for a long time. Gary Cooper and the Countess de Frasso, just to mention one more "engaged" couple. Gary married Sandra Shaw. And, oh yes, what about Jean Harlow and Bill Powell? Well, what about 'em?

No, don't bet on any reports you hear coming out of Hollywood on engagements.

Albert Spalding Final Soloist of Symphony Season

ALBERT SPALDING, celebrated American violinist, will be the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's last soloist of the season, at its concerts in the Auditorium Opera House on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. He will play Bruch's First Concerto, not heard here for 13 years.

The violinist, a recognized virtuoso for the past three decades, last appeared with the Symphony three years ago. No other artist has been as frequent a soloist with leading symphonic organizations in the country, and this season Spalding has 19 such engagements on his schedule. His concerts average 140 a season.

Bruch composed his concerto between 1857 and 1866, and made revisions for two years longer, partly under the advice of the great violinist, Joseph Joachim, who also advised Brahms in the composing of the latter's famous violin concerto. In its present form, the concerto had its first performance at Bremen Jan. 7, 1868, with Joachim as soloist, and was immediately acclaimed.

Golschmann's program will include another outstanding work that has not been played by the orchestra in a number of years—"The Feast of the Spider," a ballet pantomime by the French composer, Albert Roussel. The work was composed in 1913 for the Theater des Arts, Paris, from a book by Gilbert de Voisins.

The concerts will open with the overture to Smetana's opera, "The Bartered Bride," which Municipal Opera will give in complete form next summer, and conclude with Tschaikowsky's overture-fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet."

The orchestra will present its final concerts of the current local season Friday afternoon and Saturday night, March 19-20. The program will consist of the overture to Beethoven's "Leonore," and the same composer's Fourth Symphony; symphonic fragments from Ravel's ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe," and first St. Louis presentation of Vivaldi's concerto for four violins and orchestra. Violin soloists in the Vivaldi work will be selected from members of the orchestra.

The orchestra's personnel will be idle during Holy Week and at the same time Golschmann will appear as guest conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. Beginning March 29, the organization will make its final tour of the season in the South. Cities to be visited are Memphis, Birmingham, Atlanta, Savannah, Ga., Columbus, Miss., New Orleans, Houston, San Antonio, Waco, Dallas, Denton and Fort Worth. Spalding has been engaged as soloist at Atlanta and Savannah.

The complete program for this week's concerts:

Overture to "The Bartered Bride"—Smetana
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, No. 1 in G Minor, Opus 26 — Bruch
1. Allegro moderato
2. Adagio
3. Allegro energico

Le Festin de l'Araignee (The Spider's Banquet) — — — — — Roussel
Overture—Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet" Tschaikowsky

Burton Holmes' Talk On 'Beautiful Switzerland'

Burton Holmes' illustrated lecture at the Auditorium Opera House tomorrow night will be devoted to his impressions of "Beautiful Switzerland." Material for the address was obtained on a trip Holmes made last summer, from many journeys through the Alps, over the passes and into the valleys. The accompanying pictures are in color and motion and include phases of Swiss life and customs, with a collection of scenic masterpieces made by famous Swiss photographers.

ACADEMY WINNERS PAUL MUNI AND LUISE RAINER IN THE PRODUCTION OF "THE GOOD EARTH" AT THE AMERICAN.

American Friend Aids an Othello

Work of Miriam Hopkins in "Men Are Not Gods" Highly Important

By Colvin McPherson

SOME special award, in this season of passing around things, ought to be invented for "pupil doing most with the least, or putting forth best effort consistently." Such a prize could go annually to Miriam Hopkins and "Men Are Not Gods," at Loew's, could be set down as the evidence for 1937.

Throughout this theorem on the Eternal Triangle, Miss Hopkins exhibits such enthusiastic playing that any audience is likely to believe what goes on is of terrific importance to her. Miriam plays stenographer for an English dramatic critic, A. E. Matthews. Out of sympathy for an actor's wife, she changes Matthew's review, before it has reached the composing room, and thereby sacrifices her career for that of the actor. The actor, appearing as "Othello," is Sebastian Shaw, his wife and Desdemona, Gertrude Lawrence. "Men Are Not Gods," by the way, is a British creation, which accounts for the unfamiliar names in the cast.

Miriam's little misdeed makes Sebastian a great success, so it's inevitable that she should see his "Othello," meet him and fall in love with him. He, also, must necessarily find her an outside interest and audience of one. Gertrude sees that such a situation is dangerous and fights it in her own way, but most of the fighting is done Miriam vs. conscience. And it it a well-timed scream by Miriam, at the finish, that saves the lives of three good subjects of His Majesty.

Well written, with some surprises, authentic setting and informed direction, "Men Are Not Gods" disguises its ancient pattern. Miss Hopkins animates every scene in which she appears. Whether fighting with balcony customers, looking for her shoe, drinking too much champagne or letting go with frantic hysterics, she is real enough to make ardent fans of all but the most critical.

Sebastian Shaw, too, has fine professional sincerity. Young, handsome and with depth of manner, he puts on an "Othello" to be proud of. Producer Alexander Korda has given the film additional integrity with a musical score from Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Othello" Suite.

"Espionage," Loew's other film, travels the familiar journey toward Istanbul and matrimony. Edmund Lowe and Madge Evans are, for the time, reporters trying to find out where Munitions King Paul Lukas is going and why. Neither knows the other is a reporter. There's trouble about passports, since Madge is using a stolen one and Edmund has had his frisked away by some light-fingered Gauls at the railway station in Paris.

The cast is just large enough, the quips select enough and the excitement frequent enough to make the excursion a jolly and lively one. With Ketti Gallian as Lukas' companion, there are Skeets Gallagher as a laundryman from St. Louis—I thought he looked familiar—Barnett Parker as a reporter, gendarmes, noises and Shriners going home. We are in Switzerland in no time. The upshot, of course, is that Lukas is not going to start a war anywhere, but is just getting married this time, and to please the little girl, has agreed to beat his tanks into tractors and his gas masks into permanent wave machines.

John Meade's Woman.

IF there is a connection between cutting down trees on the mountains and causing dust storms on the plains, between refusing to reforest and angering the Governor of a typical prairie state, then "John Meade's Woman" makes sense. Otherwise I fear it is a little shaky.

It shows Edward Arnold as a 300-pound exploiter who likes to sleep at symphony concerts, play jokes on his friends and buy expensive presents for his women. Gail Patrick is the designing person after his money, Francine Larrimore the country girl who sasses him back and makes him like her. For the finale a dust storm and a revolver shot.

Miss Larrimore, an actress of some fame on the stage, proves interesting in her cinema debut. With chubby cheeks, cracked voice, chewed-off hair, and dramatic force withal, she violates most of the rules for leading ladies on the screen yet is not likely to be forgotten in a month of double bills.

"Midnight Court," Fox program picture, sends John Litel into a featured role. Litel, comparatively new to pictures, was Patrick Henry in the short subject, "Give Me Liberty," which played at the Fox earlier in the year and which has just won an Academy prize as the best color short of 1936. "Midnight Court," completely routine, does not give him much opportunity.

A third attraction at the Fox is a television demonstration in the lobby, with the broadcasting unit on one side, the receiving set on the other.

Love Is News.

WITH two lads of no greater screen experience or knowledge of newspaper offices, I suppose Don Ameche and Tyrone Power do a rather good job in "Love Is News," at the Ambassador, and for a director who has given us "S. O. S. Iceberg" and "China Seas," I suppose Tay Garnett has a certain valor. But as One-Who-Knows, may I be permitted to say that the daily on which Mr. Ameche and Mr. Power work is about the worst run press office I have seen on the screen, and that of all stereotypes that have ever been clamped down on the movie public, this so-called comedy is about the weariest.

A rich girl, who is apparently, in herself, all the news that's fit to print, announces her engagement to a reporter, to get even with him, and it ends up as romance. Power is the lad, Ameche city editor and their relation boils down to a game of double-crossing and suspected double-crossing, like that played by Gable and Tone in "Love on the Run." With no cherished recollections of "Love on the Run," or the wish to see it revived next drouth season, I'd still say Ameche and Power look like grammar school boys compared to Gable and Tone.

Certain amusement occurs when Walter Catlett, Slim Summerville, Stepin Fetchit or Elisha Cook Jr. are around, but Jane Darwell will never sound Irish as long as she lives, and isn't funny. All in all, "Love Is News" is at best a shoddy imitation of the type of comedy that glittered brilliantly in "Libeled Lady." The Ambassador stage show, with the veteran Timbergs and Rooneys, affords the comic pleasure that the picture lacks.

Two of last week's better films, "When You're in Love" and "Green Light," team together for a strong program at the Missouri. The St. Louis plays "Champagne Waltz," in second run, and rounds up a stage show with two notable items. Ted Allen's horseshoe pitching and Paul Regan's impersonations are worth the special trip, even when Johnny Perkins isn't serving refreshments.

Fred Waring's Band At Ambassador Friday

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, including all the radio entertainers heard on his many recent broadcasts, come to the Ambassador Theater Friday to head the stage portion of the bill. The unit is composed of Rosemary and Priscilla Lane, Poley McClintock, the "frog-voiced" drummer and clowning cutup of the gang; Johnnie Davis, trumpeter, Ferne, only woman musician in the band; Gene Conklin, the "Three Fellas," Curley Cockerill, Larry Collins, Charles Newman and Larry Best.

'Good Earth', With Prize Stars, to the American

Paul Muni and Luise Rainer Play Chinese Peasant Pair in Film Opening Tonight—Four Years' Work Required to Bring Pearl Buck Novel to Screen.

"THE Good Earth," roadshow film which opens at the American Theater at 8:45 o'clock tonight and plays two daily engagements from tomorrow on, represents an accomplishment of individual and collective effort extending over four years and an expenditure reported to be in excess of $2,000,000. Crowning its completion, it had the good fortune to see its stars, Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, both become Academy award winners, for previous performances, last Thursday night.

The source of the drama is, of course, Pearl Buck's Pulitzer Prize novel of 1932, in which the author set forth the history of a Chinese peasant family and its rise to wealth in one generation. Mrs. Buck, a resident of China for most of her life and a former teacher in Chinese universities, described not only the good fortune of Wang Lung and the patient devotion of his wife, O-Lan, but brought those characters into placement in a large panorama of famine, rebellion and banditry.

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer bought screen rights to the book in 1933, studio officials set about to develop a production that would be authentic and in keeping with the amplitude of the novel. The late Irving G. Thalberg, as producer, assigned George Hill to direct, and Hill spent a year in China, with his staff, taking more than 200,000 feet of atmospheric film and collecting properties. Entire farms were bought and every movable article shipped to the United States.

After returning to the United States, Hill, who had been in ill health as the result of an automobile accident, killed himself and Victor Fleming was chosen to succeed him. Fleming chose location sites in California and began selectin the cast, but was forced by a serious operation to withdraw from the production. Sidney Franklin, director of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Smilin' Through" and "The Guardsman," went in and finished the job. Over the period of four years, six screen play writers had a hand in adapting the book.

FIVE hundred acres of farmland were terraced in the manner of Chinese terrain, huts were built and crops planted, and on this site, 40 miles from Hollywood, the stars, Muni, as Wang Lung, and Miss Rainer, as O-Lan, went to work as peasants.

The entire cast is made up of 68 speaking parts, with 2000 Chinese extras. Walter Connolly, Charley Grapewin, Jessie Ralph, Harold Huber and Keye Luke were drawn from regular movie rosters and Tilly Losch, Viennese dancer, signed to play Lotus, Wang Lung's concubine. For other Chinese, the studio had to have the help of many of the West Coast's prominent Oriental citizens.

Ching Wah Lee, for instance, who plays Wang's faithful friend, Ching, is editor of the Chinese Digest; William S. Law is a Chinese business man of San Francisco and commuted to Hollywood by plane; Soo Yong, who plays the Ancient Mistress, holds two college degrees and was working on a Ph. D. when she signed a contract.

Miss Rainer, winner of the Academy award for acting, on her performance as Anna Held in "The Great Ziegfeld," developed her portrayal of O-Lan without reading Mrs. Buck's novel. She made many visits to Chinatown in Los Angeles, spent some time in the Chinese settlement in San Francisco and was incessantly with Chinese women extras during the filming. Muni, whose "Story of Louis Pasteur" won him the prize, also devoted intensive study to his role.

Highlights of the production are scenes of famine, revolution and a locust plague, which comes not from China but from Utah. A special tinting process, to give an earth tone to the film, was developed under Thalberg's supervision.

Production was completed last August, and Franklin sat down with Basil Wrangel, film editor, to trim the 40,000 feet of film by about two-thirds. Herbert Stothart developed a musical score from some 200 pieces of Chinese music and this was added to the sound track. The film runs about two hours on the screen.

Spring Theater Season

WITH "The Good Earth" going into the American tonight for a indefinite run, nothing else is booked in the coming three weeks. After that, the American brings up more important productions than it has had all season.

The list of them is:

March 28 — "Ziegfeld Follies," with Fannie Brice, Bobby Clark, Jane Pickens, Gypsy Rose Lee, Ruth Harrison and Alex Fisher, Cherry and June Preisser, Stan Kavanagh, Cass Daley, Hugh Cameron, Marvin Lawler, James Farrell and Ben Yost's Varsity Eight.

April 5—"Idiot's Delight," Pulitzer Prize play of 1936, starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

April 12—Tallulah Bankhead in "Reflected Glory."

April 18 — Frank Capra's road show picture, "Lost Horizon."

Following "Lost Horizon," the American plans to present Charlotte Greenwood in "Leaning on Letty," Ruth Draper in dramatic readings and one of the new Broadway productions, with a famous star. Negotiations for the Broadway show are all but settled, as part of a speedy coast-to-coast tour. Walter Hampden's "An Enemy of the People" will end its tour in the East and not come to St. Louis.

Amusement Calendar

AMERICAN—"The Good Earth," roadshow film starring Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, opens at 8:45 o'clock tonight. Two performances daily, beginning tomorrow.

AMBASSADOR—Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Don Ameche in "Love Is News"; stage show featuring Timberg and Rooney families.

FOX—Edward Arnold and Francine Larrimore in "John Meade's Woman"; "Midnight Court," with Ann Dvorak and John Litel.

MISSOURI—"When You're in Love," starring Grace Moore with Cary Grant and Aline MacMahon; "Green Light," with Errol Flynn and Anita Louise.

LOEW'S—"Espionage," starring Edmund Lowe and Madge Evans; "Men Are Not Gods," starring Miriam Hopkins with Gertrude Lawrence and Sebastian Shaw.

ST. LOUIS—"Champagne Waltz" (second run); stage show with Ted Allen and others.

GARRICK—Burlesque, "Teases and Wheezes."

Ginette Neveu in Civic Music Concert Tuesday

GINETTE NEVEU, young French violinist now on her first American tour, makes her St. Louis debut in a Civic Music League concert at the Auditorium Opera House Tuesday evening. Her earlier concerts in the East have proved unusually successful, some critics denoting her as the greatest woman violinist since Maud Powell.

Miss Neveu, now 17 years old, began her study under the tutelage of her mother, also an accomplished violinist, started winning prizes at the age of 9, and at Warsaw two years ago added the International Violin Contest to her triumphs. She is still engaged in study and follows a practice regimen of five to six hours daily.

The principal work on her program is Richard Strauss' Sonata in E-flat, Opus 18, last played in St. Louis by the composer himself in 1921, at a concert sponsored by Alma and Elizabeth Cueny. Miss Neveu's complete program:

Sonata in E-flat, Opus 18—Richard Strauss
Chacconne — — — — — — — —Bach
Poeme — — — — — — — — — Chausson
Priere— — — — — — —Handel-Flesch
Variations on a Theme by Corelli—Tartini-Kreisler
Danse Slave — — — — — — — — Dvorak
Tzigane — — — — — — — — — — Ravel

Betty Jaynes' Program

Betty Jaynes' program at the Auditorium Opera House on Tuesday, March 16, for the benefit of the St. Louis opera fund, will include two operatic arias and songs in various foreign languages and English. The girl soprano will be accompanied by Charles Lurvey, with a trio of St. Louis musicians, Scipione Guidi, Max Steindel and Corinne Frederick as assisting artists. Miss Jaynes' program is:

"Non so piu cosa," aria from "Le Nozze di Figaro" — — — — — — Mozart
Komm wir wandeln Zusammen — Cornelius
In Der Rosenlaube am Rhein — — Bungert
"Mi Chiamano Mimi," aria from "La Boheme" — — — — — — — — — Puccini
Fleur des Alpes — — — — — — Vekerlin
Il Neige (The Snow) — — — — Bemberg
Clorinda — — — — — — — — — — Morgan
Midsummer — — — — — — — — — Worth

Ted Shawn Recital.

Ted Shawn and his ensemble of men dancers will make their third annual appearance in a dance recital at the Auditorium Opera House on Tuesday evening, March 23, in an entirely new repertory. In the group are Barton Mumaw, Frank Overlees, Wilbur McCormack, Frank Delmar, Dennis Landers, Fred Hearn, Foster Fitz-Simon and Horace Jones.

Helen Morgan On Show Boat Thursday Night

Jack Benny's Program to Come From New York—New Serial on KSD.

JACK BENNY'S program today, and the next two Sundays, will come from an auditorium in New York City seating an audience of 5000. Mary Livingstone will be back on the program, and Benny plans to have as guests Stuart Canin, the ten-year-old violinist, and Sam Hearn, one time Schleppermann of his broadcasts. Young Canin's playing of the "Bee" on a Fred Allen program was the occasion of Allen's remark that gave occasion for starting the "feud" which has been a feature of the two comedians' programs ever since.

Today's competitors in KSD's Metropolitan Opera Audition, at 2 p. m., will be Fred Hufsmith, the tenor, who sung on the networks for 6 years; Robert Allen Geis, a basso cantante, of Indianapolis, who at one time was a student at Washington University, and has sung in radio and at New York night clubs, and Anna Mary Dickey, of Decatur, Ill., who was one of the semi-finalists in last year's Opera Auditions. Wilfred Pelletier, the Metropolitan Opera conductor, will be the speaker.

Jimmy Jeffries, the comedian, will be among featured performers on KSD's Sugah and Her Boy Friends period at 5:50 this afternoon.

Musical Moments.

A STORY of the counterfeiting racket will be dramatized in Warden Lewis E. Lawes' period on KSD tomorrow evening.

Vivian Della Chiesa will sing songs from Kalman's "Riviera Girl," in Frank Black's concert at 9 p. m. tomorrow on KSD. The Lullaby Lady's song will be Schubert's "Cradle Song". The string ensemble will play the "Meditation" from "Thais."

The Adventures of Dari Dan, a serial, will replace While the City Sleeps on WEAF network this week and will be broadcast by KSD at 4:45 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Finney Briggs, a radio actor since 1922, is cast in the leading role. Frances Carlon plays "Sandy," Dari Dan's sweetheart; Cecil Roy, "Stanley," his young brother, and Marie Nelson, the aunt.

Rapee Concerts Will Be Shifted To WJZ Chain

Change Scheduled for April 4—Noted German Tenor Soloist Tonight.

BEGINNING April 4, the Sunday night Erno Rapee symphony concerts will be shifted from 9 o'clock on the WEAF chain to 7 o'clock on the WJZ network, of which KWK is the St. Louis link. KWK has arranged to carry the concerts.

To do this, it will broadcast Father Charles E. Coughlin's talks, now scheduled from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Sundays, on Sunday afternoons possibly at 2 or 2:30 o'clock. Father Coughlin is considering expanding his weekly talk to a full hour. Because of his program, KWK has not been broadcasting the dramatizations which occupy the time from 7 to 8 o'clock Sundays on the WJZ net. These, of course, will be displaced by the Rapee concerts. Whether they will be moved to another time has not been determined.

Dr. Howard Hanson, composer of the music for the opera, "Merry Mount," the libretto for which was written by Richard Stokes, formerly of St. Louis, will be featured in the Radio City concert at 11:30 this morning on KWK. A suite from "Merry Mount" will be performed.

Arthur Loesser, the pianist, will be the soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra at 2 p. m. on KMOX, Artur Rodzinsky conducting. He will play Dohnanyi's "Variations on a Nursery Air." Orchestral pieces will be Harty's arrangement of Handel's "Water Music Suite," the Prelude and Finale of "Tristan and Isolde," Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Die Goetterdaemmerung," Wotan's Farewell and the Fire Music from "Die Walkuere" and the Ride of Valkyries.

KSD will broadcast Marion Talley's recital as usual at 4 p. m. and the Fireside Recital at 6:40 p. m.

Myra Hess, the British pianist, has programmed for her appearance in the 8 p. m. concert from Detroit on KMOX the first movement of Grieg's Concerto in A minor, the Chopin Etudes in F major and A flat and Bach's Fifth French Suite. Victor Kolar will conduct an excerpt from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," Bach's Air for the G String, Mozart's "Turkish March," part of Saint-Saens' "Henry VIII Suite," and Sibelius' "Finlandia."

The soloist in the Erno Rapee concert at 9 p. m. on the WEAF network will be Joseph Schmidt, a German tenor who is said to have the finest voice in European radio, concert and movies. Although he does not sing in opera, his repertoire includes most of the great tenor arias. Tonight, he is to sing the "E Lucevan le Stelle" air from "Tosca," the "La Donna e Mobile" from "Rigoletto," Schubert's "Du Bist Die Ruh," Leoncavallo's "Mattinata" and "Wine and Waltz." Orchestral pieces will include the Mendelssohn "Fingal's Cave" overture, the Andante of Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, Debussy's "Prelude a l'Apres-Midi d'un Faune" and Ravel's "Rhapsodie Espagnole." There will also be the usual organ recital at 10:15 p. m. on KMOX.

Richard Crooks will sing with Margaret Speaks at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow on KSD. He has programmed "Rio Rita," "Beautiful Dreamer," "La Golondrina" and Rachmaninoff's "In the Silence of the Night."

A concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin at 7:45 p. m. Thursday on the WJZ net. Serge Koussevitzky will conduct the Beethoven Fourth Symphony and the Berg violin concerto with Louis Krasner, violinist, as soloist.

Friday's schedule lists the Walter Damrosch Music Appreciation Hour from 1 to 2 p. m. on KSD; Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Eugene Goosens, conducting, with Rudolph Gans, the pianist, as soloist, at 2 p. m. on the CBS net. A broadcast from Warsaw, Poland, of the playing of contestants in the International Chopin competition, at 2:15 on the WJZ network; the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra at 9 p. m. on KMOX.

Saturday, there will be the final children's concert by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, at 10 a. m. on KMOX and the CBS net; Metropolitan Opera performance of "Mignon" at 1 p. m. on KWK and the WJZ net; the two-hour concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. on WGN (720 kc.); a concert of Danish symphonic music directed by Frank Black at 10:05 p. m. on the WJZ net.

Gladys Swarthout will sing the title role in "Mignon," and Charles Hackett, the tenor, "Wilhelm." Josephine Antoine, will be the "Philine" and Ezio Pinza "Lothario." Others in the cast will be Angelo Bada, Norman Condon and Helen Oelheim. Wilfred Pelletier will conduct.

KSD to Carry Concert By St. Louis Symphony

Special Broadcast Set for 10 to 11 O'clock Next Wednesday Night on Five Stations from Opera House in the Municipal Auditorium.

FROM 10 to 11 o'clock Wednesday night, KSD will broadcast the second part of a concert by the full St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, in the Municipal Auditorium, which will launch the Symphony Society's campaign for funds for the 1937-38 season. This part of the concert also will be carried by KMOX, KWK, WIL and WTMV.

The concert will begin at 9 o'clock before an audience of 3500 persons in the Opera House.

For the first part, Conductor Vladimir Golschmann has programmed the Overture to Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla"; the Boccherini "Minuet" for string orchestra; Johann Strauss' "Perpetuum Mobile"; Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks"; Dvorak's Slavonic Dance No. 1, and the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's "Schwanda, the Bagpiper."

The part of the concert that will be broadcast from 10 to 11 o'clock will be made up of the Bach Tocatta in D-minor, orchestrated by Alexandre Tansman; Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony; the Introduction to Act III of "Lohengrin", and the Overture to "Tannhauser."

Brief address on the 1937-38 program of the St. Louis Symphony Society will be made during the concert by Oscar Johnson, president of the society, and Judge Fred L. English, general chairman of the campaign, which will open on the day of the broadcast and close March 18.

Arthur J. Gaines, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Symphony Society, will be the announcer for the broadcast.

New KMOX Program.

A NEW "The Land We Live In" dramatic-musical program series, produced by KMOX, will be broadcast weekly at 6:30 p. m. Sundays, beginning today. The series will be devoted to the history of St. Louis. It will be given by a cast of actors directed by C. G. Renier and Arthur Casey, with a background and interludes of music of the symphonic type played by an orchestra led by Ben Feld. The musical score for each program will be arranged by Howard Barlow, the CBS muiscal director. The first broadcasts will deal with the Civil War as it affected St. Louis. Leaders of those days, military and political, will be impersonated in the broadcasts.

KWK's 10th Anniversary.

THE tenth anniversary of KWK will be observed Wednesday, March 17, with a program by KWK's entertainers and musicians in the Municipal Auditorium. Part of the entertainment will be carried by the WJZ network at 10:30 o'clock. The Mutual network's Jazz Nocturne period, which comes from the studios of WOR, Newark, at 8:30 p. m. Wednesdays, will be dedicated to KWK.

Irene Wicker's program at 4:15 Friday will bring a dramatization of the story of William Tell. James Meighan will play the role of Tell and Miss Wicker that of his wife.

STUDIO GOSSIP

PARKYAKARKUS has been added to the Al Jolson Tuesday night radio show. He replaces Sid Silvers, who asked to be allowed to withdraw. Parkyakarkus, whose name in private life is Harry Einstein, was married recently to Thelma Leeds. He has dropped for the time being the idea of heading his own radio series. . . .

Rumors that Phillips Lord will drop out of his We, the People program are denied. It is stated that he will return from his vacation, taken on his doctor's order, March 21. . . . Ken Murray will open on the CBS network to replace Burns and Allen Wednesday, March 31, instead of on April 7 as had been planned. Burns and Allen, as has been told, will go on another network, presumably the WEAF chain. . . . Frances Carlon has resumed the role of "Mrs. West" in the Story of Marlin cast. . . .

THE Metropolitan Opera Auditions series on KSD will be concluded with the broadcast on Sunday, March 28. . . . Richard Himber's orchestra will shift this week to 9 p. m. Mondays on the WJZ net and WKW. . . . A night performance of Vic and Sade is being broadcast on the WJZ net and KWK at 9 p. m. Wednesdays in addition to the morning periods on KWK and the afternoon broadcasts on KSD at 2:30. . . . Florence George, the NBC soprano billed for the Jamboree Thursday night, has been placed under option for the movies. . . .

SYMPHONY CAMPAIGN TO BEGIN TOMORROW

Other Solicitors to Join Special Gifts Committee After Broadcast Wednesday.

The campaign for funds to help support the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra next season will be underway this week, with the drive of the special gifts committee to begin tomorrow and the other soliciting groups prepared to start with a civic concert and radio broadcast at Municipal Auditorium Wednesday evening.

Campaign headquarters reported that the Symphony office has been rushed to fill orders for the Wednesday evening performance, and that it was considering the plan of limiting applicants to two tickets each, as 7000 applications, twice the capacity of the Auditorium, have been received. One hour of the program will be broadcast from five stations in the St. Louis area.

The organization of individual soliciting units has been completed, it was announced, and more than 500 volunteers will be in the field when the drive is launched.

Note has been made of the increasing interest in the expansion of the orchestra program, proposed for 1937-38. It is planned, if finances are adequate, to play 16 symphony concerts in the convention hall in April and May, providing for audiences of 3500, a part of which may be seated at tables in front of the stage to be served with food and beverages. Other seats will be available at prices beginning at 25 cents. It was pointed out that a new group of St. Louisans would be permitted by this arrangement to enjoy the orchestra, marking another step in the society's program to bring the orchestra to the masses.

Active with Judge Fred L. English, general chairman of the campaign, in the organization of various soliciting units has been Mrs. Ella Peters Lauman, Mrs. Adolphus Busch III, Mrs. M. Hayward Post, Mrs. Charles M. Rice, Mrs. William Dee Becker, Mrs. Willard Bartlett, Mrs. Adalbert von Gontard, Mrs. Edward Magnus, Mrs. Leo de Smet Carton, Mrs. Paul Blackwelder, Mrs. Leicester Faust, Mrs. Elliot Dixon, Mrs. Louis F. Meyer, Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter, Miss Kate Davis Pulitzer, Mrs. Hugh Sullivan, Mrs. Arthur Feuerbacher, Miss Frances Conant, Mrs. E. G. Curtis, Mrs. Mahlon Wallace, Mrs. T. Edward Rassieur, Mrs. John R. Bircher, Mrs. Charles Day, Irving Edison, John Talbot, Edgar Rand, David L. Grey, W. Geoffrey Kimball, Thomas C. Noel and Henry Hitchcock.

CHURCH TO PRESENT PLAY "PASSION AND TRIUMPH"

200 From Negro Congregation at First Baptist to Sing Spirituals.

The First Baptist Church, 3100 Bell avenue, oldest Negro congregation in the city, will present a passion play, "Passion and Triumph," at Vashon High School the evenings of March 31 and April 1 as the main event of the church's 110th anniversary celebration, which began Feb. 7 and will last 110 days.

Written and directed by Dr. Ralph Mark Gilbert, Negro, of New York, the play will have a cast of 250 persons and accompanying spirituals will be sung by a chorus of 200 voices.

The first church was founded in 1827 by John M. Peck, a white missionary, and John Berry Meacham, a freed Negro, was its first pastor. It has had several sites, and moved to its present one in 1917.

Ludwig Lewisohn to Speak.

Ludwig Lewisohn, novelist and critic, will speak on "The Faith of Israel: Where Does It Stand Today?" at United Hebrew Temple, 225 South Skinker boulevard, at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday. The meeting is open to the public.

Talk on Industrial Unionism.

William Sentner, labor organizer, will speak on "Industrial Unionism and Its Role in the Labor Movement" at an open forum meeting at 2:30 p. m. today at the Jewish Workers' Educational Center, 1483 Goodfellow boulevard.

164 GOING ON C. OF C. TRIP TO MOBILE, ALA.

St. Louis Business Men Also to Visit New Orleans and Memphis.

About 164 St. Louis business men have made reservations for the four-day trip to Mobile, Ala., New Orleans and Memphis, Tenn., sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, to acquaint them with business opportunities in the South. The trip starts next Saturday.

A special train of 10 Pullmans will be used. The trip is also for the purpose of showing the interest of St. Louisans in the South.

In each city plans are being made to entertain the visitors. When they arrive in Mobile, Sunday morning, they are to be greeted by Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama. Two days will be spent there. The visitors are to be guests of the Chamber of Commerce aboard the Coast Guard cutter Tampa, on an all-day trip in Mobile Bay and the Gulf of Mexico.

The vessel will be met in the lower bay by private yachts and other Coast Guard boats, which will take the visitors ashore at Fort Morgan.

On Monday morning, the group will visit the State docks, inspect a liner and paper mills. In the afternoon they will tour the city.

Tuesday will be spent in New Orleans and Wednesday in Memphis. In the latter city the visitors will again go sight-seeing, have luncheon at a golf club and dinner at Hotel Peabody.

Among those who have made reservations for the trip are Senator Harry S. Truman, Mayor Dickmann, Thomas N. Dysart, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Sidney Maestre, president of the Mississippi Valley Bank & Trust Co. The Mayor has chartered an entire car.

STUDY OF OLD AGE AID PROBLEM IN MISSOURI

St. Louis C. of C. Says Either State Is Over-Liberal or Law Contains Defects.

A study of the old-age assistance problem in Missouri has been made by the Research Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and sent to members of the chamber, with the request from President Thomas N. Dysart that they communicate their views to members of the Legislature, which is preparing to fix the appropriation for 1937-38. The State Old Age Assistance Department has asked for $18,000,000 for the biennium.

"Either there is an over-liberal interpretation of the law as it is administered in certain parts of Missouri," says the bureau's report, after presenting a factual summary of the situation, "or the law itself contains inherent weakness which permits the old age assistance division to assume so much greater (proportionately) a burden than is undertaken in other states."

Missouri, the report declares, recognizes as eligible to assistance payments a greater proportion of its old age population than any other state. Moreover, it is stated, the five largest cities and their counties (St. Louis, St. Louis County, Jackson County, Buchanan County and Greene County) do not benefit from the old age assistance fund in as large a proportion as they contribute to it nor proportionately to their population of eligibles.

Increase in Outlay.

The report cites figures to show that 98,369 applications for assistance were received up to Feb. 1; that the number of persons receiving aid had increased from 4965 in January, 1936, to 55,883 in January, 1937; that total payments (of which Missouri contributed half and the Federal Government half) increased from $143,761 in February, 1936, to $638,656 in January, 1937. During the last three months, the report says, the average individual payment was $11.43.

In January, it is stated, about 16,000 additional persons were eligible but were not receiving financial help because of lack of funds. About 10,000 applications had not been passed on.

Pointing out that Federal aid will stop after Jan. 1, 1940, unless Missouri reduces the eligible age from 70 to 65, the report estimates that if such a reduction were made more than 100,000 persons would be eligible.

In that event, the report continues, the annual cost to Missouri would be $6,000,000 if the average monthly payment were $10 (less than at present) or $18,000,000 if the maximum of $30 a month were reached.

Proposition of Recipients.

The report says 315 Missourians out of 1000 of 70 years or over are receiving old-age benefits and that, were those eligible but not getting help included, the number would be increased to 402. On the latter basis, the report declares, Missouri's burden would be greater than that of any other state. None of the eight states having a greater proportion of aged persons to total population, the report says, has as high a proportion of recipients of aid.

As to its contention that disproportionate payments are made within Missouri, the report says the five largest cities and their counties contain 38 per cent of the population of 70 years or more but contain only 28 per cent of the recipients of assistance.

HELLRUNG & GRIMM KEEPS ITS FIFTIETH ANIVERSARY

Furniture Business Started in One Room Store, Now Occupies Two Buildings.

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Hellrung & Grimm House Furnishing Co., Washington avenue and Ninth street, is being observed this week.

The business was started by J. F. Hellrung and Frank Grimm on Feb. 27, 1887, in a one-room store at Sixteenth and Biddle streets. In 1891, they erected their own building at Sixteenth street and Cass avenue. On the death of Grimm in 1901, Hellrung became sole owner of the business. In 1905, he built a large addition to the store.

In May, 1911, the firm leased the building it now occupies at Washington and Ninth street. To mark the fiftieth anniversary, the store and front have been remodeled with new show windows, Neon-lighted signs and a Neon-lighted canopy for the main entrance.

In addition to the main store, the company maintains a branch at Sixteenth street and Cass and has a four-story warehouse at Twenty-second and Mullanphy streets.

J. F. Hellrung now devotes much of his time to the Cass Bank & Trust Co., of which he is president. The Hellrung & Grimm Co. business is conducted by his sons, Joseph B. and Jacob F. Hellrung Jr., and his brother-in-law, John Hacker.

MISS H. B. CHARLES FUNERAL

Constitutional Fight Divides Two Ways, on Giving Congress More Power or the Court Less

Several Suggestions Advanced, But All Ignore the Basic Necessity for Umpire Between Executive and Legislative.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.
WASHINGTON, March 6.

AMENDING the Constitution as a means of checkmating President Roosevelt's proposal to remake the Supreme Court, the talking strategy of such stalwart opponents of the plan as Senators Wheeler and Borah, is being widely discussed in Congress, but is not seriously expected to avoid a showdown on the main issue. When Wheeler and Borah, leaders of the Senate liberals, came forward with their proposals in the heat of the Court fight, they entered a field already crowded; ever since the unanimous opinion of the Court killed NRA, amending resolutions have been pouring into the legislative hopper. Most of the suggested amendments are not taken seriously, and at this stage it is doubted that any will reach a vote in Congress, at least at the present session.

The proposed amendments embody two propositions:

First, limitation of the power of the Supreme Court to declare Acts of Congress unconstitutional; and—

Second, specific grant of power to Congress to legislate in the sphere of economic regulation and social welfare—that is, for the aims of the New Deal.

Obviously amendment of the Constitution would have to be considered in light of effect on the civil, political and property rights of persons as guaranteed by the Constitution as it stands. Some of the difficulties certainly involving partial surrender of property rights and states' rights, were pointed out in an article in the Post-Dispatch last Oct. 4.

Dean Clark's Suggestion.

The amendment suggested by Dean Charles E. Clark of the School of Law of Yale University may be said to represent a serious attempt by an eminent legal authority to give Congress the new powers necessary for validation of the New Deal without sacrifice of existing rights. How far it would succeed in this effort is so much a question that perhaps extended litigation would be required to clearly define its scope.

The key by which this amendment undertakes to open the door to the great expanse of Federal power necessary to the lawful operation of the New Deal legislative program is found in the remarkable definition of "commerce" in the first section, reading:

"Commerce among the several states includes the production, manufacture, or distribution of industrial or agricultural commodities which are destined to be or have been transported from one state to another, or compete with commodities which are destined to be or have been so transported."

This goes far beyond the definition of "commerce" found in any standard dictionary and bears no close relation to the meaning of the term as commonly used. The Supreme Court's definition of commerce is of long standing, and it follows the general understanding of the word.

"The buying and selling and the transportation incidental thereto constitute commerce," the Court said in 1888, "and the regulation of commerce in the constitutional sense embraces the regulation at least of such transportation."

Much earlier the Court had defined commerce as "traffic and intercourse," and it was interstate commerce when it moved from one state to another. Such definition as that undertaken in the Clark amendment certainly would have to be weighed against the long-standing precedents of the Court. It meets the argument, too, that if limitations of the Constitution may be so easily defined away, the same procedure might be used to completely negate the limitations and guarantees of the document.

Limit on "Due Process."

The amendment suggested by Clark, as do some of the other proposals, also would undertake to limit the "due process of law" clauses of the fourteenth and fifth amendments. As the clause now stands in the fourteenth amendment, it provides:

"... Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law."

Dean Clark proposes to add:

"Due process of law shall have reference only to the procedure of executive, administrative or judicial bodies charged with the execution and enforcement of law."

Seemingly, this would make the Constitution say that due process was had if the authorities charged with enforcement followed the letter of the statute in question. In the field of state legislation, which the fourteenth amendment limits, and of national legislation limited by the fifth amendment, the Court for years has applied "due process" to the statute itself, holding that to be valid the act must be constitutional and must be "exerted within the limits of the fundamental principles of liberty and justice underlying our civil and political institutions;" that it must operate "on all alike and not subject the individual to the arbitary exercise of the powers of Government unrestrained by the established principles of private right and distributive justice;" that it must be adapted to the end to be attained, and must not be arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious.

Court's Interpretations.

It was by the measure of the Fourteenth amendment that a majority of the Court held the New York minimum wage law was unconstitutional; the act infringed the right of contract, one of the property rights guaranteed by the amendment, and so was not "due process." It is the Court's interpretation of due process which has set the measure of state regulation of public utility rates. A utility is deprived of property without due process if a state does not permit it to earn a "reasonable return" on the fair value of its property used in the public service. The state cannot prescribe rates arbitrarily by statute.

The purpose to limit due process rests principally on these interpretations. It is not possible, however, to ignore the instances in which the Court's interpretation of this same due process clause has protected the civil liberties of individuals, such as the right of assembly, free speech and free press.

Two notable examples of this phase are the recent unanimous decisions of the present Court holding unconstitutional, in the one instance, a statute of Louisiana which was an infringement of freedom of the press, and in the other a "criminal syndicalism" statute of Oregon insofar as it violated freedom of speech and assembly. In Louisiana, discriminatory taxation of newspapers was attempted, and in Oregon a Communist, Dirk de Jonge, had been sentenced to the penitentiary for attending and speaking at a public meeting.

Free Speech and Assembly.

In the Louisiana case the Court said," . . . the states are precluded from abridging the freedom of speech or of the press by force of the due process clause of the Fourteenth amendment."

Speaking of the right of assembly and free speech, the Court said in the De Jonge opinion, "For the right is one that cannot be denied without violating those fundamental principles of liberty and

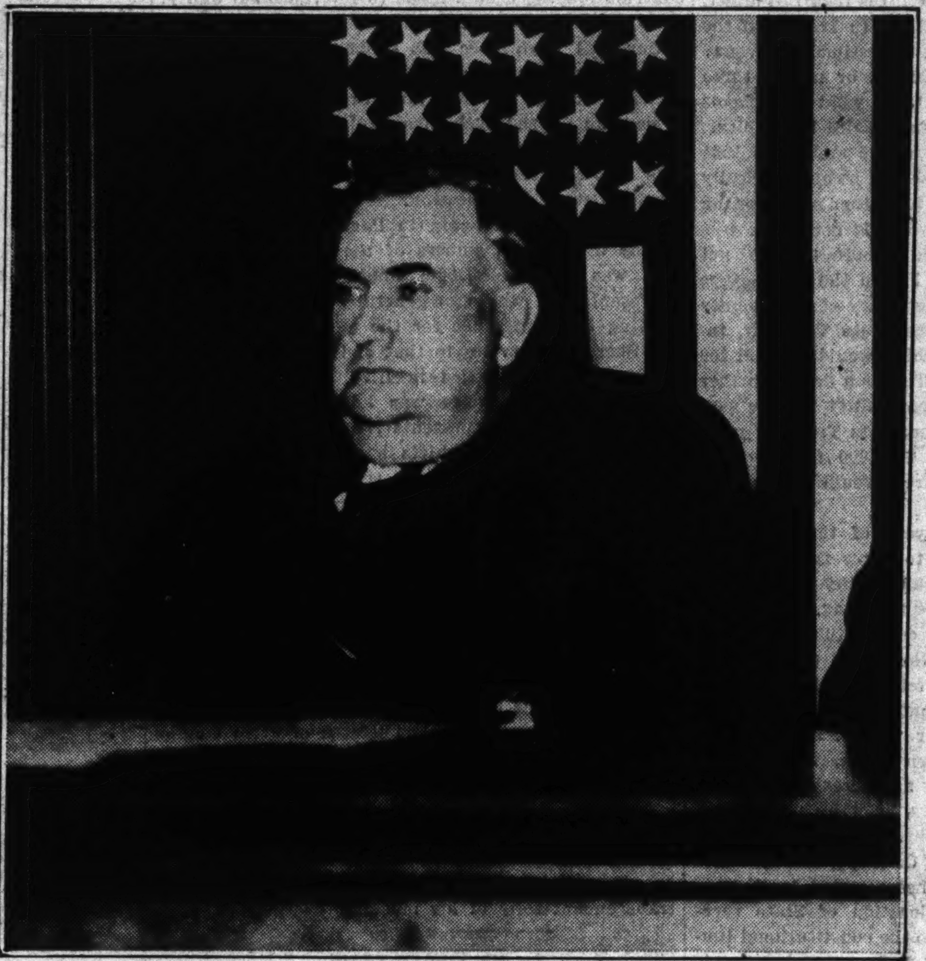
Senator From Kentucky Arises to Defend Roosevelt, Court Packing and Unpacking

Marvel Mills Logan, Junior Representative of Blue Grass State in "Greatest Deliberative Body in the World," After Two Hours Leaves Hearers Spellbound but Uncomprehending.

One of the Outstanding "but on the Other Hand" Speeches on the Topic of the Day Coincides in Time Element With Flood Relief for Louisville.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, March 6.

SENATOR LOGAN



THE parents of Senator Marvel Mills Logan (Dem.), of Kentucky, were touched with the gift of prophecy when they named him. For years his physical attributes have been among the natural wonders of the capital, but the scope of his reasoning powers was never fully revealed until he arose last Tuesday to address the Senate on the President's Supreme Court proposal.

Senator Logan, whose personal architecture follows the broad, basic pattern of the Graf Zeppelin, did not merely succeed in getting on two sides of the issue . . . Before he got through he had completely surrounded it.

After declaring himself unalterably opposed to any plan to pack the Court, on the grounds (1), that it would be an act of incredible wickedness, and (2), that it would fail of its purpose; after asserting that age is no indicator of judicial competency, since some Judges "have no sense at 50, and never did have," while others are "great jurists after 70"; after declaiming that the blessings of liberty depend upon an independent judiciary —in short, after expressing hearty concurrence in the chief arguments against the proposal, he announced that, after consulting God and his conscience, he would vote for it.

An Amazing Conversion With Flood Relief Background.

As an exhibition of allround, or circular, thinking, it was a masterly performance, which left his audience dazzled, if not convinced. His recital of how he wrestled with his own soul before reaching a decision, was reminiscent of Jacob and the angel, and the light which burst upon him was likened to that which came to Saul of Tarsus, afterward called Paul, on the road to Damascus.

Of course Paul's conversion was ascribed solely to celestial influence, whereas it has been intimated openly that Marvel Mills Logan's inspiration came from no higher than the White House, and may have been affected by so earthly a matter as the allocation of Federal funds for the rehabilitation of Louisville and other flood-stricken communities in Kentucky. That unkind suspicion rests solely on circumstantial evidence, as will be seen presently.

Ponderous is the word for Senator Logan. His vast girth is surmounted by a head which would fit snugly into a bushel basket, and when he entered the Senate six years ago, he wore a shock of hair which enabled him to produce an effect similar to that of a rhinoceros charging through a grass hut. However, as he informed the Senate Tuesday, he has learned many things during his sojourn in Washington, and one of them apparently is the address of a rational barber.

A corresponding ponderosity characterizes his public utterances. He does not forget, or allow his hearers to forget, that he is a former Chief Justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals. Up to the hour when the Governor of Kentucky called at the White House to see about getting flood relief funds, Senator Logan had been very stern and unbending about upholding the honor and dignity of our courts.

Once a Stickler for Form; Case of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

His devotion to the classic forms of legal procedure on every occasion was vividly demonstrated a few years ago, in connection with the Senate's dismissal of David Barry as sergeant-at-arms. Barry had incautiously implied in a magazine article that some Senators were not above taking money for their votes. However, when called on the carpet, and commanded to produce evidence, he confessed his inability to do so, and was promptly removed from the pay roll.

But not until Marvel Mills Logan thundered to the Senate and high heaven against the foul despotism of "condemning this man without trial before a jury of his peers." Barry, to be sure, had been tried before a jury consisting of the entire Senate—the only one empowered to try him—but Logan was not appeased, although he did rush home for supper without waiting to vote on the question of dismissal.

So far as is known, the Senator was still serenely plodding his conservative course toward Damascus when Kentucky's brisk Democratic Governor, the Hon. "Happy" Chandler, seized the opportunity to perform two, if not three, good deeds, by coming to Washington for the dinner in honor of Jim Farley, and surveying the prospects for Federal relief grants.

At that time, Senator Logan's position on the court proposal was publicly classified as "uncommitted," although there was a general impression, derived from his background and tendencies, that he would oppose it. But Gov. Chandler, after attending to other business, paid a visit to the Senate. While there he was asked by a reporter if he knew how Logan would vote.

Prediction That Came True Regardless of the Reason.

"He not only will vote for the President's plan, but he will speak for it," was the confident reply. He did . . . for approximately two hours . . . and it only remained for the suspicious to put flood relief and court proposal together.

To refute this aspersion, Logan's friends argue that since he was re-elected in November for a six-year term, he is not dependent on Roosevelt for political favor. They also contend that he is too stubborn to be influenced on any subject by any one. He said in his speech that, "I shall not try to satisfy the party to which I belong, the administration in power, my constituents or my friends."

But, as everyone knows, when once suspicion has reared its ugly head in a situation of this kind, it is hard to down.

Confessing that he had listened to the President's proposal with initial misgivings, the Senator told his colleagues he had not spared himself in seeking light. It had been necessary, he said, "to review not only the history of this nation, as it relates to the judiciary, but the history of other nations... Like a lapidary, I have attempted to hold the question up, and get the light from every angle."

Proceeding to the President's dictum that a Supreme Court Justice should retire at 70 or be assisted by a new Justice, Senator Logan quoted from an opinion delivered by himself, as Justice Logan, in which he said:

"Other witnesses say that they do not believe that any man who has passed the age of 75 is competent to attend to his own business. They must be in error on this point. If literature should be deprived of the rich contributions of those past the age of 75 years, much that has ennobled, inspired and enlightened the world since civilization had beginning would be blotted out; if from the events of history their part should be subtracted, much that has set the world forward would be lost; if their discoveries in science should be omitted from the sum total of human knowledge, there would be darkness where there is now light; if from systems of jurisprudence principles of law established by them should be eliminated, there would be imperfection where there is now perfection; and if from the governments of the world their work as statesmen should be obliterated, there would be weakness where there is now strength. Old men have wisdom that the young know not of. Let it not be written by this court, therefore, that age always dries up the fountain of the mind and destroys the God-like attributes of man."

Logan vs. Logan vs. Logan and Also Lacock vs. Logan.

But, having thus cited Justice Logan against Senator Logan, he proceeded to cite the words uttered by Senator Lacock 100 years ago against Justice Logan, and in support of Senator Logan. Lacock said of the court:

"The Judges are to be old men when appointed, and the infirmities of old age will every day increase, and as the useful and vigorous faculties of their minds diminish, in the same proportion will their obstinacy and vanity increase. Old men are often impatient of contradiction, frequently vain and susceptible of flattery. These weaknesses incident to old age will be discovered and practiced upon by the lawyer willing to make the most of his profession, and located in the same city, holding daily and familiar intercourse with the judges. And thus, your court may become subservient to the Washington bar. The judges, bowed down by the weight of years, will be willing to find a staff to lean upon."

Having now made one circle of the track, Logan started on the second lap, as follows:

"There are stronger reasons, however, in my judgment, than the age of the Justices, which would justify such legislation if there is nothing else in the way. After a judge has served the public until he is eligible for retirement he ought to be given an opportunity to have some of the good things of life in his age. Naturally, if there is no provision for the appointment of someone to serve with him, he will perhaps serve on, feeling that the knowledge of the law which he has obtained should be used as long as he is capable of using it. If, however, he were aware that his presence was not necessary on every occasion, but that he did have the right to appear and vote on important matters, he would retire more willingly, feeling that he might be of service to his country if the need for his wisdom and experience should be necessary."

The foregoing language is taken verbatim from the speech as it appears in the Congressional Record, and no attempt will be made here to interpret it. If Senator Logan meant to say that a Judge would retire more willingly if he felt that the country needed his wisdom and experience, that is his business.

The Senator Just Doesn't Like Personnel of the Court.

However, he did have a point to make, and it was this—that he objects to the present personnel of the Supreme Court, not on

The White House Press Conference—One of the Many "New Deal" Phenomena

Nothing Like It in Any Other Capital—Correspondents Complain Roosevelt Broke Faith When He Had Real News.

By RICHARD L. STOKES
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, March 6.

AS President Roosevelt and his New Deal swing into their second term, there is evidence that the Chief Executive is working out a change in the character of his semi-weekly press conferences at the White House, which during the last four years developed into a characteristic "Roosevelt phenomenon."

At his first gathering of the sort, on March 8, 1933, the reporters instantly discovered that what had been a routine matter with previous Presidents bade fair, in Mr. Roosevelt's hands, to become important and interesting. An agency which Coolidge, Harding and Hoover had either dreaded or neglected was pressed into active use by the Democratic newcomer, who authorized oral questions for the first time since the opening year of the Harding administration, and voiced a hope that the conferences here would be like the "family parties" which he had held at Albany. He shook hands with each correspondent as the reporters filed past his desk.

During the emergency period, the White House meetings served the President perfectly as an instrument for communicating his ideas and plans to the public. But with the advent of "recovery," and a clearer understanding of the President's centralizing policies, a considerable section of the press became less and less malleable to the White House stamp. Thereupon the more sharp-witted of the correspondents sensed that an alteration was taking place in Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward journalism.

Signs of a Change.

As early as June, 1936, it appeared that the President had determined that no news should be permitted to develop at his press conferences. That attitude became more apparent after the election of last November, one of the results of which was to convince the President and his advisers that the metropolitan newspapers, 80 per cent of which opposed him, had lost much of their political influence and, with his overwhelming majority, newspaper support was less and less needed. At present, according to not a few critical spirits, the White House press conferences have degenerated into meetings that are less professional than social.

For more than three years the Washington correspondents, while admitting that the situation was not ideal, felt that under the new arrangement it was more satisfactory than ever before. In theory, the conferences were a sort of open forum at which the reporters, as representatives of the public, could freely cross-examine the responsible head of the Government on salient policies, and receive specific and authoritative replies for publication.

These gatherings were the marvel of foreign correspondents, who exclaimed that nothing of the kind was known to the most democratic countries of Europe, and that more authentic information could be obtained at the White House in 10 minutes than in six months at Downing Street. In fact, however, the advantage was much in the President's favor.

Change Made Complete.

The growing concern of the Washington correspondents came to a head last Sunday when the New York Times published an authorized and exclusive interview with the President, which proved to be an accurate forerunner, even to some details of phraseology, of his attack on the Supreme Court at Thursday night's "Victory" dinner. In other words, when the President wished to prepare the public mind on the most signal news topic of the day, he did not make use of the regular agency at his disposal, the White House press conferences, but chose instead, for the first time since he has held national office, to avail himself of one carefully selected newspaper. The result was that the tone of the article was noticeably favorable to the President's Supreme Court plans.

This new and drastic departure, in violation of an unwritten understanding between the President and the correspondents excited instant protest from the latter. Their spokesman at Tuesday afternoon's conference was J. Fred Essary, chief of the Washington bureau of the Baltimore Sun. Mr. Roosevelt sought at first to parry the attack with jocularities. When it was pressed, he volunteered a promise that the offense would not happen again. But in the meantime, the White House had accomplished its purpose, which was that the introductory statement concerning the most critical controversy of the President's career should be at once influential and partisan.

A Breach of Reciprocity.

There was little the correspondents could do save protest. Their conferences are based on an understanding of reciprocity. The correspondents are pledged for instance, to make no use of information given confidentially during the meetings. In return it has been understood that the President's attitude would be impartial alike toward all correspondents. Favoritism to any individual is opposed in part on ethical grounds, since a beneficiary of that sort, despite his own efforts, is likely to find himself put to use as a vehicle for White House propaganda. A correspondent guilty of breaking a White House confidence would be punished by his colleagues, but it is obviously impossible for the correspondents to discipline the President of the United States.

This incident is the latest and most specific illustration of the one-sided character into which the White House press conferences have evolved.

The advantages are overwhelmingly on the side of the President. In the first place, it is now and then officially declared that while questions may be asked concerning a definite topic, Mr. Roosevelt will decline to answer them. Thus, during the last presidential campaign the President refused to answer any question relating to his attitude toward amendments of the Constitution.

Secondly, the President may, and sometimes does, escape from answering pertinent queries by resorting to the expedient of declaring that his replies are "off the record." This plea debars the correspondents from making any use whatsoever of his responses.

Thirdly, he may and frequently does avail himself of the privilege of returning vague and indefinite replies. The correspondents are forced in effect to accept such evasions as final, for they have no effective means for inducing the President to change the nature of his answers. At last Tuesday's conference for instance, Mr. Roosevelt avoided specific replies concerning legislation to supplement his NRA report and to introduce compulsory arbitration into industrial controversies.

Mechanics of Conference.

An account of the mechanics of the press conference, as conducted by Mr. Roosevelt, may, under the circumstances, prove timely. The meetings are held twice a week, at 4 p. m. Tuesday, for the convenience of morning newspapers, and 10:30 a. m. on Fridays for that of evening journals. They take place in the President's office in the west wing of the White House. Admission is limited to local reporters for Washington newspapers and to correspondents

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Word to the Majority.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SALUTE the mighty and militant majority which made the mandate of 1936. You are, indeed, all-powerful. To you there need be no restraint. Your President confesses that if he does not lead where you want to go, someone else will. You have already found how to control the Congress. You know how to strangle the Supreme Court. The Constitution itself can be amended or repealed at your sweet will, or you can brush it aside and ignore it. You are supreme, for you are the majority.

But, brother, you are marching in the ranks of today's triumphant and irresistible majority—could it be that tomorrow you might find you are classed as one of a pitiful and miserable minority? Doesn't it all depend where the line of fight is drawn? Isn't it merely a question of what that majority will tackle next? If there is a division on religious lines and you are Catholic or Jew, you will be in the minority. If on national lines and you are of foreign birth, you will be in a minority. If on racial lines and you are black, you will be in a minority. If on organized industrialism and you are a free lance or a farmer, you will be in a minority. And who can say when and where just such an issue will arise and where the next battle line will be drawn?

Constitutions and courts are made for minorities. Majorities do not need them. As a minority member, you will cry for your rights—but rights cannot be asserted or enforced by a minority. Majorities control. Rights of minorities can be protected in one way only—that is by constitutional government. Those rights are defined and made sacred by a Constitution interpreted and preserved against all aggression by an independent, impartial, immovable Supreme Court. Would you today, drunk with the power of a marching and militant majority, destroy your constitutions and your courts? Then, as one of tomorrow's minority, remember that it was you yourself who destroyed your only safeguard and protection. And tomorrow will come.

AVERAGE AMERICAN.

Retort From a Shermanite.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MRS. DEE CAMPBELL DAVIS protests against the use of the Gen. Sherman stamp on U. S. mail, asserting she would rather use 4-cent stamps than flaunt the image of one who waged war on defenseless women and children, and she is sure all true Southerners will do the same.

If that is the case, it would pay Uncle Sam to get the Sherman stamps out without delay and the followers of Jeff Davis would have a chance to repay Gen. Sherman for the long trip he made with his gallant soldiers to the sea.

Murphysboro, Ill. S. A. BASTIAN.

Old Lade.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S allusion to the "three-horse team" carried my thoughts back to my father's farm near Carlinville, Ill.

As long as I can remember, Lady, a Percheron mare weighing 1500 pounds, was an institution. As she grew older and more firmly established in the affections of all of us, her name became corrupted to "Old Lade."

Old Lade was always used as the center horse in a three-horse team and to her were harnessed, one on each side, other available animals, often fractious colts with ideas of their own as to how farm work should be done. To these Old Lade paid no attention, but plodded straight down the field, drawing the youngsters back into line and holding them in the furrow by sheer weight and wisdom.

Our fields were always well plowed.

FRED L. DENBY.

Swastika on the Statue of Liberty.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

REPRESENTATIVE BRADY'S first step, in introducing into the State Legislature a bill to fix penalties for "false editorials," would be to muzzle the free press, which is the backbone of liberty.

I am sure I know what his next steps would be: The second would be to replace the head of the Statue of Liberty with a swastika, and the third, to manipulate radio to suit Mr. Brady.

Does he know that his ideas are turning back toward the days of witchcraft?

M. KOPRIVICA.

Favors Memorial for John Rogers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WITH deepest regret and sorrow, I have read of the passing of John Rogers of the Post-Dispatch, not only because I knew him personally, and was quite fond of him, but in addition, I feel that in his death St. Louis has lost one of its most useful citizens.

There are many unsung heroes who do great good in this world. I hope that John Rogers will not be one of them. His service to the community not only can hardly be measured, but it was of a type that few are able to give and few have the courage or desire to give.

Many useful citizens have had streets, parks or schools named after them, and some have statues erected to their memory. I, for one, believe that John Rogers is as much entitled to some such honor as any citizen we have ever had, and I suggest that a public fund be raised and some fit recognition be created in his memory for the wonderful civic services he has rendered.

A. P. C.

WARNING TO THE SCHOOL LOBBY.

It is a well-known fact that the public school lobby is the most powerful agency of its kind in Missouri. It comprises thousands of teachers, local board members, principals, superintendents and other employes, ideally located throughout the State to bring pressure on the Legislature. Unlike other lobbies, it has the support of public opinion because public opinion is in the habit of assuming that anything asked of the Legislature for education is by that fact meritorious. It would be exceedingly unwise for the school lobby to forfeit that support. It would be bad for the schools, bad for the children, bad for the State.

The present situation is going to test the school lobby's wisdom. In the Constitution of Missouri is a provision requiring an automatic allocation to the schools of 25 per cent of the State's revenue. In the statutes is a law increasing this figure to 33 1-3 per cent, leaving no room for the Legislature's judgment as to the needs of the schools. There has been little or no complaint about this automatic allocation until the State's revenues—hence the revenue of the schools—were greatly swelled by the liquor and sales taxes, whose proceeds, especially the latter, were designed largely for relief.

In 1933-34, the schools received $9,600,000, no great sum. In 1935-36, when the new taxes took full effect, the amount jumped to $17,000,000. In 1937-38, if the 2 per cent sales tax is enacted, the estimated revenue for the schools will be $26,590,000, or nearly three times what it was in 1933-34. Just what the schools would do with all this new-found wealth is not clear. It exceeds even the demands of the ambitious 1931 school law. Why the schools should be automatically enriched beyond their needs, when other and pressing obligations remain to be met, also is not clear.

As though this anticipated windfall were not enough, it appears there is a bill in the Legislature for the payment of $1200 of the salary of each county school superintendent from the State Treasury, instead of the $400 now paid, which would add $91,200 to the State's education bill. This is a device further to relieve the counties of responsibility for the support of the schools. Again, the State Treasury must foot a bill of approximately $800,000 for teachers' pensions. These two measures would add nearly $1,000,000 to the $26,590,000.

It will interest the taxpayers of the two most populous areas in the State to know that, whereas St. Louis, St. Louis County, Kansas City and Jackson County pay 45 per cent of the sales tax, 57 per cent of the property tax and 90 per cent of the income tax, they get only 13 per cent of the school fund, though they have 37 per cent of the total school enrollment. Granted that the populous communities should contribute in proportion to their wealth, these figures do not make sense. And when Representative Phillips of Kansas City proposed an increase in the allotment to large school centers, he was opposed by a spokesman for the school lobby.

Apart, however, from the disproportionate share the cities pay, the time has become ripe for the reduction of the automatic allocation of State revenue to the schools from 33½ to the constitutional limit of 25 per cent. If the 2 per cent sales tax is adopted, the schools will receive more funds at the 25 per cent figure in the next biennium than they did in the last. They will be getting vastly more than in 1933-34. If the 25 per cent figure is adopted, the money thus saved can be devoted to relief needs, which apparently are going to be larger than the $10,000,000 tentatively set.

For the school lobby to oppose such a move would be, in our opinion, bad judgment and worse tactics, to say nothing of being contrary to sound public policy. It would focus attention of the people on the enrichment of the schools through emergency taxation. It would give rise to all sorts of disturbing questioning as to what the schools are going to do with their new riches, especially if the relief situation should again become acute. Schools, certainly, but bread comes even before education.

KILLING THE UMPIRE.

Mr. Roosevelt's use of the homely simile of the three-horse plow team was designed to go well in the country, but a good many city boys do not understand the business of plowing. So Representative Guyer of Kansas had the good idea of explaining the President's plan to pack the Supreme Court in the language of baseball, which is thoroughly understood both by country boys and by city boys.

"Someone attempted to steal a base," says Mr. Guyer, "and the old umpire called him out. Now all that one of the managers of one of the departments of this government game needs is an umpire who will call the players safe on all the bases. And right in the middle of the game, the home team asks the privilege of hand-picking an umpire for the last four innings."

One of the classics of American folklore is the tragic description of that day in Mudville when the mighty Casey struck out. We all recall what happened when the umpire said "Strike one"—

From the benches, black with people, there went up a muffled roar,
Like the beating of the storm-waves on a stern and distant shore;
"Kill him! Kill the umpire!" shouted someone on the stand.
And it's likely they'd have killed him had not
Casey raised his hand.

Killing the umpire is a grand old American battle-cry, but even the most wild-eyed fan, in his calmer moments, realizes that the umpire is an essential part of the game.

WHEN THEY CROWN GEORGE.

Of course, it won't be a flop, but, what with one thing and another, it begins to look as if the coronation of George VI would not be the "smash hit" the sons and daughters of England were rather fondly counting on.

Will it be lese majeste to intimate that this historic pageant is, in a way, akin, say, to a world series? Oh, call the comparison odious, if you will, but a spectacle is a spectacle, whatever the auspices, and there's plenty of grief in staging one, and familiar grief. Right now, London is muttering, or even squawking, just as St. Louis has done on many occasions, about the allotment of tickets. But there are frictional facets to this royal performance from which the annual baseball classic is providentially free. Certain personages have been invited, much to the discomfiture of certain other personages, and the latter are threatening to cut the affair cold. That's a dilemma which, so far as we are advised, has never bleached a hair in Rickey's flowing locks or Breadon's close-cropped poll.

Worst of all, the coronation has run into a form of competition, not exactly cutthroat, but quite embarrassing. Its name is Edward. Dynastically, the Duke may be a down-and-outer, but personally and sentimentally he is a problem and promises to be a counter-attraction. If he chooses to be married a week or two before the crowning, it is greatly feared the world will be so exhausted emotionally that the second ceremony will be an anticlimax. And, at first blush, one might say this isn't cricket. But when one is told that the trinkets he bestowed on the girl during the courtship have been returned to the Windsor family, putting Edward in the predicament of an "Injun-giver"—well, what can one say?

Really, it is all somewhat confusing. But this we may be sure of: England will muddle through. Britons never will be slaves. God save the King!

A NAIVE PROPOSAL.

Some innocent member of Congress offered an amendment to the naval appropriations bill asking the President to call an international conference on armaments. The House promptly killed it.

We have learned a lot about arms conferences since 1920. That party of our own at Washington in 1921 was a gaudy show and was esteemed at the time a big success, but, in retrospect, about the only important thing that happened was that America generously consented to scrap a few ships. What contribution the others made to international amity, if any, is lost in the mists of time.

Our 1921 conference was supposed to relate both to naval and land armament, but it is distinctly recalled that the moment land armament was mentioned, up popped such masterful French orators as Briand and Viviani, and the purport of their remarks was that any reduction in land armament was distinctly out of the question.

The nations met again in Paris in 1927 and one of the unofficial members of the American delegation was Big Bass-Drum Shearer, arms company representative, who was generally charged with attending the conference for the purpose of scuttling it. Shearer's services to that end were superfluous. The conference scuttled itself.

One arms conference was held at Geneva, and Maxim Litvinov, representative of Soviet Russia, horrified the stuffed shirts by offering to disband the Soviet army at once if the other nations disbanded theirs. Any plan for real disarmament is completely out of order in the alleged disarmament conferences the world has had since the war.

When the London conference was over, it appeared that, instead of decreasing naval armament, it raised the ante and, when the delegates went back home, the shipyards and foundries began to hum to build the navies UP to treaty strength.

If by this time the United States is not thoroughly disillusioned on the whole business of arms conferences, and of the insincerity of nations in attending such meetings, we have become a little stupid.

Meanwhile, the nations are arming as never before, national budgets are cracking under the strain, the war debts remain unpaid and John J. Citizen everywhere is paying through the nose for the transcendent folly of his masters.

MR. CURLEY AGAIN.

Those who thought that James M. Curley's emphatic defeat for the Senate last November had retired him to private life for all time, have, as the saying goes, another think coming. Returning from a Florida honeymoon, Massachusetts' eloquent spoilsman "discovered" a movement on foot to "draft" him to run for Mayor of Boston, an office which he has filled through three full terms. Mr. Curley is no person to ignore "public sentiment," and so he promptly announced his candidacy "on his record."

The late Governor is a shrewd politician, and the City of Boston is a battleground more to his liking than the whole of the Bay State. Even so, the opposition to him will have greater strength than ever before. When Mr. Curley has run previously, it has been as a successful candidate. But when he goes before the people of Boston this time, it will be as a discredited Governor who was overwhelmingly rebuked in his campaign for the Senate. Moreover, heretofore the opposition to Curley in his mayoralty campaigns has usually been divided and confused. This time, it looks as if it will be Curley and his followers against the rest of Boston. That augurs well for Boston.

TAKING IT TO THE PEOPLE.

No one will be surprised at the defeat in the Missouri House of Representatives of the resolution to submit a constitutional amendment providing secrecy in elections and establishing beyond any question the right of grand juries to open ballot boxes in aid of election investigations. A group of legislators which would pass the vicious shotgun motion bill to protect criminals against the penalties of the law could hardly have been expected to vote to free elections from the eyes of political snoopers, through the elimination of ballot numbers which correspond to numbers opposite names on the poll books.

These unrepresentative Representatives have won only a skirmish. The battle has just begun. The sponsor of the resolution, Dr. J. A. Gray, Representative from Atchison County, up in the Iowa-Nebraska corner, will take the issue to the people through the initiative and referendum. His plan is to have the proposed amendment submitted in the 1938 election.

The continual flouting of the people's will at Jefferson City means that Missouri will have to do more and more of its law-making at the ballot boxes. There could not be a better issue on which to launch such a program or on which to rebuke our faithless Representatives than on their rejection of the secret ballot.

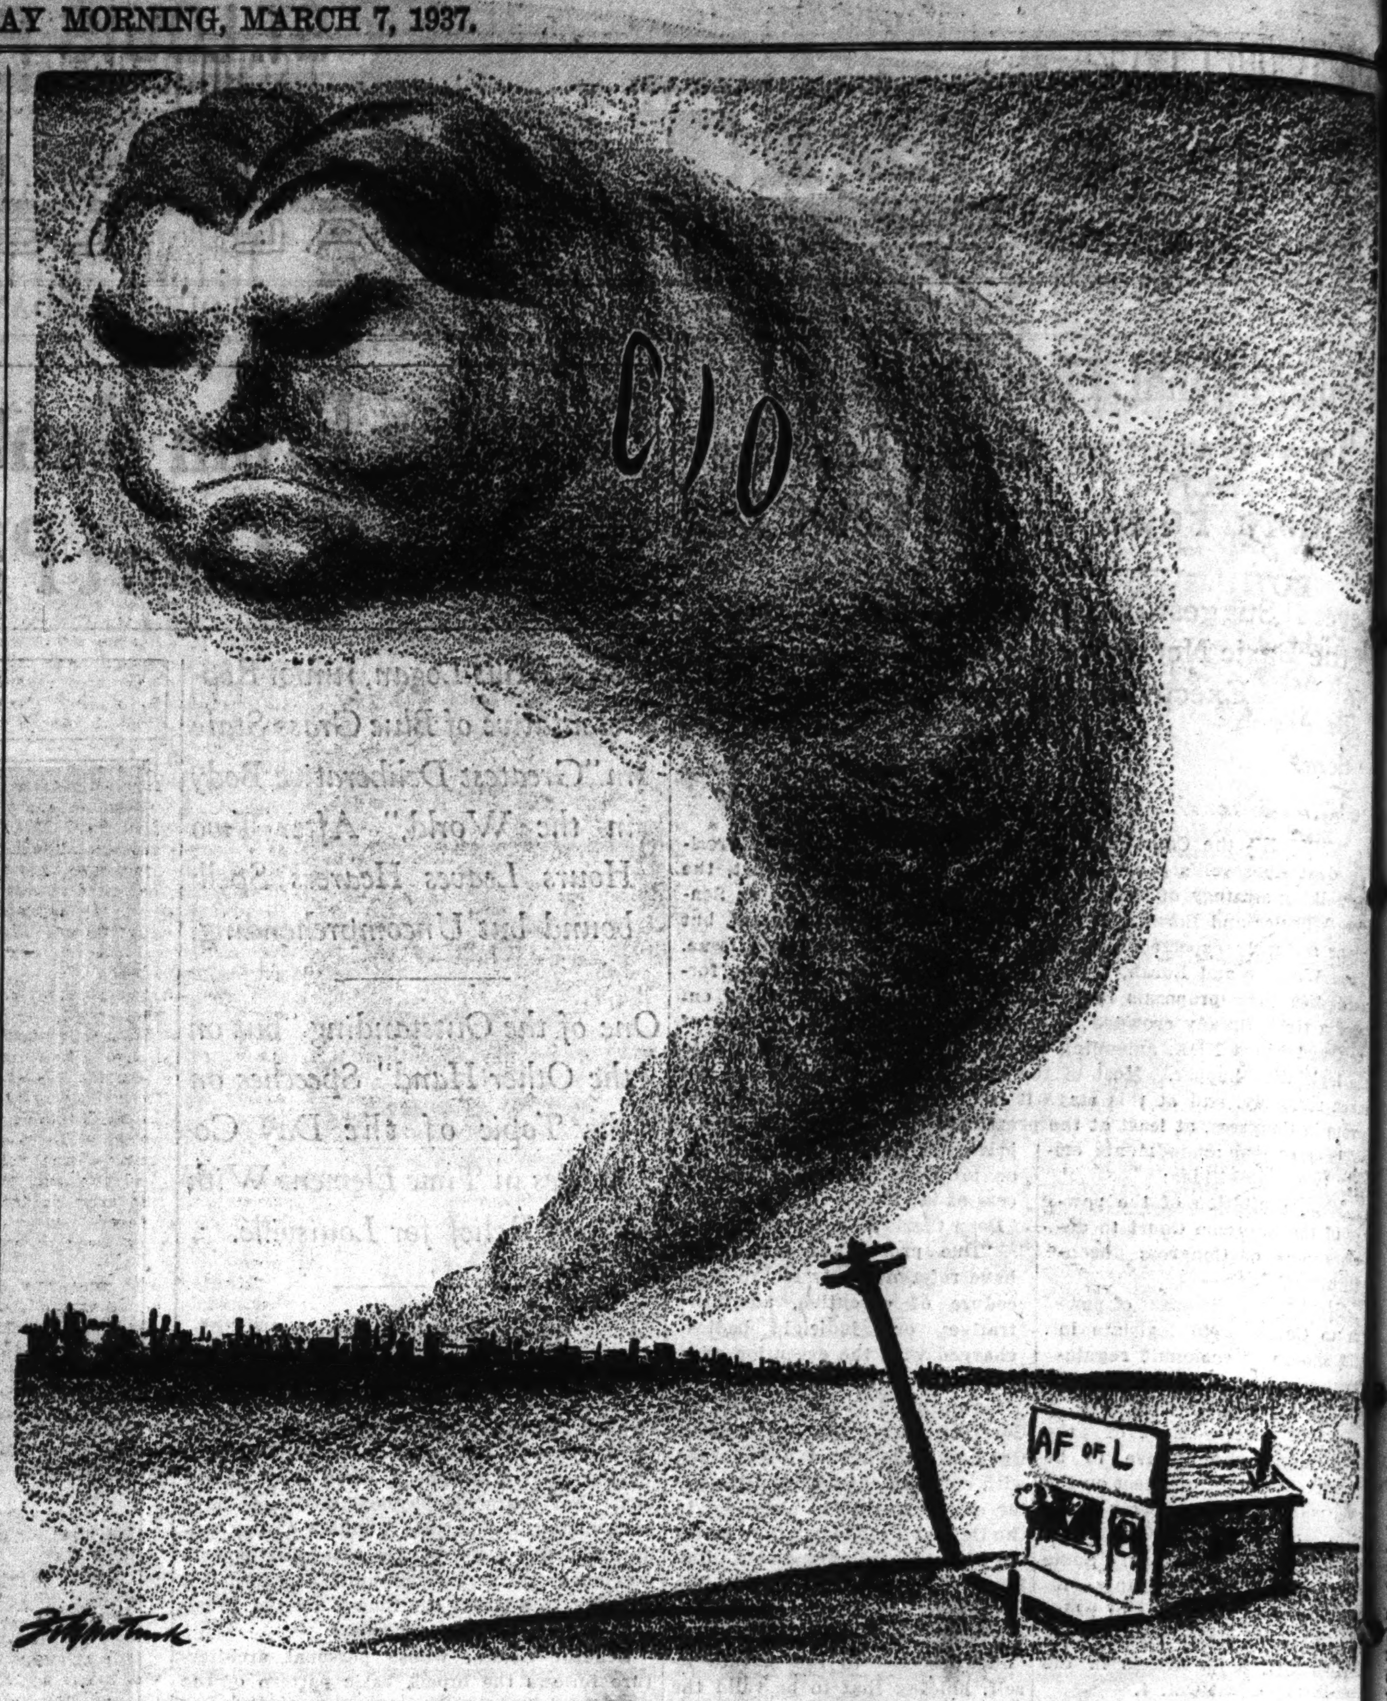
THE TOWNSHIP; ALSO OUTMODED.

Dr. William L. Bradshaw, University of Missouri political scientist, has called attention to one way in which taxes can be reduced in 24 counties of this State without diminishing the services provided. The counties are Stoddard, Pemiscot, Texas, Wright, Nodaway, Gentry, De Kalb, Harrison, Davies, Caldwell, Mercer, Grundy, Livingston, Carroll, Putnam, Sullivan, Linn, Chariton, Cass, Bates, Vernon, Barton, Henry and Dade. The way they can save money is by discarding the outmoded township system which they continue to employ in local government. Residents of these counties owe it to themselves to find out about Dr. Bradshaw's survey and to see that it is discussed publicly. If there is no good reason for continuing the costly county system on its century-old basis, there obviously is no justification for the even more anachronistic township form. This change is not only needed in about one-fourth of the counties of Missouri, but in most of Illinois' 102 counties. It will be made everywhere eventually, so that the way of wisdom is to enjoy the economies which derive from it as soon as possible.



"BOYS, WE'D BETTER GO OUT AND STOP IT!"

Steel Brings a Brighter Day

Recent developments in the steel industry may prove to be most important steps in country's labor history, Pittsburgh paper says; strike danger is apparently removed, and fine example is set for other fields; credit given to managements for recognizing "passing of an old order," and to labor leaders for their conciliatory tactics.

From the Pittsburgh Press.

WITH amazing suddenness, the giant empire of steel has taken steps more intimately and sharply affecting the fortunes of millions of citizens than they are affected by vital actions of their state and national governments. The magnitude and power of America's great industrial combinations were never more strikingly revealed than by the breath-taking developments during the last few days within the government of steel.

The establishment of a basic 40-hour week and a minimum $5 daily wage for common labor in the nation's No. 1 industry, and the acceptance of collective bargaining by United States Steel, its biggest unit, may prove the most important simultaneous steps ever taken in the country's labor history.

They are important not only to the workers and their families of an industry which employs more than half a million men, but in the broader social, economic and political considerations that affect the whole nation. It may take months or years to reveal the full effect of what has just happened, but a few results are immediately apparent. Among them are these:

1. Tremendous impetus has been given to the movement toward a shorter work week by an industry which less than 20 years ago claimed it could not live without the 12-hour day.

2. The $5-a-day wage, an economic marvel when Henry Ford announced it (in 1914), now applies to the lowest and most unskilled work of the country's basic industry.

3. United States Steel, for 50 years the bulwark of the anti-union movement, has sat down and discussed wages and conditions with representatives of an outside union and signed a contract with them, although only a few months ago the American Iron and Steel Institute announced defiantly that its members would never do so.

4. Millions of dollars of added wages will be turned loose, influencing the manufacturing and commerce of the whole nation.

5. The policies adopted by steel are bound to have a great bearing on wages, hours and conditions in many other industries.

6. Prospects of a steel strike have apparently been removed, and now that steel has consented to a shorter week with higher pay it is almost inconceivable that the mine operators—among whom some of the largest are steel companies—will persist in demands for a longer week and reduced pay, thus precipitating a coal strike.

7. The whole general effect is bullish, but in a sense in which that word was never used in the boom days of '29—bullish for the workers, the common man, the little milltown merchant, the living standards of the great masses of our people.

8. In a very great degree, what steel has done marks partial and important acceptance of the social and political philosophy which has decided the last three elections.

Many influences and factors combined to bring about these revolutionary changes in the policy of what has been a hard-boiled business. Many persons—politicians, labor leaders, company union representatives and others—will claim a share of the credit. Without denying to them whatever praise they deserve, great credit must be given to the industrial managements which recognized the passing of an old order and shaped their policies to meet new desires and new aspirations, and did so without costly industrial strife.

Credit must also be given to the CIO leadership which met in tolerant and conciliatory mood with Big Steel and modified its own policies sufficiently to enable a satisfactory concord to be reached.

Perhaps it is true, as some observers are saying, that steel has just digested the election returns. If so, it at least showed good sense and patriotism by adapting its ways more closely to the desires which those returns indicated, rather than by following a path of blind resistance that would surely have led to costly strife.

To the Pittsburgh district, the news from the steel front has brought a surge of optimism. Not only have the fears of a bitter strike been allayed, but millions of dollars of added wages will soon be in circulation. The unemployment problem should be partially met and relief needs be partly cut.

While many grave problems of industrial relations remain and many trials and errors and tribulations are certain before they are solved, we believe that the events in steel indicate the dawning of a new day and we congratulate the industry for the sensible steps it has taken.

Mutual Responsibility in England

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

GREAT BRITAIN rarely has a strike of long duration and almost never encounters violence in industrial disputes. It is strengthening the fabric of industrial peace year by year. The chief pillars of this system are strong trade unions responsible under law and controlled by their memberships, and an effective social security buttressed by social legislation.

The British no longer have strikes designed merely to establish the principle of collective bargaining. Employers take that principle for granted.

"Conservative Britain" has a great deal more social legislation than the United States has. It has more Government intervention in business than the United States has. Yet nobody seriously doubts that the British will continue indefinitely to rely on private enterprise as the mainspring of their economic life. They have discovered in Britain that foresighted social legislation is the best way to prevent radicalism of every sort.

More pertinent for Americans just now, the British have discovered that industrial peace is more certain and industrial prosperity more assured if employers accept labor organization and collective bargaining readily, provided the Government at the same time holds labor organizations to their responsibility and makes sure that they do not fall into the hands of ruthless leaders seeking to exploit the rank and file.

Jefferson on the Constitutio

From the Birmingham (Ala.) News.

WE should still have due respect for t wisdom of our great statesmen of t earlier days of the nation, and, while quo tions from them cannot settle questions today, they have their proper place in o political discussions. Particularly is t true of the present controversy on the c stitutional issue, since many of the qu tions now before us go back to the found of the Constitution.

If there is any statesman of the past w more than any other is worth quoting in t crisis by those who are opposed to the Pr ident's proposal to alter the Supreme Cou it is Thomas Jefferson.

For one thing, the wisdom of "the Sage Monticello" was very great, and his insig into the future very keen. For anoth thing, Jefferson was at times a critic of t Constitution in some respects, and of t Supreme Court in many respects. No Pr ident has ever been more critical of t Supreme Court than Jefferson.

But Jefferson believed deeply in the pr esses of constitutional democracy. He a preciated the importance of going about fu damental changes in the duly constitut way. He realized the dangers of resorting fundamental change without due consul tion of the people, from whom author must come under our form of governme In particular, he knew that the peop should be jealous of their liberties always freedom and democracy were to be proper safeguarded.

Two quotations from Jefferson which a especially pertinent to the present contr versy come to hand. One is:

"I had rather ask an enlargement of po er from the nation, where it is found nec sary, than to assume it by a constructi of the Constitution which would make powers boundless."

Right now, an effort is being made to sume an enlargement of power by cha ing the construction of the Constitution, stead of by asking the nation for it in way which Jefferson thought wise.

The other quotation is:

"It would be a dangerous delusion were confidence in the men of our choice to lence our fears for the safety of our righ Confidence is everywhere the parent of de potism; free government is founded in je ousy, not in confidence. It is jealousy, a not confidence, which prescribes limited co stitutions to bind down those whom we a obliged to trust with power. Our Consti tion has accordingly fixed the limits which, and no further, our confidence go. In questions of power, then, let no m be heard of confidence in man, but bind h down from mischief with the chains of t Constitution."

The American people have shown th confidence in President Roosevelt. But, Jefferson so wisely warned, we cannot a ford to let confidence in any man blind to the constant necessity for safeguardi our liberties. We need always to be jealo of our freedom. Its preservation requir eternal vigilance.

ROOSEVELT TALKS OF COMPULSORY ARBITRATION LAW

Uses It as Bait for Certain Apprehensive Senators Noncommittal on Supreme Court Plan.

GREEN AND LEWIS BOTH AGAINST IT

In Light of Precedents Such an Act Would Be Sure to Be Adjudged Unconstitutional.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 6. — As part of the strategy he is employing in his campaign to put over his plan to enlarge the Supreme Court, President Roosevelt is holding out to "neutral" Senators who are uneasy over the relations between industry and labor the possibility of a law intended to give the Federal Government authority to compel settlement of labor disputes.

Recently he discussed with a group of Senators the need for such a law. He used the General Motors strike as an illustration of the helplessness of the Government in the face of a prolonged industrial dispute. He intimated that such a law as he has suggested in this and other conversations would not, of course, be upheld by the present Supreme Court.

Organized Labor Against It.

While the President may gain some support in the Senate by this device, it will not help him with organized labor. Both John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in statements to the Post-Dispatch today declared their opposition to compulsory arbitration in any form. Although both labor leaders have taken a stand in favor of the President's Supreme Court proposal, they left no doubt that they would work against any effort to obtain compulsory arbitration.

"I do not favor compulsory arbitration," Lewis said. "To begin with, I do not think it would be possible to draft a law that the courts would uphold. Under compulsory arbitration an award would have the force of law. On the one hand, the workers could be compelled to return to work by law; on the other hand, enforcement of the law might mean the compulsory liquidation of a business. A law of that nature is inconceivable."

"We would be unalterably opposed to compulsory arbitration, either by legislation or otherwise," Green declared.

The A. F. of L. head came out in opposition to the proposal made by Secretary of Labor Perkins at the time of the General Motors strike that Congress pass legislation giving to the Labor Department the power to subpena principals in labor disputes.

Supreme Court Decision of 1926.

The United States Supreme Court by a unanimous decision written by Justice Van Devanter and handed down in 1925, held the Kansas Industrial Relations act unconstitutional. The act created a court of industrial relations to arbitrate wage disputes.

The United States Supreme Court held that the power to fix wages granted to the Court of Industrial Relations was an abridgement of the freedom of contract, a property right implied in the "due process" clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Five of the present Justices were on the Supreme bench in 1925. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Roberts, Stone and Cardozo were not.

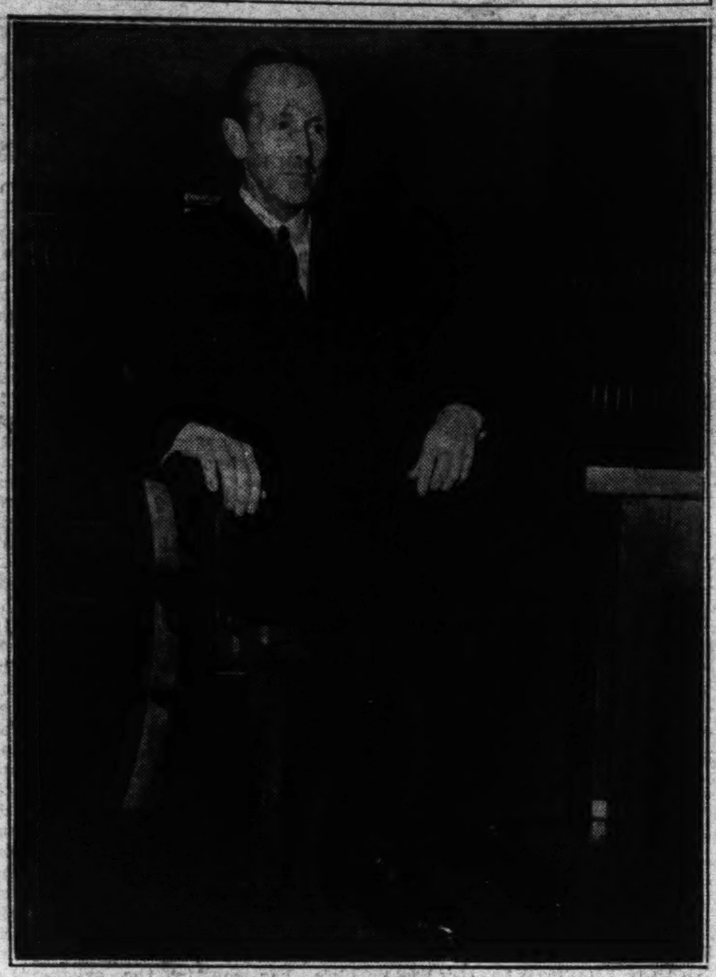
The Court of Industrial Relations had jurisdiction over certain industries, mining and transportation, all of which the act declared to be so affected with a public interest that strikes and other conflicts should not be allowed to interfere with their functioning. The law was bitterly opposed by labor.

In 1921 in defiance of an injunction Alexander Howatt, leader of the United Mine Workers in Kansas at that time, called a strike. He was sentenced for contempt of court and his sentence upheld by the United States Supreme Court in a decision prior to that in the case of the Wolff Packing Co. versus the State of Kansas in which the Kansas law was declared unconstitutioal. The Supreme Court held that the provision pertaining to strikes could be separated from the rest of the law.

In 1922, the contempt sentence of another union leader was affirmed by the Supreme Court. Both of these decisions caused widespread indignation in the ranks of organized labor. The Kansas law was held up as an example of exactly the kind of law which labor did not want. This background undoubtedly explains the extreme wariness of organized labor concerning anything which even distantly resembles compulsory arbitration.

At a recent press conference the President was asked to amplify the statement he made in last Sunday's interview regarding means of enforcing obligations and contracts between employers and employes. He replied that it would take too long a time to give an adequate answer and that he had not worked out the idea sufficiently to discuss at a press conference.

"Big Player" and Husband Of World's Best Dressed Woman



HARRISON WILLIAMS.

Harrison Williams, No. 1 Utilities Magnate, a Serene, Vibrant Figure

Securities Commission Hearings Reveal Him to Public Eye as Man Who Ran $2,072,000 Into $612,000,000.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Having vaguely hovered for some years in the background of his wife, who was proclaimed by Paris costumers to be the best-dressed woman in the world, Harrison Williams of New York suddenly emerged this week, thanks to the Securities and Exchange Commission's hearings upon investment trusts, as the country's No. 1 utilities magnate, who pyramided an original investment of $2,072,000 into a personal fortune of $612,000,000 and control of properties valued at two and a half billions, or one-fifth of the privately-owned utilities in the United States.

Though long since recognized by Wall Street as one of its giants, Williams has succeeded until now in remaining more or less obscure to the public eye. Those who attended the SEC session, and for the first time scanned this newly unveiled financial luminary, would have given him honorable mention, though by no means top rank, in the field of masculine garb, up to the moment when he donned his overcoat. He wore a deftly tailored suit of dark blue, double-breasted, the trousers of which differed from all the other pantaloons present in lacking cuffs at the ankles. There was a snugly fitting turn-down white collar, with a dark tie striped in maroon, and the edge of a white handkerchief over the left breast, blue hose and black oxfords completed the ensemble. But a connoiseur in dandyism would have been shocked when the utilities chieftain threw on a fawn-colored topcoat, which clashed violently with the reserve of the habiliments underneath.

Imperturbable Figure.

The principal impression conveyed by the financier was that of an amazing capacity for quiet. He was easily the most restful and imperturbable figure in the crowded, smoke-filled little room on the eleventh floor of the SEC building. When not on the witness stand, he was able to sit for long period virtually motionless. His staff of attorneys and statisticians shifted nervously in their seats, and whispered feverishly among themselves. With his head flung back and one leg crossed over the other, Williams reposed in his chair, betraying only a single sign of animation. Now and then his long, sensitive fingers twiddled a gold lead pencil. His hands might be taken for those of an artist, had he not confessed to the writer that he has not the least eye for painting or the first rudiments of an ear for music.

It was obvious that his immobility was that of a dynamo, silent and jarless, but accomplishing thousands of revolutions per minute. His posture was unconsciously one of command, that of a master at the head of a table of directors. He did not ask opinions of his attorneys, but gave them orders, stressed now and then by the curt and regal slice of an outstretched forefinger. As a witness he spoke in a voice firm, deep and resonant, with a minimum of words. His most frequent reply was a terse "correct!" When asked to verify figures running into tens of millions of dollars or stock issues of hundreds of thousands of shares, he usually inquired of his staff: "Is that right?" His air was that of a man for whom such matters are bagatelles, unworthy of storage room in one's memory.

This combination of serenity and vibrancy is startlingly reflected in his hair. In the shadow it is a sedate gray. brushed tightly against his head, save for tiny wings outthrust behind the ears, and parted slightly to the left of center; but in the sunlight it becomes suddenly shot through with slashes of its original color, a fiery red. The sun also brings out, against the dark, sallow complexion, a multitude of freckles, particularly upon his towering forehead, with stratum after stratum of wrinkles. Small, brown eyes, with a hint of red in their depths, either slumber or blaze in their deep-set pits, behind rapidly blinking lids. A straight, boldly jutting nose dominates his smooth-shaven features, and gives his expression a decided forward thrust. The mouth, tight and thin, is drawn downward at the corners, at which deep lines are carved. This sombre mask, strangely enough, is capable of brightening into a smile of boyish gayety or even puckish amusement. His general mien has the grave courtesy of a man too confident of his own ascendancy ever to grow rude or lose his temper.

Though he is 64 years old, the financier's figure, of middle height, has the flat slenderness of an inveterate horseman and golfer. When that immobile frame starts into action, the movements and gestures are not onl yvigorous, but almost precipitate. Williams was born March 16, 1873, at Avon, O., the son of Everett E. Williams, who became an officer of the First National Bank at Illyria, in the same State. There the youth attended grammer and high school, but preferred to go to work in a machine shop rather than enter college. In a short time he was general manager of the Fay Bicycle & Velocipede Co. of Illyria.

His career in utilities was determined by a chance meeting with Charles Coffin, one of the founders of General Electric, who divined the capacities of the Ohio boy and adopted him as a sort of a protege. His earliest connections were with the Electric Illuminating Co. of Cleveland and the American Gas and Electric Co. At present he is chairman of the Executive Committee of the North American Co., a director and member of the Executive Committee of the American Gas and Electric Co. and president of the New Empire and Northernland Corporations. It was testified at the hearing that he owns 96 per cent of the common stock of his top holding company, the Central States Electric Corporation.

Caught in Crash, Too.

Like any ordinary human being, the financier was caught in the crash of 1929, he testified, and was compelled to sacrifice a part of his holdings in Central States for the pathetic sum of $27,189,059. Out of this, he continued, he paid as income tax $4,756,317, which indicates that his income in 1929 was around $10,000,000.

In the field of philanthropy, he is a trustee of the Neurological Institute of New York, and a member of the Finance Committee of the Charity Organization Society of that city. He is a member of the board of managers of the New York Zoological Society and a fellow of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Among his clubs are, in New York, the Metropolitan, Piping Rock and New York Yacht Club; and, in Washington, the Metropolitan Riding and Hunt Club. He also belongs to clubs in Palm Beach, London and Paris. He has a country estate on Long Island and a city residence at 1130 Fifth avenue. His first wife, who died, was Katharine Gordon Breed of Pittsburgh. His second wife, whom he married in 1926 and who became internationally famous for her dress, was Mona Strader Bush of Lexington, Ky. Williams retired in 1922 to travel in Europe and made a trip 'round the world. He returned to Wall Street in 1928.

While the financier was testifying in Washington, his wife, who is tall, stately and blue-eyed, with curly blond hair, was in Paris making purchases through which she hopes to retain for the fifth consecutive year her title as the world's most smartly gowned woman. According to dispatches, she bought four beaded cocktail jackets, entirely handmade, for about $750 each; a wine-colored, crinkly mousseline for a cool summer evening gown, made with low-cut back and front; a dark blue dinner gown in fine wool-jersey, made with high-necked front and bare shoulder back, and a tailored jacket of navy jersey, trimmed along the lapels with white leather bands in baroque design.

SCHOOL BOARD'S BIPARTISAN LAW TO UNDERGO TEST

State Supreme Court Suit to Follow Election Board's Rejecting of Nonpartisan Candidate.

Suit will be filed in the Supreme Court of Missouri shortly to test the constitutionality of the 1933 law which changed the character of the Board of Education from nonpartisan to bipartisan. An effort will be made to have the question settled before the April 6 election, in which five of the 12 members of the board are to be selected.

Filing of the suit will follow the anticipated formal refusal of the Election Board to accept petitions nominating Dr. Paul W. Preisler as a nonpartisan candidate for the board. Dr. Preisler submitted them Friday and the board received them for checking of the signatures of voters. They contained about 10,000 signatures, the minimum required being 7885.

It was anticipated that the board early this week would reject the petitions for failure to comply with the bipartisan law. The board made it clear that it could take no other action and Dr. Preisler and his attorney, George E. Duemler, agreed.

Notification May Be Waived.

Under Supreme Court rules, five days' notice of the suit must be given the board after its formal decision is rendered, but arrangements might be made to waive the notice.

Duemler, who was the Socialist candidate for Governor last year and will be the Socialist candidate for Mayor this year, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that the proceeding would be an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the board to accept the Preisler candidacy and place the name on the ballot. The petition will be based on the theory that the law violates the provision of the State Constitution that all elections shall be "free and open."

The Supreme Court, Duemler continued, has held that this constitutional provision applies to candidates as well as voters. Suggestions which he will file in support of the application will argue as to the unreasonableness of the bipartisan law.

The coming election will be the second in which the bipartisan law has applied. It will coincide with the mayoral election. The effect of the law has been to give the party winning the municipal election the power to dictate choice of both Republican and Democratic members of the Board of Education, as all voters may vote for board candidates on each ticket. The board now consists of six Democrats and six Republicans.

Dr. Preisler, who was Socialist nominee for Eleventh District Congressman last year, is chairman of the Socialist City Committee and president of the local branch of the American Federation of Teachers. He announced yesterday that his candidacy for the board was sponsored by the teachers' union, with the twofold object of knocking out the bipartisan law and of supporting the movement for elimination of the board's dead-letter rule forbidding teachers and other employes to belong to labor unions.

The teachers' union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has been seeking unsuccessfully for a year to have the board repeal the rule. It has declined in the meantime to make its membership public, but school officials have doubted that many public school teachers here belonged to it.

Has Strong Union Support.

Eighty per cent or more of the signatures on Dr. Preisider's nominationg petitions were of members of various labor unions, he announced. During the past two months he has conducted an active campaign for election to the board, addressing about 40 unions.

He is an instructor in bio-chemistry at Washington University medical school, holding the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and resides at 4274 Shenandoah avenue. His union has made him a delegate to Central Trades and Labor Union. His wife, Mrs. Doris Preisler, is educational director of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

MARK L. REQUA, PROMINENT IN CALIFORNIA G. O. P., DIES

Former Assistant Fuel Administrator Under Hoover, His Close Friend.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, March 6. — Mark L. Requa of Santa Barbara, long a dominant figure in Republican politics, died today at St. Vincent's Hospital. He was 71 years old.

Engineer, conservationist and close friend of former President Hoover, he had been in the hospital for more than two weeks. The cause of his death was not announced. A post-mortem examination was made under direction of Dr. V. C. Hunt.

Requa gained national notice in World War days as director of the oil division of the United States Fuel Administration, but Californians knew him also as a mining engineer, civic worker and political leader.

As a close friend of Herbert Hoover, he managed the latter's California campaign for the presidency in 1928 and as California national committeeman directed the Hoover campaign in the West in 1932.

Both mining engineers, Hoover and Requa first met in 1905. When Hoover returned from Europe during the World War to become U. S. food administrator, he made Requa his assistant as fuel administrator. Requa also was chairman of the committee on standardization of petroleum specifications.

MALAGA FILM BARRED IN ROME IT SHOWS TOO MANY ITALIANS

Trucks Seen in Movie Still Bear Insignia of Mussolini's Army.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 6.—A film, "The Liberation of Malaga," made by the Luce Institute (Italy's semi-official news reel institute) was withdrawn from circulation today because it showed too many Italian soldiers, officers and army trucks in Malaga.

The picture had been shown for two nights at a leading movie house here.

Some trucks seen in the film still bore the lettering of the Royal Italian army.

Former King Alfonso of Spain expressed a desire to see the picture, but was informed it would not be shown any more.

Several fiancees of Italians taking part in the advance on Malaga recently received letters saying "If you want to see me, go to see the film, 'The Liberation of Malaga.'"

Malaga was taken recently by insurgent forces in Spain's civil war.

ITALY SAYS LIRA IS BACKED AS WELL AS IT WAS IN 1935

Answers Foreign Critics With Figures Indicating Gold Reserve of 25 Pct.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 6.—Italy answered foreign financial critics with figures to show the lira is as well backed by gold as before the Ethiopian campaign.

Minister of Finance di Revel, at the midnight session of the Fascist Grand Council, told Mussolini there is a gold reserve of lire 3,959,000 to cover lire 15,677,000 currency, or almost 25 per cent.

Italy suspended announcement of statistics during the League of Nations boycott and the last public gold reserve figure, Oct. 30, 1935, was lire 3,937,000. Since the lira was depreciated 40.93 per cent, Oct. 5 last, the present gold reserve represents about three-fifths the reserve of a year and a half ago but approximately the same coverage, and may have roughly the same internal purchasing power.

LE CLAIRE, IA., SEEKS FUNDS TO SAVE FAMOUS GREEN TREE

Old Elm Under Which Buffalo Bill Played in Boyhood Is Rotting.

By the Associated Press.

LE CLAIRE, Ia., March 6.—Le Claire began a campaign today to save its famous Green Tree, the best known tree on the Mississippi River.

It was discovered that large holes in the trunk and rotting limbs threatened the tree's life and made a major operation by a tree surgeon necessary if the old elm is to survive.

A committee has been named to raise funds to provide the operation.

William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody played beneath the old tree as a lad and a monument to him was erected there some years ago by the late Joe Barnes, a boyhood chum. The elm is registered in the tree hall of fame in Washington.

TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

Program Beginning April 1 will Stress Need for Early Diagnoses of Disease.

An educational campaign urging early diagnosis of tuberculosis will be begun April 1 by members of the Tuberculosis and Health Society. "We cannot permit this disease to remain the highest cause of death in persons from 15 to 45 years old," Col. H. D. McBride, president of the society, said yesterday in announcing the campaign.

Approximately 90 per cent of the patients admitted to Koch Hospital last year were in the moderately or far advanced stages of the ailment, Col. McBride said. Earlier diagnosis of these cases would save much of the grief and expenditure of money caused by long periods of treatment, he added. The program of education will include lectures, motion picture displays, radio talks and exhibits.

The White House Press Conference a Phenomenon

who make use of the telegraph for their dispatches. Those who employ only the mails are barred.

Usually about 150 correspondents attend, including half a dozen women and six foreign correspondents, English, French and German. There are also about 25 publicity representatives of the various Government departments, who report to their chiefs any comment touching on their respective fields.

From the very entrance to the White House, the correspondents run the gauntlet of numerous secret service men and uniformed guards, who are trained to remember names and faces. The writer, attending his first conference, was promptly halted by a guard, but at the second one, the same guard saluted him by name.

The first stop is a large reception room, with a circular table at the center for coats and hats. There the journalists smoke and talk shop until about five minutes before the conference is due to begin. Then they begin lining up at a door on the left, so narrow that two persons abreast cannot pass without jostling. The meetings rarely begin on time; the delay may range from five to 30 minutes. Impatient correspondents sometimes thump on the door with their fists, but such efforts are without avail.

In President's Office.

When the door is finally thrown open, the newspaper men crowd through two more rooms past additional secret service men and finally arrive in the circular salon, with a diameter of about 30 feet, which serves Mr. Roosevelt as his office. The walls are decorated with models and prints of famous ships; at the hub of the ceiling, moulded in the plaster, is the seal of the President of the United States.

As they enter, they find Mr. Roosevelt seated facing them at his desk. Standing directly behind him are two secret service men; three or four others are in the room. Seated also are usually to be found Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee; two of the President's secretaries, Marvin H. McIntyre and Stephen Early, who is a grandson of the Confederate General Jubal A. Early; and one of Mr. Roosevelt's sons. Customarily it is James; but once it was Franklin, whom the correspondents, whispering among themselves, identified as "the du Pont one."

Between the President and his staff and the correspondents is arranged a barrier of chairs, describing an arc of a circle. The first-comers, forming the front two lines, are able to see the President and make note of his gestures and expression; the less fortunate can merely hear his voice. The correspondents all stand, and no one is permitted to smoke except the President. In his left hand he brandishes a long black holder, containing an ignited cigarette.

Knicknacks and Trivialities.

Mr. Roosevelt's desk is littered with an astonishing array of knicknacks. There are two China pigs with red ears, two triumphant donkeys and one dejected cotton elephant, with bent and defeated head. Other articles of decoration or utility include a case of pink roses, a thermos bottle for ice water, chronometer clocks, a bronze ash tray, a stand for pens and a rack for lead pencils, wire baskets for papers, a leather-bound calendar, a hand-set telephone, numerous memorandum pads and several ornaments modeled after steering wheels of ships. On a shelf at his left herd five or six festive Democratic donkeys, caparisoned in scarlet.

While the correspondents are entering and finding their places, the President exchanges pleasantries with those nearest at hand. When the door is at last closed, he usually begins the conference by reverting to some innocuous theme. Once it was the bill for several thousand three-year-old spruce trees with which his estate at Hyde Park is being reforested. Again, it was a chart purporting to show how the tarpon were running in the Gulf of Mexico. At another time, it was the visit of Premier Mackenzie King of Canada, who arrived Friday.

"These gambits are not always fortunate. In the case of the spruce trees, for example, a reporter muttered: "That's a lot of trees for Santa Claus." The President flushed with annoyance, and changed the subject.

Stenographic Record Taken.

Beside the President is a stenographer, who sets down every syllable uttered. The reporters mostly rely on long-hand notes and their own memories. A few undertake stenographic items, but, as there are many trivial by-plays during the conference, their notes often are less valuable than those of the reporters who trust to their non-stenographic records.

When the preliminaries are over, the correspondents plunge at once into their questions, all of which are oral. No special order is observed, each being free to speak when he finds opportunity or the spirit moves him. Many of the queries show signs of having been carefully phrased and memorized in advance.

The President listens to each with utmost care, and replies without hesitation, whether he gives definite information or avoids doing so through one device or another. His air is courteous and friendly, the famous smile is almost constantly in use, and the celebrated charm is stepped up to its highest potential.

He is addressed as "Mr President" or "Sir," the monosyllable being inserted usually after the first clause of the question, in this manner: "Will you please tell us, Sir, whether," etc.

After 10 or 15 minutes, a voice among the correspondents exclaims, "Thank you, Mr. President!" which is a sign that the conference is at an end. Any correspondent may undertake this function, but it has been seized upon as his own particular duty by J. Russell Young, who is not strictly speaking a correspondent at all, but a local reporter for the Washington Star. He always stands in the front row, directly in front of the President's desk. A journalist who still has a question to ask after the signal is given, must be strong enough of larynx to shout down Young's announcement and the ensuing tramp of departing feet. A gesture or sign denoting that the meeting must be ended has sometimes been given by one of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries.

Four Ways of Expression.

According to the conference rules, there are four ways in which the President may express his views. The first is direct quotation, which is rarely employed. In the case of the famous conference on the Supreme Court, a correspondent asked permission to quote directly the passage contained the "horse and buggy" phrase. Mr. Roosevelt consented, and the result was that this important interview was thereafter known as the "horse and buggy" press conference. On occasion the President himself has volunteered permission to quote one of his remarks.

The second method, the one most often used, is indirect discourse, under which the gist of Mr. Roosevelt's meaning is expressed, often more or less in his own words, but without quotation marks.

The third method is known as "background": here the information is not attributed to the President, but some convenient circumlocution is employed, such as "the official version" or "the White House view" or "the administration's standpoint."

The fourth is "off the record," which means that the President's remarks are for the personal information of the reporters, and are not to be used in any way for publication.

System Created by Wilson.

The system of press conferences was inaugurated by President Wilson, who, because of the presence of foreign correspondents, was compelled to discontinue them after the outbreak of the war. Mr. Wilson used the method of oral questions and answers.

The system was renewed by President Harding, himself a newspaper man, who began with something of the free and easy footing with reporters that is practiced by Mr. Roosevelt; but during the arms conference of 1921-22, Mr. Harding was so unfortunate as to reply to a question in a sense opposite to that in which the matter was understood at the State Department. Thereafter he directed that all questions at press conferences should be submitted in advance in writing.

To this plan Presidents Coolidge and Hoover adhered. Under the former, the correspondents, suspecting that their queries were "edited" by the President's secretaries and that some of them never reached him, hit on the plan of using differently colored papers, so that they could tell whether their interrogations were in Mr. Coolidge's hands. Even if they were, the President often ignored them. The Hooover conferences after a short while developed into the handing out of formal, mimeographed statements, with an occasional "background" outgiving by the President. In the last few months of his administration the meetings were virtually abandoned.

During the early part of his first administration, Mr. Roosevelt adopted a practice, which he has since relinquished—that of publicly chiding correspondents whose articles displeased him. The victims retaliated with a "stay-away strike," and refused to attend the White House conferences. It is curious that one of the earliest of those so chastised with an open reprimand was Arthur Krock, the correspondent to whom Mr. Roosevelt intrusted the New York Times interview of a week ago. Krock has not attended a press conference for several years, but has now emerged, in the language of his colleagues, as the "fair-haired boy" of the administration.

MRS. G. F. CLOSE FUNERAL

Services Tomorrow at West Presbyterian Church.

The funeral of Mrs. Gilbert F. Close, 7267 Cornell avenue, University City, who died Friday at St. Luke's Hospital of pneumonia, following an operation, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues. Burial will be in Valhalla Cemetery.

She was 50 years old and had served as president of the Tuesday Literary Club and several church organizations. Her husband was confidential secretary to President Woodrow Wilson and is now employed in the General Steel Castings Corporation. Also surviving are two sons, the Rev. Gilbert F. Close Jr. and the Rev. Charles D. Close, Presbyterian ministers, and a daughter, Miss Helen Elizabeth Close.

MRS. GEORGE AUGUSTINE DIES

Mrs. George B. Augustine, widow of a vice-president of the old Carleton Dry Goods Co., died of heart disease early yesterday at Atlanta, Ga., where she was vacationing with her daughter, Mrs. Warren B. Goddard.

She suffered a heart attack about a year ago but recently had been in apparent good health, and complained of no illness when she retired Friday night. She lived with Mr. and Mrs. Goddard at 21 Brentmoor Park, Clayton. Fueral services will be held here. Another daughter, Mrs. N. D. Jay, of Paris, France, and a son, Floyd, of Scarsdale, N. Y., survive.

Senator Logan Defends Plan To Pack Court

grounds of age, ability or character, but on grounds of geography. Thus:

"At present the Justices are not drawn in fair proportion from different sections of the country. A majority of the court comes from three states in the East—New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. Is the destiny of this nation to depend on what these five men think the Constitution means?"

(The five Justices to whom he alluded are Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Stone and Cardozo of New York; Roberts of Pennsylvania, and Brandeis of Massachusetts. Stone, Cardozo and Brandeis constitute the so-called "liberal minority" of the court, and Justices Hughes and Roberts have joined with them to form a majority in nearly all of those cases in which New Deal measures have been upheld.)

Nevertheless, said Senator Logan: "The minority members of the court may be wrong, or they may be right. The majority members may be wrong, or they may be right. I do not know who is wrong or who is right, because the responsibility is not on me to decide it, but I say there should be an increase in the number of Justices from different walks of life, with different social, economic and political views, so that all questions may be fairly and intelligently reviewed, and we may reach some concluson, so that Congress can legislate."

On six occasions, he went on, the number of Justices has been changed, and without exception it was charged the purpose was to pack the court. Senator Logan rejected this accusation, but added that if it was true the object was not attained . . . that even if the court was packed, it refused to stay packed. On the subject of packing, however, he achieved his most bewildering flight in the following passage:

To Pack or Not to Pack; He Stands by President.

"The Supreme Court has determined several questions adversely to the views expressed by the President and the Congress, and the presumption would naturally follow that where there is a proposal to increase the membership of the court, the object was to secure more favorable opinions to the views of the President and Congress than had been rendered in the past. I THINK WE MAY ASSUME THAT PERHAPS THAT IS TRUE, BUT THAT DOES NOT NECESSARILY MEAN THAT THE PRESIDENT DESIRES TO PACK THE SUPREME COURT."

Look it up for yourself, if you don't believe it. Page 2167 of the Congressional Record, of March 2.

And how did the Senator arrive at that startling conclusion? Apparently he arrived at it on the speculative hypothesis that the President might be fooled by the men he placed on the court. Thus:

"His appointees might not agree that the President's views are in harmony with their own."

The fact that only a fortunate few have had a scientific training in logic and psychology is doubtless what makes so much of Senator Marvel M. Logan's reasoning seem baffling. And that may explain why so many are inclined to give weight to the flood relief theory of the Senator's attitude. It has the advantages of being understandable.

EGYPT'S BOY KING BEGINS HOLIDAY AT ST. MORITZ

Farouk Goes Skiing and Sledding at Winter Resort in Switzerland.

By the Associated Press.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, March 6.—Egypt's 17-year-old boy king, Farouk, went skiing and sledding over heavy snow today to begin his three-month holiday.

Soon to become ruler of Egypt's 15,000,000 persons—now governed by a regency—the boy king was joined in play under a brilliant sun by four sisters, Fawziya, Faiza, Faika and Fathiya.

Farouk, visiting Switzerland for the first time, took keen interest in the winter sports. He is on tour of Europe. Accompanying him on the long holiday before his coronation next July 31, in addition to the four princesses, is his mother, Queen Nazli, widow of King Fuad, who died last year.

An accomplished linguist—speaking English, French and Arabic fluently—the 6-foot Farouk is an active sportsman. He rides, swims, boxes and fences.

LAYMEN'S TEACHING MISSION TO TOUR COUNTY SEATS

50 Men and Women to Participate in Movement to Spread Spiritual Training.

A tour of Missouri county seats by the Missouri Laymen's Teaching Mission, in a movement to reach children and young people with moral and spiritual training, will begin Tuesday under auspices of the Missouri Council of Religious Education.

A total of 46 men and four women will participate, each visiting group generally consisting of three persons. County-wide mass meetings will be arranged in each town by County Councils of Religious Education. The speakers will outline methods worked out in recent months for co-operation between the State council, schools, 4-H clubs, penal institutions and other organizations for a character-building program for youth.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

FIRST STATE GUIDE APPEARS, THE WORK OF VARDIS FISHER

IDAHO: A GUIDE IN WORD AND PICTURE. Prepared by the Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration. (The Caxton Printers, Caldwell, Idaho.)

A LITTLE more than a year ago the Federal Government embarked upon the ambitious enterprise of creating an American Guide, similar to, but more comprehensive than, the Baedekers, using writers from the relief rolls of the WPA. The completed project was to comprise six volumes; each State would meanwhile produce a more extended guide of its own.

As the months went by the idea of the American Guide was gradually pushed into the indefinite future, and attention was concentrated upon the State volumes. Other difficulties came up. The national office had no funds for publication. State directors were informed that they would have to induce Legislatures, civic bodies, or benevolent individuals to underwrite their books. The problem of securing publication brought into sharp relief the fundamental contradiction of using creative writers to do a job which would have to please local politicians and chambers of commerce.

Idaho was uniquely fortunate in two respects. First, its State director was a distinguished novelist, Vardis Fisher. Second, there existed in Idaho an independent publisher willing to bring out the guide with no guarantee of financial return.

Fisher had his handicaps. He had few writers able to meet the rigid relief requirements. But by doing practically all of the writing himself, by skirting controversial subjects gingerly, by ignoring social implications, he succeeded in completing the first of the State guides to achieve publication.

The result is a handsomely bound volume of 400-odd pages, with over 100 full-page illustrations and a number of maps. The most extended sections cover the Indian inhabitants and the early history of the State; then there are chapters on topography, native animals and flowers, hunting and fishing possibilities, and the State's resources and products. There follow a number of tours, in which the motorist is escorted along the major highways and told what to see. At the end are a few odd bits—a fascinating description of a trip into the wild mountain area, a section on "ghost towns" and another on buried treasure, in both of which the State seems to abound, a few characteristic frontier tales, a study of place-names and their origins.

Fisher's triumph is that, using these subjects, he has achieved an interesting book. There are few dull stretches. The writing is uniformly excellent, shot through with flashes of good-humored wit, reflecting the viewpoint of a civilized man. There is no efflorescence of style; the descriptions have no taint of the resort advertisement about them.

WEIRD TALE WITH OVERTONES

THE CROQUET PLAYER. By H. G. Wells. (The Viking Press, New York.)

HERE, decidedly, is a ghost story with a difference!

It is no mere run-of-the-mill spook in a white sheet that troubles Dr. Finchatton, making him doubt his own sanity. Rather it seems a vast, malevolent personality, pervading the whole region of Cainmarsh like a poisonous vapor. As a result, bestial cruelty is clearly on the increase among the people. Furtive inquiry reveals the fact that the mysterious influence has terrified the good vicar and the local archeologist, as well as many of the humbler folk. Can it be that a whole neighborhood is going mad? Even the psychiatrist, whom the doctor consults, seems to have his own strictly scientific way of being "balmy."

The more he thinks about it, the more Finchatton is persuaded to believe that not Cainmarsh alone, but the whole world is slowly succumbing to the nameless bestializing spirit.

It is when the doctor is unburdening his mind to the croquet player—evidently representing the average complacent citizen—that the ghost story develops curious overtones of meaning and becomes an impressively significant fable.

Finchatton has arrived at a theory. The world is haunted by the recrudescent spirit of the prehistoric cave man. For centuries, he points out, the civilized peoples were confined within what he calls the "frame of the present," ignorant of the long past and unconcerned with the future, save in the vague form of another life beyond the grave. Traditions, conventions, religious fears and hopes served to suppress the spirit of the ancestral beast. But now, "We have broken the frame. The long black past of fear and hate that our grandfathers never knew of, never suspected, is pouring back upon us. And the future opens like a gulf to swallow us up. The animal fears again and the animal rages again and the old faiths no longer restrain it. The cave man, the ancestral ape, the ancestral brute, have returned. . . . The world is no longer safe for anything. It was sheer delusion that we had Him under. Him! The pursuing brute who never desists."

Only Cainmarsh haunted! Why, is not the whole world about to become a Marsh of Cain? Thus the Doctor.

But it is the croquet player who has the last word: "I don't care. The world may be going to pieces. The Stone Age may be returning. This may, as you say, be the sunset of civilization. I'm sorry, but I can't help it this morning. I have other engagements. I am going to play croquet with my aunt at half-past twelve today."

From Ivory Tower To Battle Front

I WILL NOT REST. By Romain Rolland. Trans. From the French by K. S. Shelvankar. (Liveright Pub. Corp., New York.)

ROMAIN ROLLAND'S reputation gives this book an importance that its fragmentary structure and hortatory manner deny it. Like many other "intellectuals," Rolland found his serenity as an artist shaken by the war. Almost alone, in France, he pleaded the cause of the German people, trying to remember, in a detachment "above the struggle," the human values that war-frenzy was destroying. He came to see that the fierce nationalism of the conflict was the foe of humanity; and, in his search for a better doctrine, he turned to the passive gospel of Gandhi and the creed of revolution in Soviet Russia. Though proud at first of his remoteness from the struggle, he realized slowly that his love of liberty and his aloofness were idle luxuries, and that his place was in the battle—the battle against Fascism and oppression.

In two chapters, he traces his progress from the "palace of thought" to the ranks of Communism. The rest of the book consists of the letters and manifestoes that mark this progress.

Readers of "Jean Christophe" are aware of Rolland's sensitiveness, and it seems pitiable that he should feel the necessity of throwing his fine heart to the wolves of political controversy. It is true that his final stand with Communism, against "imperialism and corrupt business mentality," is the logical outcome of the very sensitiveness that made him an artist; but the leaders in the revolution he dreams of will surely be more ruthless than he.

The Most Lovable Entomologist

THE INSECT MAN: JEAN HENRI FABRE. By Eleanor Doorly. With an Introduction by Walter de la Mare. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

THE many avid readers of all that Fabre wrote and all that has been written about him may wonder at first what more remains to be told. They will soon find out if they dip into this charming little volume by the headmistress of a British school for girls. For "The Insect Man" is not just another book about the most celebrated and lovable of all the amateur entomologists. It is something new in its way.

The story is that of the "'Yew Tree Children," Penelope, Geraldine, Giles and Margaret, who forsook the ancient spreading shelter under which they usually played to spend a glamorous vacation in France, visiting the places where Fabre lived and taught and made the patient observations of insect life which have lifted him to a high place among natural scientists. As the excited tourists go from place to place—from school room and workshop to cottage and garden and wayside pond—they reconstruct, in their language and in Fabre's, the career of the kindly man who made friends with scorpions and tarantulas, watched ants and beetles by the hour. The whole is a delightful adventure.

Miss Doorly writes with grace and skill. Poetic flashes light her prose, and it is not strange that Walter de la Mare, who contributes the introduction, himself a poet, finds her book "of an unusual kind and quality." The eyes of children and adults alike will be caught by the intriguing woodcuts by Robert Gibbings, which illustrate the book.

SELDEN RODMAN

Toller's Record Of Prison Years

LOOK THROUGH THE BARS. By Ernst Toller. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

IN APRIL, 1919, Ernst Toller, then 25 years old, took a leading part in the establishment of a workers' republic in Bavaria. He was a member of the government and commander of the Red forces. At the collapse of the short-lived republic he was convicted of treason against the Fatherland and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. This book of letters and verse forms a complete record of his confinement.

It is hard for a young man to live in jail, particularly if he be a practicing dramatist, an active politician, and a lover. Toller's undimmed hope, his calm perseverance, his uninterrupted industry, and his sensitivity that resisted all coarsening influences make "Through the Bars" a book of warm human interest and inspiration. Five years is a long time not to see one's girl, one's friends, or one's plays on the stage. It is good to read the letters of a man who could resist so steadfastly.

Both as history and autobiography, these letters are of interest. Toller is a keen analyst. Many of his statements made over a decade ago have, in the light of recent developments, real prophetic qualities. Clearly he foresaw the effect of the Versailles treaty on the German Republic. Precisely he forecast the menace of Hitlerism. Of particular interest are his remarks on revolutionary technique. He is aware of the futility of premature action. He insists on long periods of popular education, gradual reform, careful organization. Penetrating are his observations on mass psychology. Leftists will find the book suggestive.

As a poet, Toller refuses to submit to all the canons of proletarian art. Says he, and the statement verges on heresy, "There are things more beautiful on earth than men."

The unfused elements of poetry and politics in Toller's verses are characteristic of his personality. How, at the same time, be an artist and a party worker? Readers of Joseph Freeman's "American Testament" will be familiar with this dilemma of intellectual radicals.

A Minor Saga

GISLI. Translated from the Icelandic by Ralph B. Allen. Illustrated by Rockwell Kent. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

THE pithiness and starkness that make the sagas such valuable studies for writers, and lend vividness to them as tales of adventure and life centuries ago, are well exemplified in "Gisli," which has been translated into English by Ralph B. Allen. This is one of the so-called minor sagas, but its chief character is as well drawn and as interest-compelling as any hero of the major sagas, such as that of "Burnt Njal."

Gisli, evidently not a fictional character, was one of the greatest of heroes to the Icelanders, a man exceptionally powerful and skilled in arms and games, of generally good instincts, swift and effective in action, with the callous grimness in battle characteristic of his day, but with his life clouded and its course directed by a curse. His final stand against a dozen foes on the rock-bound island is one of the most dramatic in literature. It obviously inspired the climax of Rider Haggard's novel of Viking days, "Eric Brighteyes."

"Gisli" is illustrated by Rockwell Kent, some of whose drawings for the book produce the requisite effect of grimness and ferocity.

PERFECT PRINT CONTROL. By Laurence Dutton. (The Galleon Press, New York.)

ON the theory that perfect print control depends upon a thorough knowledge and understanding of the many variables in photography, the author presents a system designed to predetermine such factors as the relative emulsion speeds of various photographic papers, negative densities and control of illumination and exposure.

Life of Lawrence Told in Verse

LAWRENCE: THE LAST CRUSADE. By Selden Rodman. (The Viking Press, New York.)

SELDEN RODMAN, one of our youngest American poets and an editor of the magazine "Common Sense," has brought enthusiasm and energy to an ambitious task—the writing of a "dramatic-narrative" poem, based on the life of T. E. Lawrence.

Lawrence's life happens to fall rather neatly into three periods, and this division is followed in the poem. Book 1, "The Lamp," presents Lawrence the archeologist, a young scholar devoted almost exclusively to meditation. Book 2, "The Sword," tells the story of "Lawrence of Arabia," which is already well known to most readers. Book 3, "The Wheel," describes Lawrence's disillusionment at Versailles, where England, as he felt, betrayed Arabia, and portrays him as Private T. E. Shaw.

This arrangement of the material is more than logical; from the time of Lawrence's decision to give up scholarship and contemplation for a life of action, to his death in obscurity, his character unfolds and develops with the narrative. There is a kind of tragic necessity about the story as Mr. Rodman tells it, which gives a foreshadowing of events that are to come, and makes them seem inevitable when they arrive.

Nevertheless, there are defects both in form and content in this poem. The medium is blank verse, and for the most part Mr. Rodman handles it capably. But his dialogue is almost without exception theatrical, and nowhere do the descriptive passages become first-rate poetry. In his approach to his subject matter, there are even more serious flaws. Time after time the reader is disappointed to see that he has missed an opportunity, or wrongly evaluated the significance of some decision or act of Lawrence.

In general, Mr. Rodman has managed to create a portrait which resembles Lawrence, in his disinterestedness and courage, as well as the epic stature these qualities combined to give him.

Is It a Satire Or Only a Yarn?

THE ANTIGUA STAMP. By Robert Graves. (Random House, New York.)

THE publication of a new book by Robert Graves, the friend and biographer of "Lawrence of Arabia," author of "Claudius, the God," etc., is certain to be of special interest to many readers.

In his latest Mr. Graves has abandoned the more serious style of his biographies and pseudo-biographies to write what is, on the surface at least, a cleverly contrived modern tale of a thoroughly malicious struggle between a brother and sister for the possession of a penny postage stamp. The story's chief appeal to the casual reader will be found in the ingeniousness of the quite improbable situations which develop. There seems to be little real motivation for any of these situations; but what does happen is so clever that one forgives Mr. Graves. Edith, for instance, the brilliant young heiress-scientist, loves both Jane and Oliver dearly for no other reason, apparently, than to suit the convenience of the author; for certainly neither Jane nor Oliver exhibits any qualities which might appeal to a person as innately honest as Edith.

Jane and Oliver, indeed, come close to being merely embodiments of the spirit of malice. Certainly no other element of their characters is stressed at all. Even as children they had managed to find remarkably cruel and subtle ways of hurting each other, and as adults, though Oliver has become a novelist of sorts and Jane a famous actress-manager, they spend an appalling amount of time thinking up the most diabolical schemes to embarrass and defeat each other in the struggle for possession of the Antigua stamp.

Those who know Mr. Graves' earlier work, especially his post-war poetry, will probably look for some meaning beneath this seemingly inconsequential tale, which may well have been intended as a satire on the struggle of women for equality with men—their struggle for privileges about which they actually care nothing.

POOR BENNY LOVED NOBODY

THE MYRTLE TREE. By R. G. Goodyear. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

"THE MYRTLE TREE," its title symbolizing love, resembles the novels of Thornton Wilder whose characters, their lives scarcely touching, move gently across a daintily etched landscape, expounding the sad, sweet mystery of life. Also, like Wilder's works, the story is designed to answer a philosophical poser, in this case William Blake's plaintive question:

"To a lovely mirtle bound,
Blossoms show'ring all around,
O, how sick and weary I
Underneath my mirtle lie.
Why should I be bound to thee,
O, my lovely mirtle tree?"

Bringing to the solution of the problem Wilder's own technique, the author examines love as manifested in widely differing persons. The answer is that love, though a costly business of self-giving, pays. To prove it, there is Benny who is the most unhappy character of all because he cannot sufficiently forget himself to love.

Benny's brother, Paul, loves both his wife and his mistress, Elizabeth, who in turn loves her father, who loves chambermaids. Lucy loves God and her fellow man; Mum Trope loves her daughter, Lily, and Lily, along with Charles, loves Benny—thus breaking this amorous chain, because, as has been said, Benny can't love anybody.

If the above sentences have a monotonous ring, let Mr. Goodyear answer, for the emotion his characters evince toward each other, be it sacred, profane or downright unholy, he terms love. And since the unholy far outweighs the holy, the subject matter becomes exceedingly mundane, not to say malodorous.

But aside from the fact that it attains in spots to the most refined nastiness imaginable, the story must be admired for its style. Short but not ungraceful sentences, clarity and poise mark Goodyear's writing, and he has a Japanese sense of decoration which allows him to blend nature descriptions and story in delicate harmony.

How Church Views Social Problems

SOCIAL DOCTRINES OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH. By Robert G. Brehmer Jr. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

IN writing this short book, the author, a non-Catholic, tells us that he sought "to set in correct, concise, integrated and easily accessible form the teachings of the Catholic Church in matters social, economic and political." This he has done, and nothing more.

The exposition proceeds in logical order and in deductive form. The first two chapters lay down the fundamentals of the natural law and the church's teaching on rights and duties, upon which is based its social doctrines.

Especially worthy of note is the chapter dealing with the Church's attitude toward property. According to the author, the Church seeks to steer a middle course between the excesses of individualism and socialism. She derives from natural law the doctrine that there should be private ownership of property spread among the greatest number possible. The author, in considering capital-labor relations, deals with the two factions separately instead of enunciating the Church's doctrine of solidarism, which insists on union and co-operation among all classes of society.

Noteworthy, too, are the chapters dealing with birth control and companionate marriage. The author vindicates the Catholic Church in its stand, indicating that it is neither narrow nor tyrannical in enunciating its doctrine.

Mr. Brehmer deals only with fundamental principles and avoids any attempt to justify or condemn specific applications of them. He makes the important distinction between the Church's teaching and that of its individual members. His choice of authorities is judicious. He quotes the Popes, canon law and only those ethicians accepted by the entire body of the Church.

A Stirring Novel Of Cavalier Period

THE STRANGER PRINCE. By Margaret Irwin. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

IN her latest novel, Margaret Irwin carries on the work in the Cavalier period of English history which she started so well in "Royal Flush." The events of which she writes in "The Stranger Prince" took place some 20 to 40 years before those she uses in her earlier story.

Prince Rupert of the Rhine was the son of Princess Elizabeth, daughter of James I, who at the age of 16 became the wife of the Elector Palatine and who later ruled one year as Queen of Bohemia. Rupert early in life entered the Protestant armies of the German states, then in the throes of the Thirty Years' War, and became a valiant and able soldier. The knowledge and skill thus acquired he carried to England and offered to his uncle, Charles I.

"The Stranger Prince" is the story of Rupert and particularly of his exploits in the Civil Wars of England. He had a sorry time in his uncle's country, with the friends as well as with the enemies o' the King, and acquired such sobriquets as Devil Prince, Robber Prince and Wizard Prince.

The author for the most part keeps the reader entranced by her account of her hero and his period. At times, however, she gives too long and involved descriptions of battles, with the result that the average person might get a headache disentangling the activities of one side from those of the other. The reader who is not enthusiastic about military details is advised to skip judiciously, but by no means to lay aside the book.

Miss Irwin is at her best in characterization and in the knack she has of using her intimate knowledge of the time to color her settings.

Offers an Improbable But Witty Novel

Daring Journey Of Two Women

SOUTH TO SAMARKAND. By Ethel Mannin. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

ONLY determination bordering on obsession, combined with a reckless spirit of adventure, can overcome discouragement such as Ethel Mannin and her artist companion, Donia Nachschen, experienced when, unescorted and in defiance of bureaucratic regulations, they penetrated the wilderness of Asiatic Russia with Samarkand as the goal of their pilgrimage.

From Leningrad to Moscow, through the Ukraine and the Caucasus they traveled as legitimate tourists with British passports. At Baku on the Caspian Sea their permits expired.

Here began the real difficulties of their journey, for it was necessary to book fourth-class passage on the ship, in order to avoid producing official papers for inspection. Miss Mannin and her companion lay on the forward deck of the little vessel packed between ragged, unwashed, nauseated peasants, and on the train from Krasnovodsk they traveled "hard," bruising their bones on wooden benches by day, and sharing the empty shelves in their sleeping compartment with native men by night.

When at last they came to Samarkand they were almost too exhausted to appreciate the realization of their dream. But, realizing that every purloined moment in Samarkand must be used in seeing the city, lest the fact that they were trespassers be discovered, they made the Registan, the most beautiful public square in the world, their first objective, and watched while the blue minarets and cupolas glittering in the sun changed miraculously to pastels in the moonlight. In spite of the many modern and prosperous aspects of the town, Miss Mannin was conscious of "an indolent flow of life, an indifference to progress, and a lingering untouchability," as though Samarkand were "humming new songs to ancient melodies."

Miss Mannin's style is direct and vivid, and her occasional irrelevant tirades are easily forgiven because of her many inspired descriptions. She has adhered strictly to her intention of avoiding comment on political matters.

By Conrad's Friend

CARAVANSARY AND CONVERSATION. By Richard Curle. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

MR. CURLE is known to the literary world chiefly for his devotion to Joseph Conrad, whose life he has written. These memorabilia reveal him as something of a traveler and friend-to-genius, and as something less of a raconteur.

From Venezuela to Queen Victoria, and from Conrad to the Transvaal, he wanders in a leisurely, if not ponderous fashion. At times his recollections create a definite atmosphere, as in his memories of the Oriental strangeness of Fez and of the little old lady who was Queen of England. At other times he makes entirely too much work of remembering, and his notes are padded with such pointless comments as "I once met a legginged Mr. Bernard Shaw in a barber's shop."

On receiving a copy of Mr. Curle's first volume of stories, H. G. Wells telegraphed him: "You have got a style before you have a story, and God help you." The same criticism might be applied to this book, and yet that would not be entirely fair. The author has visited some unusual places and known some interesting people, and no doubt there are readers, even in this streamlined era, with the time and predisposition for this kind of essays.

OLD HISTORIC CHURCHES OF AMERICA. By Edward F. Rines. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

THE author has spent five years in the preparation of this admirable work, and has traveled the country over in search of his material. He has grouped the churches according to locality, beginning with the Cavalier buildings of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in Virginia.

ANOTHER STRIKING EXAMPLE OF NEW SOUTHERN REALISM

RETURN NOT AGAIN. By Annette Heard. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

ONE of the most interesting recent developments in American literature is the change that has taken place in the fiction of the South. Gone are the novels of tinsel romance, of devoted Negro mammies, coquettish belles, and sentimentally gallant swains. Instead has come realism, a realism so tortured and feverish that it often borders upon the fantastic. The long suppressed masses are at last provoking interest in the minds of authors. Such people as Stribling, Faulkner and Ellen Glasgow bear witness to the fact that all is not moonlight and roses in the deep South of today.

A new name has been added to this group, that of Annette Heard, who in "Return Not Again" tells the story of a family of "peckerwoods," share-croppers of the Mississippi delta. Clementine, the heroine, is a backwoods Ceres who is determined to rise in the world, become a planter, and "be class." Though she possesses the virtues of strength, beauty, clarity of vision and fecundity, she is ultimately defeated by a worthless husband, who cheats her, and by pitiless Nature who visits her with all the calamities of flood and tempest. She even loses the one thing of beauty in her life, her son by the aristocratic planter, "Mr. Bill," for in a burst of self-forgetfulness she gives the boy to his father. In the end we see her struggling to gather together the remnants of her life, saddened, but feeling a sort of triumph in the fact that her child will be a gentleman and know all she has lacked, "manners at table, silver and cut glass, rich folks' ways."

Miss Heard has presented a graphic picture of these people whose lives are characterized by hard work and crude excesses. She is to be commended for the realism with which she has recorded their vulgar and salty speech.

It is significant that there is a quality of degradation and hopelessness in this book and others dealing with this particular bit of the American scene, which is lacking in the European novel of the soil, no matter how primitive its characters. In the latter type of fiction we usually find a joy of life and a sympathy with the rhythm of the earth that is missing in modern Southern literature. Too well do these people of the delta realize their own sordidness. They are bitter with frustration. In reality no better than serfs, they speak with a peculiar resignation: "Mules mean cotton, but white trash don't matter." Their women serve as "levees, human dirt to turn back the floods of high-toned men's women-hunger." Hard and unsurmountable is the barrier between "quality" and "peckerwoods." Completely ruthless are the aristocratic planters who rob, torture and ruin with cynical unconcern those beneath them. One shudders at the picture of a society in which both the minds and bodies of its members have reached so low a level of existence.

HOW MEN HAVE MEASURED TIME

THE ROMANCE OF THE CALENDAR. By P. W. Wilson. (W. W. Norton & Co., New York.)

FROM the time when ancient man peered cautiously out of the jungle and took dim note of the waxing and waning moon, to the vivid present in which the daily measure of time is fixed by sidereal transit and clocks run by electricity, the calendar has undergone many vicissitudes. Months have been intercalated and days have been suppressed and there has been continuous argument between the sun and the moon as to which should be the boss. Those peoples who have clung to the luminary of the night find that their calendar runs ahead of the seasons, however they may cry "Kismet!" (As Islam still does); while those who have chosen the solar year, as ancient Egypt did, fare better but find that there is a little rag-and-tatter of time to be gathered up at the end.

Even the learned Greeks could not cope with this controversy, and each city had a calendar according to its own sweet will; while the lordly Romans were so ridden by superstition and politics that they permitted both these factors to confuse the measurement of time. India, however, seems to take the palm with an official almanac including four of the more than 16 calendars and extending to 3273 pages.

How Julius Caesar boldly inserted two extra months to correct the accumulated errors of his first 16 turbulent years as Pontifex Maximus is a familiar story, as is also that of the slicing out of 11 days by Pope Gregory XIII. But it may not be so well known that a governor in Gaul wanted extra taxes collected for the two months, or that the Protestant world feared Gregory's tampering as an attempt to confuse Christ in his Second Coming!

Sundial, clepsydra and sandglass, precession of the equinoxes, chronometrical zones for daily time, the gyrations of the earth's axis—Mr. Wilson gathers all these within his book and makes a most readable story out of what might be dry statistics. He does a little special pleading for the proposed world calendar, but he does it in a way that should be a model for argumentative persons of all eras. In fact, his book reveals more than the calendar. It reveals a gracious and scholarly gentleman as the author.

Give Stage Setting For the News

AN ATLAS OF CURRENT AFFAIRS. AN ATLAS OF EMPIRE By J. F. Horrabin. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

IF a picture is worth ten thousand words, as the Chinese proverb has it, how many words is a good map worth? These are not elaborate maps, for most of them are models of simplification, so drawn as to bring out the salient features of a given subject. They are not intended to compete with the reference atlas, but merely to show key facts and key places. As the author-illustrator explains, they are "exercises in 'the art of leaving out.'"

The two books will accordingly have an instant appeal for all map addicts, and for readers who desire a geographical background for the day's news and their general reading. Each map, approximately 3½x5½ inches in size, occupies a page, with the page opposite devoted to a few paragraphs of explanatory text. The letter press is similar in style to the drawings, with much information compressed into little space.

Mr. Horrabin drew the illustrations and maps for H. G. Wells' "Outline of History," and has reached a wide audience by his distinctive type of charts. The first book here listed is the third edition of a work that originally appeared in 1934, with additions to include late developments in Spain, China, Ethiopia and elsewhere. The second is a compact manual of the world's colonies, mandates and spheres of influence. It is particularly timely just now, when the colonial problem is again in the spotlight, and new changes in the world map seem possible.

Both are interesting and useful little books, to be recommended as a ready means of gaining a concrete mental picture of the stage setting for the news, and as an introduction to more comprehensive reference works.

THUS RELIGION GROWS. By Morris Goldstein. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

IN this, the only one-volume history of the Jewish religion, Mr. Goldstein begins with prehistoric man's crude notions and shows how each crisis in subsequent religious thought led to a new discovery of spiritual truth.

THE DUMB GODS SPEAK. By E. Phillips Oppenheim. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

MARK HUMBERSTONE, multi-millionaire and scientist, has been entrusted at the death of his father with a scientific secret known to only seven men in the world. It is for the purpose of abolishing war by use of this secret that Mark has been selected as head of an organization known to police as the International Bureau of Espionage.

Chosen to work with Mark is Mr. Cheng, a Chinese prince and former classmate of Mark at Harvard University. Mr. Cheng is an ardent pacifist, but he also has in view the possibility of restoring his native country to world prominence and returning Russia to a monarchic form of government.

Three men have been delegated by the Russian leader, Retsky, to see that the plans of Mark and Cheng do not mature. Their plan involves assassination, and when one of them seeks the position of Cheng's bodyguard he is accepted.

Mark Humberstone, in spite of his never-ending duties and long hours of labor, finds time to fall in love. But there also he encounters opposition, and from a source most unexpected. Marriage with the woman he loves will almost certainly wreck the plans of the bureau, and yet Mark is not the man to let things stand in his way.

"The Dumb Gods Speak" is remarkable for ingenuity of plot and intensity of suspense. It is written in celebration of Mr. Oppenheim's fiftieth anniversary as an author. He has published 135 books.

SPECULATIVES BOOM, U. S. BONDS DEPRESSED

Largest Saturday Market Session Since Last Autumn.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—In the market's busiest Saturday session since last fall, speculative bonds moved upward and high grade issues held even today.

Turnover for all bonds totaled $10,589,000, face value, compared with $6,770,000 last Saturday, the heaviest volume since Oct. 3, 1936, when $11,254,000 changed hands. Governments and foreigns were virtually neglected while traders centered their activities in the domestic corporate list.

A number of imposing runups occurred in the railroad list where obligations of medium priced and "reorganization carriers" drew a following.

New York Central convertible 6s mounted sharply along with the road's stock, jumping 6½ points to 128½, a new 1936-1937 high. Philippine Ry. 4s sprinted 3½ points to 28½.

Utility and industrial liens held even courses in moderately active trading.

Further pressure was applied in the U. S. Government list where the absence of support rather than the weight of offerings caused lower prices. Setbacks posted at the close ranged to 6-32 of a point.

Late in the week considerable debate centered on the interest rate to be carried by new Treasury refunding bonds with which the Government will accomplish its mid-March refunding operation. The department will make details of the issue known Monday. On Friday most Federal issues dropped to new low levels for the year. Explanations for the rather sudden withdrawal of bids were numerous but the one most heard was fears of repatriation of French funds from American securities. Announcement of a new French financial policy provided the grounds for this apprehension.

Little took place in the foreign group where losses prevailed. French unstamped 7s declined 4¼ points to 119¾ and Cuban 5½s lowered fractionally. Italian 7s and Brazilian 6½s improved a little.

Associated Press averages for most sections of the market finished about even, but the 10 foreigns dropped .4 of a point to 72.7, a new 1937 low.

COTTON AT 14 CENTS, PEAK SINCE AUG. '34

Inflationary Prospects Due to Vast Rearmament Programs Among Factors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Cotton joined the list of rising commodities the past week, when sharp upturns carried prices to the highest levels since August, 1934, $5.50 to $7.50 a bale above the low levels of February.

All old-crop positions rose above 13 cents and March reached the 14-cent level, on a broad buying movement stimulated by six-month record-breaking world consumption figures. Inflationary prospects due to vast rearmament programs abroad and higher wages in this country, also were factors.

A belief in some quarters that cotton was under-valued in comparison with most other commodities being accumulated as part of various rearmament programs stimulated demand for contracts.

A further rise got under way today, with the decline in foreign exchange upon the announcement of a return to a free gold market in France.

The New York Cotton Exchange Service estimated world consumption of all growths for first six months of this season at 14,590,000 bales, against 13,534,000 bales in previous year. Use of American staple was paced at 6,319,000 bales, against 6,148,000 last season. Renewal of active demand for cotton goods followed reports that a unionization drive would be started in the textile industry. Spot cotton held firm.

A continuation ofthe broad buying movement carried cotton into the 14-cent column today for the first time since August, 1934. May rallied from 13.47 to 13.60 and closed at 13.58, with final prices 16 to 23 points net higher.

Prices rose to the highest level since June, 1930, at Liverpool and brought the most active trading this year at the New-York opening, with prices 13 to 24 points higher.

Weakness of the French franc, heavy textile sales and overnight advances in foreign cotton markets brought in foreign, trade and speculative demand. While the early advances attracted active realizing and hedge selling, renewed support developed on reactions of 9 to 17 points from the highs. Aggressive demand was renewed toward the close to carry some positions to fresh highs.

Beneficial rains in West Texas were ignored, as all new-crop positions touched 13 cents for the first time this season.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 110,000 bales, against 107,000 last year and 58,000 two years ago.

Steels and Rails Lead Stock Market Forward During Week; Utilities Alone Fail to Follow

Disappearance of Steel Strike Fears Helps to Sustain Buying as Does Rise in Price of Products of the Industry.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Led by steels and rails, the stock market moved forward during the week for consistent gains in virtually all departments except utilities.

Disappearance of steel strike fears, due to general wage and hour revisions and U. S. Steel's recognition of the CIO as a bargaining factor, helped sustain the buying impulse.

Even a session of what was described as purely normal profit taking failed to halt the upswing. U. S. Steel passed the 125 mark for the first time in six years and other issues fell in line.

Rails were helped by the weekly carloading report, showing less than a seasonal decline. "Friendly" negotiations between motor executives and the unions called followers for the automotive stocks.

Sales during the week amounted to 14,844,590 shares, compared with 9,959,230 last week (five days) and 14,609,150 a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 123,764,336 shares, compared with 142,695,287 a year ago and 38,160,886 two years ago.

Developments of Week.

Profit selling came fairly late in the week in a session which saw leaders yielding from fractions to around 3 points. There was some switching to hitherto backward issues, but offerings were not heavy. Announcement of higher steel prices tended to turn the decline.

Utilities managed to hold an even keel, although buying support was lackadaisical.

Despite a couple of brisk sessions in which the turnover was more than usual for the past few weeks, bonds held to an extremely narrow range, with investors apparently confused as to future trends. Announcement that no new money was contemplated in the Treasury's March financing bolstered sentiment a bit for a time.

The week was marked in the foreign exchange market by a sharp break in the French franc following notice of the forthcoming establishment in Paris of a free gold market and intimations the Government planned to peg the currency at a lower level. The pound sterling and other currencies declined in sympathy.

Cotton moved upward in the commodity markets, setting some new highs for the season. Other staples were mixed with wheat, corn and rubber up moderately and copper steady.

Biggest Saturday in 15 Months.

In the liveliest Saturday market in more than 15 months, stock buying forces gave steels and rails another upward whirl that landed the majority into new high recovery ground.

While profit selling stemmed the advance in many issues, and tagged others with substantial losses, gains of fractions to around two points predominated at the close. There were several much wider upturns in relatively inactive listings.

Aiding extension of the onward push were forecasts that steel mill operations in the Youngstown district would hit a new post-depression top next week at 89 per cent of capacity as orders from all directions piled up on books of leading processors.

With heavy industry shipments expected to expand exceptionally in coming months along with prices and consumption, the carriers had one of their best days in a long time.

Trading was extremely active throughout and the ticker tape was behind during most of the two-hour proceedings. Blocks of 1000 to 25,000 shares changed hands at the opening on the upside.

Transfers of 1,767,100 shares were the largest for a short day since Nov. 23, 1935. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks stepped up .4 of a point to 75, the best level since April, 1931.

Outside of a further relapse in the French franc in terms of the dollar, French monetary developments apparently had no appreciably disturbing effect on shares. For the time being, banking authorities thought the new Paris free gold market and the possible pegging of the French currency at a lower level would not attract any great repatriation of funds in American securities. Few would make a guess, though, on what will happen later when French capitalists are assured profits both ways in transferring their money back home.

Rubber Prices Zoom.

Although automobile production increased briskly this week, most motors had hard going. New car registrations for February were substantially under those of the month before.

Rubber and cotton futures zoomed, the former to high marks since 1929 and the latter were up 80 cents to $1.15 a bale to the best positions since 1934. Bonds improved in spots, although United States Governments drooped.

New York Central, 51½, started with a 25,000-share block.

COMMODITY PRICES BEST SINCE LATE '29

Scramble to Lay in Supplies Factor in Week's Upward Movement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Commodity prices swung up in a rousing bull market last week, industrial items setting the pace. The list reached the highest ground touched since late 1929.

Prior to the upturn, staple prices had traced divergent courses since the first of the year. Metals were sharply higher during the period and products of the farm tended lower.

The scramble to lay in supplies last week, however, virtually turned the market place into a street of one-way prices.

Of the 35 important commodities used in the Associated Press index of wholesale prices, 22 advanced and only two declined. The remainder were unchanged.

The index moved up to 92.48 per cent of the 1926 average from 90.83 a week ago and compared with 75.54 in the same period last year.

New Tops for Year.

Industrial staples and non-ferrous metals established new tops for the year. Antimony, tin and zinc continued the swing started by copper and lead a few weeks ago. Neither of the latter, however, changed on the week.

Steel billet quotations were jacked up for the first time since the first of the year by the big steel companies. Increased costs plus the highest rate of operations in seven years are generally agreed by economists to have caused the move.

Steel scrap in Pittsburgh was marked up to the best level since the early twenties, far above 1929. A shortage of pig iron is said by the trade to be the reason. Rubber and burlap also nudged ahead, while turpentine slipped back.

Textiles improved. Cotton cloth recovered some of the ground lost in the past fortnight as consumption continued at record-breaking levels. Silk was fractionally higher.

Agricultural staples reversed their recent downtrend under the leadership of cotton. The fiber was in heavy demand as the trade considered mill consumption sufficient to absorb Government holdings readily. Corn, oats and rye were also stronger.

Livestock quotations were unanimous in seeking higher levels; hogs, cattle and lambs concurring.

What Index Shows.

The increasing quantity of food consumed by the average family, analysts said, was reflected in the solid front of gains chalked up. Eggs, sugar, cocoa, flour, lard and butter improved. Only coffee dipped.

The index, with its components based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

	Mar. 5	Prev. Week	Year Ago
35 commodities	*92.48	90.83	75.54

BEN F. JACOBS TO HEAD EXCHANGE FIFTH TERM

Nominee for Local Stock Board—J. Gates Williams for Vice-President.

Ben F. Jacobs was nominated for the presidency of the St. Louis Stock Exchange for the fifth consecutive term yesterday, and J. Gates Williams and nominated vice-president. Williams will succeed Julius W. Reinholdt Jr.

William M. Louderman was nominated treasurer to succeed himself.

The present board of directors was named again for the coming year with the addition of John H. Crago who will take the place of the late Harry S. Stix. The others are William H. Burg, Julius W. Rheinholdt Jr. and John R. Longmire.

The election will be held at the annual meeting of the exchange April 6. There is no opposition slate, though additional nominations may be made at the annual meeting.

Gains in Chicago List.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Gains of fractions to a point or more were scattered liberally through the Chicago stock list today. Trading was only moderately active, but the market trend was higher.

FRENCH FRANC SAGS ON GOVERNMENT PLAN

Traders Cautious Pending Clarification of Move Made at Paris.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Dominating the foreign exchange market throughout the week was the French financial situation, leadin gto a move for establishing an open buying and selling price for gold in an effort to bolster confidence of capital and to halt its flight out of the country.

After rumors the franc would be stabilized at a lower rate than prevailing recently, the currency broke Friday into the widest decline since the three-cornered agreement among England, the United States and France last autumn for maintaining a steady exchange market.

The immediate cause of the break was held to have been withdrawal of the official control from the recent quotations around 4.65 cents.

Whether French authorities were maneuvering toward more lasting stability, with a "managed" franc patterned after England's control of the pound in conjunction with a free gold market, was a question in banking circles here.

The British pound slipped with the franc to the lowest quotation since devaluation of the gold bloc currencies, including the franc, last September. But depreciation of sterling in terms of the dollar was moderate, the London rate remaining close to the old relationship with the American unit around $4.88.

The gold movement to New York continued undiminished. Imports, mostly from England, amounted to $20,106,000 against $15,633,000 the preceding week.

Traders were cautious today pending clarification of French Government plans and the franc moved lower in light business in the foreign exchange market.

Bankers confessed themselves at a loss to gauge the situation and the erratic quotations were largely nominal. The franc was traded at as low as 4.50 cents during the morning, when offerings from France were in evidence, but struggled later to a higher close at 4.52½, off .03½ of a cent net.

There was some evidence, it was reported, that the French control acted sporadically during the day to cushion movements of the currency, but this could not be confirmed.

Sterling, after dropping yesterday to a new low since Nov. 13, advanced 1-16 of a cent at $4.87 15-16. Netherlands guilders lost .05 of a cent while Swiss francs and Canadian dollars held steadily at their previous close.

Both in Paris and London traders were confused as to the effect of the new French free gold market with the price to be set daily by the Bank of France. Offerings of francs were plentiful, and the price sagged. In Paris, the dollar closed unofficially at the equivalent of 4.541 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 4.560 cents.

Francs in London were quoted as low as 108.25 to the pound but strengthened to finish at 107.31. In that market the dollar gained ¼ cent, with a final quotation of 4.87 13-16 to the pound.

PARIS, March 6.—The French franc sagged considerably in unofficial foreign exchange dealings today.

The United States dollar jumped to 22.10 francs to the dollar in early transactions, but fell back to 22.02 around noon. The latter quotation was equivalent to 4.541 cents to the franc, compared with an overnight New York rate of 4.560 cents to the franc. The official closing quotation yesterday was 21.54 (4.642 cents to the franc).

The pound sterling advanced to 107.50 francs to the pound. Yesterday's official closing rate was 105.14.

Uncertainty over policies the new commission appointed to control stabilization fund operations will pursue was given as the principal reason for the franc's weakness. Exchange dealers said the impression was growing the commission intended to keep speculators guessing as to the daily rate at which it will attempt to hold the franc.

The Bourse was closed.

LONDON, March 6.—The French franc touched its lowest point since Great Britain went off the gold standard in foreign exchange dealings today, at one time sagging to 108.25 francs to the pound.

Spot franc quotations closed at 107.31 francs to the pound. After the official market closed yesterday the franc was quoted at 106.13 to the pound, but official transactions were consumated at the 105.15 level.

The United States dollar gained ¼ cent closing at 4.87 13-16 to the pound, compared with an overnight New York rate of $4.87⅞.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Raw sugar was firmer today with a better inquiry for trans-shipment and sales confirmed of about 40,000 bags of Puerto Ricos for March shipment to refiners and operators at 3.60 and 3.62.

Futures were firmer early on trade covering and commission house buying as the result of the firmness in the spot market and reports of higher purchases in London, but weakened later under increased hedge selling and liquidation.

March No. 3 broke from 2.74 to 2.67, or 6 points net lower, while later reliveries sold 3 to 5 points net lower. The market closed 6 points lower on the spot month and 1 to 5 lower on later deliveries on sales of 9600 tons.

May No. 4 declined from 1.27½ to 1.25½ and September from 1.29 to 1.27, with final prices unchanged to 1 point net higher. Sales were 14,450 tons.

Refined was unchanged at 4.80 for fine granulated, but several refiners announced that their price guarantee would cease at at the end of the month. A better withdrawal was reported.

ZINC ADVANCES $2.00 A TON DURING WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Steel crowed non-ferrous metals out of the spotlight last week, but the latter, especially zinc and tin, were by no means completely overshadowed.

Zinc advanced $2 a ton to a basis of 7 cents, East St. Louis, the highest price since 1927. Galvanizers stepped up operation snoticeably with elimination of the steel strike threat. Smelters were reluctant sellers, due to limited supplies and possibility that further advances may occur in the nearby future.

Tin scored net gains of about 3½ cents a pound, influenced by strength at London and improved labor news. Consumers and operators were good buyers and business in the aggregate was the heaviest in some time.

Lead quotations were unchanged.

Copper trade was still in a state of suppressed anxiety. London fluctuated rapidly, but U. S. producers ignored the action, holding the domestic base at 15 cents, or fully 1½ cents under London.

Steel Prices.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Steel prices per 100 lb. f. o. b. Pittsburgh: Blue annealed sheets, hot rolled $2.425; galvanized sheets $3.825; black sheets, hot rolled $3.175; steel bars $2.475.

SMALL EXPORT DEMAND CAUSES WHEAT OFFERS

Profit-Taking Follows Advance of More Than Cent a Bushel in Chicago Market.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Wheat advanced 1⅜ cents here today, but later lost the gain, reacting because of heavy profit-taking and because export buying from Canada proved small.

The chief basis for the new upturn of wheat values was authoritative announcement that Germany's wheat import needs are now about double what they were estimated in December. Giving further impetus to the Chicago wheat price advance was the fact that the Buenos Aires market as well as the Liverpool market ended today at quotatioons outdoing the season's previous top levels.

Sharp notice was taken of a reported British official appeal that ordinary industry be curtailed to permit Government arms orders to go ahead unhampered.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¼ cent off to ¼ up compared with yesterday's finish, May $1.35¾@½, July $1.16⅞@1.17, Sept. $1.13⅞@1.14; corn ¼@1⅜ advanced, May $1.08¼@⅜, July $1.03½@⅝, Sept. 97@97¼c; oats showing ⅛@½ gain, May 46¾c, and rye ½@1⅛ decline, May $1.06. The outcome in provisions unchanged to 35 cents higher.

Late setbacks in Winnipeg quotations served especially as a wet blanket on the Chicago wheat market at the last but not until due attention had been given to increased estimates of German import requirements and to the fact that rubber, cotton and hides had made new top price records for the year. Another stimulus was purchases of 250,000 bushels of Australian wheat by Great Britain. On the other hand, total new export sales of Canadian wheat today were only 100,000 bushels.

The fact that the Buenos Aires wheat market closed today at 1½@1¾ cents a bushel overnight gain was taken in some quarters as emphasizing assertions current here that the peak of heavy shipments from Argentina has definitely been passed, notwithstanding that Argentina is reported to have chartered vessel room for 30 million bushels of grain to be exported this month. An opposite influence was word of rains beneficial to crops in parts of Texas and Oklahoma. The forecast, however, indicates generally fair weather ahead.

Chicago May wheat, an old crop delivery, showed the widest price range today, varying from a low of $1.35¼ to a high of $1.36⅝.

Trade interest regarding corn broadened somewhat. Rural offerings of corn were meager, and receipts in Chicago today totaled but 28 cars. Primary arrivals for the week were only 1,975,000 bushels, against 4,384,000 a year ago. Oats ruled higher with corn.

Selling of rye was done against purchases of wheat.

Provisions tended upward, largely as a result of buying on the part of houses with Eastern and foreign clients.

Provisions responded to upturns of gains.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 33,307,000 bushels, corn 3,312,000. Open interest in wheat was 109,726,000 bushels, and in corn 35,565,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 6.—Wheat was mixed in outside markets today.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅛@½c higher and early was ¼@¾c up. The close was ⅛c lower to ¼c higher.

Liverpool wheat closed ¾@⅞d up after opening ⅜@¾d higher.

Local wheat receipts, which were 31,500 bu, compared with 10,500 a week ago and 51,000 a year ago, included 17 cars local and 4 through. Corn receipts, which were 76,500 bu, compared with 60,000 a week ago and 75,000 a year ago, included 41 cars local and 10 through. Oats receipts, which were 6000 bu, compared with 28,000 a week ago and 75,000 a year ago, included 3 cars local. Hay receipts were 5 cars through.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN.

In the cash grain market Saturday, wheat was ¾@1½c higher. The demand was slow and one of the four cars offered was carried over. No hard wheat was offered. Corn was unchanged to ½c higher. The supply was light, but demand slow and some grain was unsold at the close. Oats were ½c higher and the small supply was more than enough for current requirements.

Sales made on the floor of the exchange were as follows:

Wheat: No. 1 red winter wheat $1.43¾@1.44½; No. 2 red winter wheat $1.43¼; No. 1 hard wheat $1.42 nom.

Corn: No. 2 mixed corn $1.15@1.16; No. 3 mixed corn $1.13½; No. 3 yellow corn $1.14; No. 4 yellow corn $1.13@1.13½; sample grade yellow corn $1.06; No. 3 white corn $1.16.

Oats: No. 3 white oats 51½c; sample grade white oats 49¾c; sample grade mixed oats 50c.

TURPENTINE, FLAX AND LINSEED

Linseed oil in one to four barrel lots was quoted at 11.3c per pound for raw and 11.7c per pound for boiled. Half drums, 06c more.

Two Theories of Amending The Federal Constitution

justice which lie at the base of all civil and political institutions—principles which the fourteenth amendment embodies in the general terms of its due process clause."

"The fourteenth amendment legitimately operates to extend to the citizens and residents of the states the same protection against arbitrary state legislation affecting life, liberty and property as is offered by the fifth amendment against similar legislation by Congress."

This is a summation of the effect of certain decisions of the court, contained in the annotation of decisions on constitutional points published by authority of Congress in 1924.

The effect of the court's interpretations of the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment obviously has been to guarantee all persons against infringement by the states of all the rights enumerated in the first amendment which forbids Congress to enact any law 'respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." However Dean Clark included another clause in his proposal, saying that the provisions of the first amendment should "apply to and govern the actions of the several states as well as of Congress."

Danger in Proposal.

Those who believe that the Constitution as it now stands fully protects all the civil rights of the people against infringement by either Federal or State Government, look with fear upon the intrusion of detailed definition and limitation into the Constitution itself. To negative a clause in one respect and then undertake to make exceptions to the negation, they assert, can only result in a patch-work of contradictory declarations, and boundless confusions.

Other Proposed Amendments.

The other proposed amendments intended to enlarge the powers of Congress are of the same general nature as the Clark proposal, and, of course, are subject to the same observations.

An amending resolution introduced by Senator Ashurst is much briefer, providing only that, "The Congress shall have power to make laws to regulate agriculture, commerce, industry and labor."

This would open the door practically without limit to that type of New Deal legislation which the Court has found unconstitutional, in the case of NRA by unanimous vote, but it should be observed that any legislation attempted under this proposed amendment still would be subject to the other guarantees in the Constitution and the limitations of due process. Again contradiction between two provisions.

Senator Costigan has introduced an amending resolution the principal provision of which is, "The Congress shall have power to regulate hours and conditions of labor and to establish minimum wages in any employment and to regulate production, industry, business, trade, and commerce to prevent unfair methods and practices therein."

The purpose is the same as in the Clark and Ashurst proposals.

Here, also, an attempt would be made to limit the due process clauses in both the Fourteenth and Fifth amendments, but this resolution contains nothing specifically saving persons from violations of the Bill of Rights by states.

The Socialist Proposal.

The suggested amendment indorsed by the Socialist party is more explicit than the others in enumerating new grants of power to Congress. Under it Congress would be authorized to enact laws to regulate, limit and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years old, to limit work time and establish minimum wages, to provide broadly for social and economic welfare, and to own and operate natural resources and basic industrial and business enterprises.

This proposal would make no attempt to remove or modify the guarantees of property rights in the Constitution which bar the way to what the suggested amendment proposes.

The amending proposal introduced by Senator Borah last Feb. 25, which is one of the most seriously considered of those intended to draw support away from the President's scheme, would repeal the Fourteenth amendment and re-enact many of its provisions, but in the new form would place the same limitations on due process as are proposed in the Clark and Costigan suggestions. It also specifically guarantees civil liberties against state infringement. As has been shown, however, these liberties are fully secured under the Court's interpretation of the due process clause.

Proposed Curbs on Court.

Of the other type of amendment, seeking to restrict or condition the power of the Court to pass on the constitutionality of laws, the proposal introduced by Senator Wheeler probably has received most consideration. The vital part of this proposal reads:

> "In case the Supreme Court renders any judgment holding any act of Congress or any provision of any such act unconstitutional, the question with respect to the constitutionality of such act or provision shall be promptly submitted to the Congress for its action at the earliest practicable date that the Congress is in session following the date upon which such judgment is rendered; but no action shall be taken by the Congress upon such question until an election shall have been held at which members of the House of Representatives are regularly by law to be chosen. If such act or provision is re-enacted by two-thirds of each House of the Congress to which such members are elected at such election, such act or provision shall be deemed to be constitutional and effective from the date of such re-enactment."

An amendment proposed by Senator Norris would deprive inferior Federal courts of the power to pass on constitutionality of acts of Congress and restrict that power to the Supreme Court, but would require that a judgment holding an act unconstitutional would have to be concurred in by more than two-thirds of the members of the Court. With a membership of nine this would take concurrence by at least seven justices. Furthermore, the judgment could be given only if the litigation had been instituted within six months atfer enactment of the legislation in question.

Several other amendments of the same general nature have been introduced. Such proposals have flooded Congress at other times when certain political or social groups have objected violently to the Court's decisions. Such measures never have received serious consideration at the hands of Congress.

Opposition Argument.

Defenders of the function of judicial review exercised by the Supreme Court for 134 years, including the power to pass on the constitutionality of acts of Congress and of the states, always have answered attacks on the Court's power by showing how necessary such judicial power is to the maintenance of the Federal form of government under the Constitution.

In this view the Constitution is at once a covenant, a contract and a charter of government. The covenanters are the people; the contract is between the people, acting of necessity through the states, and the Federal Government which the contract creates.

As a charter of government the Constitution established the form and defined the powers of the Federal Government; it set up three co-ordinate branches—legislative, executive and judicial—and specifically conferred on these branches all the powers that they possess; all powers not so conferred were reserved to the states or to the people.

Since there must arise in the course of human relations differences of opinion as to the exact boundaries of these respective powers and as to the extent of the power conferred on the Federal Government, it was necessary to establish an umpire; this is the Federal judiciary, at the top of which, as final arbiter, is the Supreme Court.

Obviously it was necessary for the maintenance of orderly government that all questions and conflicts in the exercise of power should be answered with finality. For this the Supreme Court, so established as to safeguard its independence, was early accepted as the ultimate authority, and its position in this respect has never been successfully challenged.

What "Due Process" Means.

"Due process of law," it will be observed, means within the Constitution, as well as in accordance with statutes passed by legislatures or Congress. It is not enough that executive officers or agencies of government charged with enforcement of law shall have followed strictly the provisions of the statute, but also that Congress or the legislature which enacted the law shall have had the power under the Constitution to enact it.

Those who would restrict due process to procedure seem to say that the statutes are the only things to be considered, that the legislatures themselves rather than the courts should be the final judges of what laws are valid, as is the case in England, which is to overlook the fact that the Constitution is the fundamental law and that other laws cannot contradict it.

In constructions of the "due process" clause of the Fifth Amendment, the Supreme Court has held that the article is a restraint on the legislative as well as on the executive and judicial powers of the Government and cannot be so construed as to leave Congress free to make any process "due process of law" by its mere will.

Tuesday, 11 a. m., "An Introduction to Prints," gallery talk by Miss Mary Powell; 2:30 p. m., "Design in the French Renaissance," talk in the series on design in decoration by Miss Jessie B. Chamberlain.

Miss Jaquelin Ambler will speak on "Antwerp, Bruges and Ghent, Flemish Painting," at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday. Miss Powell will repeat her talk on prints at 10 a. m. Friday. The Saturday schedule includes a drawing period for children at 1:30 p. m., museum games for children at 2, story hour on "Maxmilian the Great," by Miss Powell at 2:30, a talk for older boys and girls on how pottery is glazed by Miss Ambler at 2:30 and a gallery talk by Miss Chamberlain on Chinese sculpture at 3:30.

SCOUTS BEGIN SPECIAL COURSES TOMORROW

Intended to Provide Basic Training for More Than 3000 Volunteer Leaders.

Initial sessions of two of 15 special courses planned by the St. Louis Council of the Boy Scouts of America, will be held tomorrow. One course, providing instruction for mothers interested in cub scout work, opened last Thursday at a downtown department store.

Dr. C. E. Colgate will be lecturer and demonstrator, assisted by H. Max Nusser, at a first aid class at the Washington University Medical School. No more registrations are being taken.

Elements of scoutmastership will be taught at a class in the Michael School, 4568 Forest Park boulevard, by W. S. Parks, assisted by J. Oliver Johnson, Robert Walker, Frank McMath, and Carl Schaeffer. The last of nine meetings will be held May 1.

The fifteen series of instruction, all planned for this spring, are in charge of the committee of education of the St. Louis council. All have been approved by the National Boy Scout Council and will provide the basic training for more than 3000 volunteer leaders who will work with 18,000 scouts and cubs in the St. Louis area.

The explorer troop of the Arrowhead district will meet in the future at the Missouri School for the Blind, 3815 Magnolia avenue, and will have as additional members blind scouts of the school. A study of theory and practice of code, sponsored by the Order of Brass Pounders, will be continued and blind scouts will be helped in their plan to make portable short wave sets.

Dr. Harvey J. Howard, St. Louis physician, will discuss his experiences as a captive of Chinese bandits at a meeting of explorer scouts Monday, March 15, at Shaare Emeth Temple. He was captured while in China as physician for the emperor.

Harry R. Burke, of the St. Louis Council, will speak on "Why a St. Louisan Should Be Proud of His Citizenship" at a senior scout citizenship forum next Sunday at St. Peter's Church, Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue.

Troop Notes

Troop 208 of Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, will celebrate its second anniversary Tuesday with a banquet and court of honor.

Courts of honor will be held Thursday by troop 119, Shaare Zedek Synagogue, and Tuesday by troop 124, Lane Tabernacle. Courts of honor were held last Friday by troop 28, Church of St. Michael and St. George, and troop 74, Sherman School.

AIRPORT NEAR SYLVAN BEACH LEASED BY RAY BRANSON

He Says Unlicensed Planes and Pilots No Longer May Use Field.

Steuby Airport, on Highway 66 near Sylvan Beach, has been leased by Ray Branson, licensed transport pilot, who announced that unlicensed airplanes and pilots will no longer be permitted to operate from the field.

Inexperienced pilots in unlicensed planes have figured in a series of fatal crashes near the field in the last two years. Branson said a passenger-carrying service will continue to be operated at the field, the name of which will be changed to Meramec Airport, but only licensed pilots and planes will be used.

Branson lives at 4516 McPherson avenue and was employed at the field for a year as manager and pilot on sight-seeing flights. He leased the field from John S. Steuby, owner of the hangar.

To Form Railroad Society.

Persons interested in the history and operation of railroads will meet Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the Cabanne Branch Library, 1106 Union boulevard, to discuss a permanent organization.

Weddings Set For Spring and Early Summer

Dorcas Carr Taylor to Be April Bride—Plans for Moffitt-Griffin Ceremony Announced.

SPRING and early summer weddings will have an important place in the social calendar of the little season, which opens Easter week and continues until St. Louisans start on summer holidays. April, always a favored month for weddings in St. Louis, has been chosen by several prospective brides.

Miss Dorcas Carr Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lackland Taylor, whose family has long been prominent in the social life of this city, will become the bride of Charles Edward Gay III of Savannah, Ga., Saturday, April 3. The ceremony will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, 4607 Maryland avenue, at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, with the Rev. Sylvester Tucker of the St. Louis Cathedral officiating in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. A small reception will be held after the ceremony.

Miss Taylor will have as her only attendant, her sister, Miss Marie Carr Taylor. Wilkinson Stark of Detroit, Mich., an uncle of Mr. Gay, will be best man. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Gay Jr., Savannah, parents of the bridegroom, will be among the out-of-town guests. A series of pre-wedding parties to honor Miss Taylor is being arranged.

Miss Natalie Lyon Moffitt, daughter of Mrs. Nathaniel L. Moffitt, 48 Kingsbury place, whose engagement to Dustin Hadley Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Griffin, was announced Monday, has completed plans for an April wedding. The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. Moffitt Wednesday night, April 7, at 8:30 o'clock, and will be followed by a reception.

Mrs. Joseph W. Holliday, Kansas City, the former Miss Olive Moffitt, will be matron of honor for her sister and Miss Judith H. Griffin, sister of the bridegroom-elect, will be maid of honor. Miss Moffitt's two 6-year-old nieces will be flower girls. They are Olive Moffitt Holliday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Holliday, and Eleanor Ann Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn V. Russell, Upper Montclair, N. J.

Mr. Griffin's brother, Hadley Griffin, a student at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., will be best man for his brother. The groomsmen will be announced later.

Miss Ruth Elizabeth Harms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Harms, 7210 Creveling drive, and George Watson Skinner will be married at Bethel Lutheran Church at an evening ceremony, Wednesday, May 19. The Rev. Albert Korris, pastor of the church, will read the marriage service which will be followed by a reception at the Harms home. The bridal party, which has not been completed, will include several out-of-town friends of Miss Harms.

Mr. Skinner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse S. Skinner, 420 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves.

The first June wedding to be announced is that of Miss Marjorie Green, daughter of former Judge and Mrs. Ernest A. Green, and Joel Alexander Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray Rogers, 5534 Clemens avenue. The ceremony will take place in the garden of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Green, Clayton and Kent roads, Saturday afternoon, June 5, at 5:30 o'clock. The ceremony, to be performed by the Rev. Dr. Karl Morgan Block of the Church of St. Michael and St. George, will be followed by a reception.

Miss Marjorie Varley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Varley, 7365 Kingsbury boulevard, and Arthur O. Hoeller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Hoeller, will be married Friday, April 2, at the Church of St. Michael and St. George, with Dr. Block officiating. The ceremony will take place at 8:30 o'clock in the evening, and a small reception will be held at the Varley home.

Miss Varley will be attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jack C. Varley as matron of honor. Miss Cyriline Galvin and Miss Geraldine Weis will be bridesmaids. Robert Denckhoff will be best man for Mr. Hoeller. Jack C. Varley and Frederick Denckhoff will be groomsmen.

Miss Isobel Acruman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf L. Acruman, 7255 Delmar boulevard, has chosen Saturday, April 3, as the date for her marriage to Frederick Pierce Knight of St. Louis, formerly of Springfield, Mo. The wedding will be solmenized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Acruman at 11 o'clock in the morning with the Rev. Dr. Roy Calvin Dobson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating. A small reception will be held after the ceremony.

Mr. Knight is the son of Mrs. H. A. Knight, Springfield.

Children's Drawing Contest Feature of Benefit Dog Show

DRAWING contests, open to all children from 4 to 12 years old, with pure-bred dogs as prizes, will be a feature of the silver anniversary all-breed dog show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club to be held at the Arena, March 27 and 28.

The drawings, divided into two classes—one for children between 4 and 7 years of age and one for those between 8 and 12—must be of a dog or group of dogs. Mrs. Carl J. Koehler and Mrs. A. Shapleigh Boyd Jr., co-chairmen of the contest, said entries must be received at the league's headquarters, 4932 Maryland avenue, by March 24. The child submitting the best drawing in each class will be awarded a dog at the Saturday matinee.

The judges for the contest are: Herbert G. Spencer, art superintendent of public schools in St. Louis; B. I. Flynn, art superintendent of public schools in University City, and Miss Nita Schuester, art director of Clayton schools.

With $2500 in cash awards, 75 trophies, six bronze plaques, and 1500 rosettes, coveted tokens of recognition, the premium list is completed for the show, which is given for the benefit of the various welfare enterprises of the Junior League.

The list of awards has been sent to prospective exhibitors in all parts of this country and Canada in effort to attract a record entry. With this completed, league members, under the direction of Mrs. Richard Baldwin, Mrs. Kenneth L. Green Jr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Pettus, are busy with an advance ticket sale.

Mrs. Clarence Maloy Jr., chairman of the trophy committee, announced the following league members have donated trophies: Mrs. Donald C. Bixby, Mrs. E. Sinclair Garvey, Mrs. Henry B. Pflager, Miss Margaret Rumsey, Mrs. Busch Magnus, Miss Edwine Nugent, Mrs. Samuel Cupples Scudder, Mrs. Whipple Van Ness Jones, Miss Noel Kennerly and Mrs. John F. Krey. The following children of members have given trophies: Jean and James Coulter, Mary Lambert, Claire Ann Werner, Anne and Benny McCandless, Larry and Steve Post, Allen and Barbara Whittemore, William Crawford Schock, Mary Christy Johnson and Jeanette Rand.

In addition to national organization and local specialty clubs, the following individuals also are offering awards: Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert P. Strelinger, Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. English, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Forman, Mr. and Mrs. Adolf G. Ackermann, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Williams, Mr. and Mrs. L. Val Kurrus, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Siebert, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank White, Mr. and Mrs. John Irwin, Mr. and Mrs.

Old Home in South to Be Scene of Spring House Party

THE old Walter home at Holly Springs, Miss., which dates from 1850, has been restored to its original aura. Mrs. Oscar Johnson, 38 Portland place, whose father, Harvey W. Walter, built it, has refurnished the home as she remembers it when a girl.

Nottingham curtains made in Brussels are now extinct—at least they are made only on special order; so net has been used in their place. But carpets like the originals, with clusters of red roses, are available, and bric-a-brac of the early '50s has been found.

Since her father's death the house has been bought and sold several times, but it is now owned by Mrs. Johnson, who has made it as resplendent as in the beginning. The exterior remains unchanged. Tall Corinthian columns still stand in front of the old brick facade.

Holly Springs is of special interest this year, for it will have a garden pilgrimage beginning the week after the Natchez tour and its old homes will be open to the public. The town, founded in 1837, one of the four important historical spots in Mississippi, has its part in Civil War history. It was here that Gen. Grant met a setback in his Vicksburg campaign when Gen. Earl Van Dorn of the Confederate army burned his supply depot. The small town with broad shaded streets is built around a courthouse square. It is the seat of Marshall County.

Mrs. Johnson, her family, and a party of friends plan to be in Holly Springs during the pilgrimage. The hostess has taken two extra houses to accommodate her guests. Three sisters will be reunited in the family home, for Dr. Anne Walter Fearn of Shanghai, China; Miss Lillian Walter and Mrs. Henry Dye of New Canaan, Conn., and New York will be there with Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson's family, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm W. Moss, her daughter and son-in-law and their daughter, Miss Phoebe; Oscar Johnson, her son, and Mr. and Mrs. James Lee Johnson, her son and daughter-in-law, plan to leave in about 10 days with Mrs. Johnson.

Dr. Fearn will land in San Francisco March 24 on the President Hoover, to come directly to St. Louis. It was in 1893 when Dr. Fearn went to Shanghai for one year, "on a grand lark," and, like so many others there, she stayed for 43 years. She became the first woman general medical practitioner in China, in the Mission Hospital at Soochow. Later she founded her own hospital, the Fearn Sanitorium, at Shanghai. This she sold at the death of her husband, Dr. J. Burrus Fearn. Since then she has made many tours around the world, but keeping Shanghai as her headquarters. A short time ago the American colony in Shanghai presented her with a silver tea service in recognition of her long years as a doctor and generous hostess. She is bringing the service with her and plans to leave it in her girlhood home.

Mary Institute Glee Club Concert.

The Mary Institute glee club will give an annual concert Wednesday morning in the chapel. The first group of selections is composed of old English songs, the last two numbers being folk tunes, which have been rearranged. The last group of songs is a medley of popular tunes, and the program will be closed with the ensemble singing of the alma mater.

Costume Ball at Artists' Guild To Have Surrealism as Theme

A QUEER composite of objects, unrelated except in the dreams of the artist, decorates lavender-hued invitations sent last week for the surrealism costume ball to be given at the Artists' Guild next Saturday night.

A large "inward, digestive" eye dominates the top of the scene in which scant clouds and birds flutter together toward a dry, cracked ocean bed. In the foreground ants scamper across a distorted watch, its hands trailing off the side, and scuttle past the skeleton of a sailboat and over a mask, near which is a burnt match and a sign driven deep into the earth, advertising the party. At one side stones rise in the shape of two gigantic busts of men. At the other the guests are cautioned:

"don't be a-freud of your dreams
just turn them into schemes for costumes a la dali to strut in our wild folly let your fantasy be gay come the surrealiste way"

(Salvador Dal' artist, is the leading exponent of surrealism.)

A grand march in which all costumed guests and Guilders will participate is to begin the ball at 9 o'clock. Judges will select the two persons most originally costumed to preside over the later festivities. Walston Chubb is to be master of ceremonies during the general dancing, when surprise features, planned by the entertainment committee and involving all of the guests, will take place. Mrs. Matt Werner, entertainment chairman, is being assisted by Mercer Orwig, ball chairman; Mrs. Fred Carpenter, Joe Logan, Mrs. Scott MacNutt, Percy Ramsay and Gordon Summers.

At 11 o'clock a "mad ballet and a ballad chorus," introduced by Mrs. Werner, will sing and dance under the direction of Mrs. MacNutt and Miss Anna Agress. William Wahlert will sing a solo and will lead the chorus in a group of original verses written for the occasion by Mrs. John Porter, Miss Helen Hewitt and Miss Mary Jane Hussey, and set to music by Mr. Ramsay. Members of the chorus are Miss Helen Beccard, Elliott Bergfeld, Mrs. Carpenter, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Elman, Miss Josephine Johnson, Joe Logan, Mr. and Mrs. MacNutt, Mr. Orwig, Mr. Sommers and Courtney Werner.

Mrs. Lisbeth Ebers Hoops, exponent of modern German dancing, will present a pair of dancers assisted by a girl dance group. In the front gallery Miss Jessie Chamberlin will urge the guests to draw their suppressed desires or thoughts of their subconscious minds, aware that "the purpose of surrealism is the attainment of convulsive beauty." At the close of the entertainment the drawings will be displayed and the winner will receive a "very grand prize."

At midnight a buffet supper will be served in the crypt with the following in charge: Miss Agnes Lodwick, chairman; Mrs. Ralph L. Thompson and Mrs. Edward Dicke.

Large fantastic murals, garish both as to design and color, are painted this week by the following artists: Miss Beccard, chairman; Charles Eames, Wayman Whittemore, Mrs. Bernice Singer, James Turnbull, Miss Peter Keep, Angelo Corrubia, Miss Jessie Gleyre, Martin Kaiser, E. V. Gauger, Mrs. Aimee Schweig, Mrs. Hayden Parks, Mrs. Jessie Beard Rickley and Miss Florence Hazeltine.

Princeton Clubs Pledge St. Louisans

PRINCETON, N. J., March 6.

AFTER almost two weeks of "calling" and "bickering," 470 Princeton University sophomores, including five from St. Louis, were elected into the 17 upper-class eating clubs this week.

During the last two weeks the annual "bicker period" has been going on. Upperclass members of Princeton's substitutes for fraternities have been calling on members of the sophomore class in their rooms to help both parties in their choices.

Although they are actually now signed up, sophomores do not officially become members until the fall of their junior year, when they eat regularly at the clubs. During this spring they take occasional meals with the upperclassmen at the clubs and take part in the annual "section" parties. They are also allowed the privileges of the clubs during the spring house parties.

Of the St. Louis boys, Cottage Club, one of the traditional "Big Four," took in two, Lewis Warrington Baldwin Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Warrington Baldwin, 23 Westmoreland place, and Charles F. Limberg, son of Mrs. Foster Limberg, 4954 West Pine boulevard. Mr. Baldwin is a candidate for the var-

Junior League to Hear Thomas Hart Benton

MISSOURI MURALS is the subject of a lecture to be given tomorrow by Thomas Hart Benton, mural artist and member of one of Missouri's oldest political families, at 11 o'clock at Junior League headquarters, 4932 Maryland avenue.

Mr. Benton, who was born at the edge of the Missouri Ozarks, has studied both in New York and Paris, and is now teaching in Kansas City. His painting is concerned entirely with the American scene. He is the creator of the murals recently completed in the Capitol Building at Jefferson City which have caused considerable comment.

Women's Symphony Society to Give Tea

THE Women's Association of the St. Louis Symphony Society will give a tea in honor of Albert Spalding, violinist, and Vladimir Golschmann, conductor, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Wednesday Club, 4506 Westminster place.

Mr. Golschmann will speak. The Steindel trio, composed of Corinne Frederick, piano; Joseph Faerber, violin, and Max Steindel, violoncello, will give a program of music by E. Fernandez-Arbos.

Miami Beach Scene of Many Gay Parties

St. Louisans Entertained at Varied Social Affairs in Winter Homes and at Smart Clubs.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 6.

ONE of the gayest weeks of the entire winter season was the one just passed. Parties were given either in the homes of the host and hostess or at smart clubs and St. Louisans made up the major part of the guest lists.

One of the early functions of the series was a stag dinner a week ago Thursday night at which friends of Frank C. Rand, in Miami Beach with his daughter, Mrs. Gale F. Johnston, for a visit, were invited by Frank O. Watts to Indian Creek Club, popular gathering place for the winter colonists, for a birthday party in Mr. Rand's honor.

Next in order was a cocktail party the following afternoon, given by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Young of New York, former St. Louisans, whose winter estate on Star Island is one of the more elaborate of the Miami Beach homes.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Walter Briggs of Detroit, who are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Horace Flanigan of New York, gave a cocktail party for their guests; that night Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright had a dinner; Sunday Mr. and Mrs. John S. Swift entertained about 40 guests at a party, and Monday afternoon Mrs. Neill A. McMillan entertained a large group for cocktails. Mrs. Flanigan is a sister of Edward Magnus of St. Louis and frequently visits there.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright, who had previously visited Mr. and Mrs. George Herbert Walker of New York at their shooting lodge near Aiken, S. C., gave their party at Patio Moresque. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, who are staying at The Tower; Mr. and Mrs. Watts and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Maestre, who were visiting them; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry McRee, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene F. Williams Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Smith, John B. Denvir Jr. and others who are not St. Louisans.

Some of the same group—the Wattses, the Smiths who are their guests, and the Maestres—attended Mr. and Mrs. Swift's party, which was given at Indian Creek Club. Others were Mrs. Florence Parker Busch, who has leased a house here for the season; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Steedman, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford W. Gaylord, Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Arthur C. Garrison.

Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Frank, were among Mrs. McMillan's cocktail party guests, who included most of the St. Louis delegation.

Meanwhile there have been parties at Hialeah Park for the races; informal cocktail parties and luncheons at the Bath Club, where the resorters gather at 11 o'clock each morning for swimming, and night club parties sandwiched between entertainments in private homes.

In almost every house occupied by St. Louisans there have been, and in many cases still are, guests. Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter, who have a house for the winter, have with them their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Herbert Walker Jr. of New York. Mrs. Thomas M. Pierce recently returned home after visiting Mrs. Busch and her son, Stafford Lambert, but Mr. and Mrs. Marion L. J. Lambert, Mrs. Busch's son and daughter-in-law, are expected next week. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce's sons, Tom Jr. and Julius, have an apartment together. Mr. and Mrs. Maestre have returned but Mr. and Mrs. Watts are still entertaining Mrs. Garrison.

Mr. and Mrs. McRee are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Johnson; Mrs. McMillan, whose attractive home is bounded on two sides by water, has had visitors all season. Mr. and Mrs. Williams, who had previously gone to Nassau, have returned to St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright will be there early next week. Mrs. Albert M. Keller and Mrs. James L. Westlake, who have been at the Nautilis for several weeks, have left.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Strauch of Huntleigh Village are at the Nautilus. Miss Rose Muckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Muckerman, has an apartment for the season, and Mrs. Holt Tipton and Mrs. Earl Giraldin are sharing a apartment for several weeks.

Vassar Honors St. Louis Girls.

Five St. Louis students have been chosen as members of the Directors' Group at Vassar College. They are Miss Dorothy Fairbank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fairbank; Miss Cordelia See, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. See; Miss Elizabeth Funsten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Funsten; Miss Patricia Van Scholack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Van Scholack; Susan Buder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Buder. The Directors' Group is a dramatic organization meeting weekly to experiment in acting and directing freshman plays.

Many St. Louisans At Palm Beach, Fla.

By W. E. REYBURN.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 6.

MRS. ROLAND KAHLE, who with Mr. Kahle is wintering at the Breakers Hotel, won second prize at the annual Beach Attire contest, held at the Breakers Beach. The award was a silver bowl. Her costume, a silk bathing suit, long cape and beach bag, was entirely in white except a coral rope wound in her mandarin hat of terry cloth.

Stewart McDonald of Washington, formerly of St. Louis, was present at the Bath and Tennis Club for a recent luncheon given by Walter Chrysler, head of the motor car company bearing his name, and Mrs. Chrysler. Present also were their daughter, Mrs. Edgar W. Garbisch, Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton Jr., and others. Mr. McDonald departed Monday for Washington, where he gave a dinner Tuesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Merrill, winter visitors of Palm Beach.

Mrs. H. J. McNichols recently made a three-days trip to Havana, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Merkle of Chicago. They arrived there on the Island's Independence day, and soldiers and sailors were lined up on the wharf as their ship drew in. Mrs. McNichols returned here to resume her visit at the winter home of Mrs. James T. Boyle of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayward H. Gatch recently flew to Havana for a short visit. They are now back at the Brazilian Court Hotel, with their daughter, Miss Catherine Gatch, and their son, Hayward H. Gatch Jr.

Mrs. Oscar Liese of Belleville, her daughter, Miss Ann Liese, and Miss Loraine Eddy of Chicago spent last week-end at Nassau.

The Lieses recently gave a beach supper for about 16 people. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Harding and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Watkins of Signal Hill near Belleville, Mrs. Louise de Wenter of Bloomington, Ill., and others. Bridge was played later at the home of Mrs. Frieda Marx of Chicago.

Miss Ann Hunt of Normandy, St. Louis County, and Miss Marjorie Cornet are here for a visit of a fortnight or so. They greeted Mr. and Mrs. Eric Applewhite, formerly of Normandy, who motored here Sunday, accompanied by their two children, Cynthia and Eric Applewhite Jr. The visitors and their hostesses were entertained recently at a cocktail party at the winter home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fletcher Sparks. Present also were Mr. and Mrs. William E. Parker of Cape Cod, Mass., Mrs. Parker's sister, Miss Elizabeth Parsons of Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins Jones. Miss Hunt and Miss Cornet accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Applewhite for a visit of a few days in Miami.

Mrs. Sparks' son, Thomas R. Reyburn, arrived here last week-end for a week's visit at the Palm Beach Hotel, accompanied by a party of friends.

Philip B. Fouke rejoined his wife, Mrs. Fouke, at Hotel Vineta after returning to St. Louis for a short stay.

Mrs. Clarence Maloy and Mrs. George Whitelaw are guests at the Brazilian Court Hotel.

Mrs. E. E. Norman of Hinsdale, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Straub and Arthur Straub Jr. were recently guests at the Breakers at a luncheon given by Mrs. William L. Newcome of South Haven, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Benoist of Fort Pierce, Fla., and Warm Springs, Va., formerly of St. Louis, spent last week-end at Benoist Farms, the home of Mr. Benoist's father, Eugene Benoist, and brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bryan, and their daughter, Miss Eugenia Bryan.

Paris Activities Of St. Louisans

PARIS, Feb. 23.

WASHINGTON'S birthday was the occasion for many social events in the Paris-American colony. Ambassador William C. Bullitt gave a luncheon at the embassy for the heads of the embassies and legations of all the countries of the two Americas. This followed the annual tribute to George Washington—a wreath placed on his statue in the Place de Jena by the American ambassador. All American organizations participated.

Both Paris chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution met yesterday at the reception given by Mrs. William Maclain Freeman, registrar of the Rochambeau chapter, at Hotel Crillon. Members of the Benjamin Franklin chapter of the D. A. R. attended the reception following a business meeting. Madame Lebrun, wife of the president of the French Republic, was a guest of honor. Among the guests were Mrs. Nelson Dean Jay and Mrs. Walter L. Russell, both former St. Louisans.

Mrs. Russell has recently returned to her Paris apartment on Avenue Foch from St. Moritz, where she spent several weeks at the winter sports carnival. Her daughter, Vicomtesse Paul Donin, and the Vicomte, have taken possession of their new apartment on the rue Vineuse.

Miss May Birkhead is back in her apartment on the rue Petrarch following a month's visit to America. She was a passenger on the Bremen.

Lady Peek, formerly Miss Edwine Thornborough of St. Louis, is back at her home in London after a sojourn on the French Riviera.

Monte Carlo tennis tourneys are in progress this week at the Monte Carlo Country Club. Among the trophies is the Beaumont prize, an award to women players, donated by Commodore Louis Beaumont. Although her name does not appear on the list of those present, Mrs. Wallis Simpson was unofficially present, as were her host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers.

Advertising Women Plan Party April 1

IN place of its third annual gridiron dinner the Women's Advertising Club will give "April Fooleries," a series of skits at a dinner at Hotel Coronado Thursday night, April 1. The skits, written by Miss Jean Ellinger will satirize events of the year and will be given by members of the club. Miss Marion Willier is party chairman.

The club will meet tomorrow in the Daniel Boone room of Hotel Statler for luncheon at 12:15 o'clock. Miss Edna Van Horn, assistant editor of Better Homes and Gardens will address the club on "The Place of a Service Magazine in Modern Living."

The fourth lecture in the second annual training course "Careers in Advertising," conducted by the club will be held at St. Louis University Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Bea Adama, former president of the club will review "Modern Advertising Makes Money," by Kenneth M. Goode.

Reception to Honor Gov. and Mrs. Stark

INVITATIONS have been sent to leaders of social, civic and cultural St. Louis for a reception in honor of Gov. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Stark Tuesday night, March 19, in the crystal room of Hotel Jefferson. The party will follow immediately after the Betty Jaynes concert in the Opera House of the Municipal Auditorium for the benefit of the opera fund. The cards were signed by a special committee including Frank M. Mayfield, chairman; Bishop William Scarlett, Guy A. Thompson, August A. Busch Jr., Arthur B. Baer and John S. Leahy.

Betty Jaynes, 15-year-old soprano, has telegraphed her acceptance of the invitation, although she had previously planned to return to Chicago after the concert to pack for a trip to Hollywood where she will begin work on her first motion picture.

Assisting artists at the concert, which is under the auspices of the St. Louis Opera Company, will be Scipione Guidi, concertmaster of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra; Max Steindel, first violoncellist, and Corrine Frederick, St. Louis pianist.

County Woman's Civic Institute.

The St. Louis County Woman's Civic Institute elected officers Thursday at a meeting at the Castlereagh Hotel, University City. Mrs. A. G. Wichman was elected vice-president; Mrs. Frank E. Walter, recording secretary, and Mrs. Carolyn Rekhart, treasurer. Officers elected last year and remaining in office are: Mrs. D. E. Horton, president; Mrs. W. E. Barker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. I. R. Roberts, parliamentarian; Mrs. C. C. Wolff, head of the research board. Mrs. Wichman will entertain the group at tea Wednesday afternoon, March 17, at her home, 7221 Greenway avenue, University City.

Gray Lady Committee.

The Gray Lady Committee, a volunteer organization of the Red Cross, will meet in the offices of the Red Cross Chapter, 3723 Olive street, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, March 6.

IT is pleasant to hear from Richmond friends that Mrs. Ernest Stires, who was Miss Louise Homer, daughter of the internationally known singer, Mme. Louise Homer, has a new musical accomplishment in that she has learned to play the accordion with the virtuosity one would expect from a member of that family dedicated to the fine arts.

National Service School graduates in Washington can recall those days in the Chevy Chase encampment when Miss Homer, a student, used to sing in her tent, with a repertoire that represented a real concert for her comrades, who were preparing for war-relief tasks. She never lacked an audience and was the star at camp entertainments arranged for the students.

When she was married to Mr. Stires, a brilliant young clergyman, they went to Alexandria to live and now have gone to Richmond, where he has a parish. The Rev. Mr. Stires is the son of the Bishop of Long Island and Mrs. Stires and is a graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary near Alexandria.

Speaking of Virginia, Washington literary folk are gratified to learn the title of Poet Laureate of the Old Dominion has been bestowed on Carter W. Wormeley, by an act of the State Legislature. Mr. Wormeley, who has relatives in Washington, is well known in this city. Abroad his work has been praised in England, and has had mention by such men as Clemenceau in France and Mussolini in Italy.

Mr. Wormeley comes rightly by his poetic talents, for he is a direct descendant of the first native-born Wormeley in Virginia, Sir Ralph Wormeley II, known as a poet in Oriole College, Oxford, in 1665. One of his most noted poems is called "The Flying Fool," and was dedicated to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

In the passing of Elihu Root, America lost an able statesman and Washington a good friend. Senator Root was a devoted adherent of the plan for a greater Washington and knew practically every foot of the District from personal inspection in walks he would take about the city. He was a scholar, too, and enjoyed nothing so much as a verbal battle on some abstruse matter with a favorite adversary. One day he was discussing some economic problem with George W. Wickersham.

On Wickersham's part he was indulging in a barrage of quotations in a dozen languages or so. There was a third person considerably mystified by the extracts from the Koran, the Pandelcts of Justinian, the Code Napoleon, Plato's Republic and Kant's metaphysics. So he turned to Senator Root and asked: "Senator, can't you give something with which to beat this lawyer at his own game."

"Well," answered Root crisply, "if you want to floor Wickersham, ask him something about the law."

Eleanor McCormick Collier, daughter of Robert Hall McCormick of Chicago, is to have a pleasant trip in May, for her father is planning a yachting party to Greece and will take her and her husband, "Sarge" Collier, aboard at Brioni, that unspoiled Italian resort in the Adriatic, eight hours from Venice. When the McCormick yacht returns to America in August, Eleanor Collier will be with her father and visit her native land for a few weeks, including Washington in the list of places to be seen once more.

There is a woman in Washington who can match fishing records with President Roosevelt, especially of exploits in Florida waters. She is Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who combines other talents with her ability with the rod and tackle. She holds the record at Port Arkansas, Tex., where she once caught, in a single day, 10 tarpons, all from 4 to 6½ feet long.

Kappa Alumnae Meeting.

The St. Louis alumnae association of Kappa Kappa Gamma will meet for luncheon Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ralph High, 6818 Waterman avenue. KING OF IRAN GRANTS AMERICAN OIL CONCESSION Signs Decree Permitting Amiranian Co. to Develop Fields in Eastern Part of Kingdom.

By the Associated Press.

TEHERAN, Iran, March 6.—Reza Chah Pahlavi, King of Iran, signed today a decree granting American companies the privilege of developing oil concessions in eastern districts of the kingdom.

The concession privilege is held by the new Amiranian Oil Co., owned jointly by the Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware; Case, Pomeroy & Co., a banking firm, and Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury. Also interested in the development is the Texas Co., by virtue of its ownership of about one-thir dof the stock of Seaboard Oil.

The negotiations were conducted by Charles C. Hart, former United States Minister to Iran, and Frederick C. Clapp, technical adviser to Amiranian.

G. E. Sokolsky on Capitalism.

George E. Sokolsky, author, will Speak on "The Nature and Strength of the Capitalistic System" tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the final Liberal Forum program of the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., Union boulevard and Enright avenue. Before Sokolsky speaks, the winner of a $100 purchase prize award exhibit sponsored by the association will be announced.

Women's Ad Club Meeting.

Miss Edna Van Horn, assistant editor of Better Homes and Gardens, will speak on "The Place of a Service Magazine in Modern Living" at a meeting of the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis tomorrow at 12:15 p. m. at Hotel Statler.

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

ANNOUNCEMENT of the approaching marriage of Miss Merriann Brandt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Brandt of Aurora, Ill., to William Keiser, also of Aurora, has been received by friends of the Brandt family. Mr. Brandt was some years ago an instructor in the St. Charles Military Academy. Miss Merriann spent her early childhood here and has often visited in St. Charles. She is the niece of Mrs. Austin Fox and the granddaughter of Mrs. L. L. Burke. The wedding will be held May 12 at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Aurora. Miss Brandt attended Aurora College. Her fiance is connected with an automobile supply company. Mr. and Mrs. Fox recently returned from Aurora.

Honoring Miss Louise Tainter, a linen shower and luncheon was given for 19 guests by Miss Mary Fischbach and Miss Eleanor O'Keefe of Moberly, Mo., at the home of Miss Fischbach's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fischbach, 545 Clay street, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 27. Miss Tainter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. F. J. Tainter, 505 Clark street, is to be the bride of Bernard J. Chartrand of St. Louis on March 31. The wedding is to be held at the Holy Family Church in Chicago, with Miss Tainter's brother, the Rev. James Tainter, S. J., officiating.

Most of the guests at the luncheon are students at Maryville College of St. Louis and former classmates of Miss Tainter. They follow: Miss Mary Feeley, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Madeleine Desloge, Miss Jane Blakeslee, Miss Judith Meiser, Miss Mary Belle Wachter, Miss Thelma Rosenbach and Miss Virginia Marks, all of St. Louis; Miss Kathryn Grover, Ferguson; Miss Eileen Cummins, Washington, D. C.; Miss Annabelle Richarme, New Orleans; Miss Mary Schwing, New Iberia, La.; Miss Phoebe Steinbrinker, Miss Mary Jo Tainter, Mrs. Allen Brent and Mrs. Gilbert Fischbach, all of this city. Other prewedding parties are planned for Miss Tainter.

Mrs. Edith Emonts entertained at dinner for 18 guests at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Rauch, 505 Jefferson street, Tuesday evening. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. A. Earl Wyatt and Mrs. Lee G. Stealey, both of University City.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pieper entertained their contract bridge club at dinner and cards at their home, 128 North Sixth street, Monday evening. Out-of-town members attending were Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gray, both of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Moehlenkamp were among 12 guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Beverly Jordan of St. Louis, at a cocktail party Saturday night, Feb. 27, and at a dinner party following at the Candlelight.

Mrs. Fantley L. Gray, 722 Jefferson street, entertained her contract bridge club Wednesday afternoon.

The American Association of University Women held their March meeting with Miss Julia Thomson, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Thomson, 428 Kingshighway, Thursday night. Assisting as hostesses were Dr. Wilma Pugh, Mrs. A. P. E. Schulz, Mrs. L. R. McAdam and Miss Margaret Dyer. The program was in charge of the legislative committee, of which Miss Dyer is chairman. Miss Anderson of the home economics department at Lindenwood College gave a talk on the "Pure Food and Drug Act" and Dr. Pugh, also of Lindenwood, spoke on "Neutrality." These topics are ones proposed by the national branch for study during 1937.

Miss Rachel Morris of Lindenwood College gave the fifth of her study group lectures for the A. A. U. W., taking up early adolescent problems, at the Public Library Monday afternoon.

Sterling P. Jones of Webster Groves was in charge of the program given for the St. Charles Nature Society's meeting, held at Roemer Hall, Lindenwood College, Tuesday evening. He showed slides of birds, using among others some that were made from photographs of herons taken in St. Charles County by Wayne Short.

Mrs. Charles W. Wilson and Miss Mabel Tainter received as hostesses at the March meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the Public Library, Saturday afternoon. A national defense program was held with Mrs. Thomas B. Craghead in charge. Representatives from various patriotic organizations gave reports on their work in this line.

The Study Club met with Mrs. A. P. E. Schulz, 804 Clay street, Monday afternoon. Miss Annie Bailey of Webster Groves, read a review of the book "El Jimmy."

Stephen Blackhurst, 911 North Kingshighway, superintendent of schools, and Ray C. Ford, 905 North Kingshighway, principal of the St. Charles High School, attended a teachers' convention in New Orleans last week.

The following students spent last week-end visiting their parents: Robert Huff, attending Cape Girardeau State Teachers' College, and Miss Corinne Meyer, Miss Bernice Robine, Elmer Pundmann, Victor Lammers, Ramsey Lammers, Paul Ward and Joe Moore, all students of Kirksville State Teachers' College.

Mrs. J. D. Davy, 413 Clay street, and Miss Erna Nolle and Miss Edna Meyer of North Main street are attending a shop operators' beauty convention at Chicago.

HOW IT FEELS to FACE DEATH in the BULL RING

Juan Belmonte.

Tense scene in the bull ring with Belmonte being gored by the bull.

Juan Belmonte, Most Famous and Most Picturesque of Living Matadors, Tells His Own Story.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

GENTLY and gracefully as a dancer, the slender youth kept the 1200-pound black bull passing and repassing with mathematical exactness on first one side and then the other. His slight figure was sculptured against the ground-shaking mass of savage flesh as the folds of the red muleta, flowing from the delicate fingers, guided the desperate charges. The young matador fairly held the thundering beast to him like a conscious partner in a beautiful "dance of death." The wrong step, or perhaps just a break in the form and rhythm, meant the gleaming horns would find the mark they sought.

There was no perceptible change in the timing of the harmonious movements even when the tip of one horn grazed the youth's forehead. Blood trickled down, obscuring his vision and staining his shirt front. A rag of flesh hung over the right eye. Nevertheless, he pivoted so close to the horns as they swept by again that the crowd arose as one person. Outwardly he was calm. Inwardly he feared that his first attempt to kill a bull was going to be his last. A feeling of rage swept over him. The matador, anyway you took it, had blood in his eye.

The bull rushed and the youth poised. He swung his left hand across his body, using the muleta to draw the animal's head to the right while he himself swayed to the left and slipped out over the animal's right horn. Simultaneously, the sword in his right hand was buried to the hilt between the great shoulders of the hulking beast. Head bowed, legs spread wide apart in a last effort to remain standing, the bull toppled over dead. It had been a perfect thrust to the heart.

The buzzing in the matador's head gave way to a confused sound like that of a distant tempest. Pushing back the hanging strip of flesh, he smiled in a half-embarrassed manner at the roaring crowd in the stands. No ovation that Juan Belmonte, then 18, ever received has thrilled him as much as the one he drew that July day in 1910 when he helped dedicate the bull ring at El Arahal, he concludes in his autobiography, "Juan Belmonte: Killer of Bulls," just published by Doubleday, Doran and Company.

He went on from success after success to such supremacy that his relation to Spain's national sport was as Goya's to art and Cervantes' to literature. There were times though when the spectators jeered Belmonte and times when the horns and hoofs inflicted injuries. Belmonte, who retired in 1935, tells of them, as well as of his squalid childhood days, without attempting to gloss over anything.

Eldest of 11 children, he was born April 14, 1892 in the slums of Seville. His grandfather left the family one of those small shops that sells all manner of oddments. Its meager profits kept body and soul together. Juan became a scrambling, squalling guttersnipe, stealing from stall keepers and working for his bread before he saw the inside of a school. When he played, he played at bullfighting because it was the natural thing for him to do.

"Armed with a pole from a stall awning," he recounts, "I would charge down upon the wretched dogs of the neighborhood and bowl them over with a good deal of dexterity. We still play this game in the country, mounted on horseback and using a blunt heavy lance; and to this day I know of no exercise that gives me greater pleasure than to charge down at full gallop on a young bull and tumble it skillfully over."

Young Belmonte practiced bullfighting so diligently that he acquired a reputation as a street corner torero. It was a natural result of practicing "passes on anything that came to hand—dogs, chairs, carriages or cyclists. I would give a media veronica and a recorte to a street corner, a parson or the evening star."

Even now, Belmonte says that he only had a kind of diffused aspiration toward something which his vacillating temperament could not make up its mind to define. As he analyzes it, "I practiced bullfighting just because—because I was influenced by my surroundings, because it amused me . . . because with the cape in my hands, I, who was such a small and insignificant person with a vast inferiority complex, felt myself so much superior to the older boys who were physically stronger than I."

AND it was a fact that nearly all the boys in Belmonte's gang were stronger than he. Yet Belmonte soon became their leader on the nights when they left their clothes on one side of the Guadalquivir and swam to the other side in search of bulls—or even just cows—to fight. Naked, the youths climbed fences or broke into pens to practice in moonlight or darkness on any animal that showed spirit until the watchman chased them away. Occasionally they found an animal so spirited that no one but Belmonte would try passes with it.

Young Belmonte's mind was by now firmly made up to be a bullfighter and his midnight excursions and the daytimes devoted to posturing before a mirror were driving his family to distraction. Finally his father consulted one Calderon, a retired banderillero and close friend. Calderon arranged for Belmonte to go to a neighboring tentadero where his good work made a favorable impression on a group of aficionados. Their verdict was that he had courage, but lacked the necessary skill to lead the bulls away from him, and, above all, kept his elbows too close to his body so that the movements of his arms seemed stiff and ungraceful by their old established standards. In after years, one of the aficionados reminded Belmonte of the incident and "chuckled over the memory of how they solemnly and well-meaningly advised me to do exactly the opposite of what was later destined to arouse their wildest enthusiasm."

It was the close, in-fighting style that carried the contest to "the territory of the bull," which revolutionized bullfighting, made Belmonte's name, and made most of his imitators, who lacked his finesse, into corpses. This style was the result of the nights when the naked Belmonte, teasing the bulls in pastures and pens, played them close to him because it was easy to lose them in the darkness. Belmonte didn't change his mode of fighting; luckily, he couldn't. A few weeks later and he set the population of El Arahal wild when he used it on that now memorable day in 1910.

GLOSSARY

A GLOSSARY OF BULLFIGHTING TERMS

Aficionado—An ardent fan of bullfighting.

Banderillero—Man who throws barbed and decorated darts into the bull's neck.

Barrera—Fence just inside the bull ring proper behind which the bullfighters and their aids stand when not actively engaged.

Faena—Last stage of the fight, terminating in the kill.

Matador—Man who kills the bull; distinguished from a torero, who is any person connected with the activities in the ring.

Muleta—Oval piece of red cloth with stick about 18 inches long fastened lengthwise in center. Used to lure the bull on after cape work.

Naturale—Simplest, most dangerous and most beautiful pass in bullfighting. Matador stands with muleta in one hand, arm hanging down at full stretch and spread a little way from his side, so that the cloth barely covers his legs; he cites the bull and, as it charges, he leads it past him so the horns brush his thighs while he stands in place, twisting gracefully from the waist as he leads the bull past.

Recorte—Cutting short the bull's charge.

Tentadero—Trying out of amateurs with young bulls on a ranch.

Belmonte caught on the horns of the bull at Palma de Mallorca.

Word spread that here was a great but rash torero who was bound to die if he didn't change his tactics—so "hurry if you wish to see him alive." Nobody realised he was fighting with conscious artistry. It was easier to think he was a smart aleck whose philosophy was that it was better to risk being gored than to starve. He was credited with superhuman contempt for life instead of cautious and calculating courage.

It was not until he had made several appearances after the El Arahal victory, according to Belmonte, that he succeeded for the first time in his life in delivering himself "body and soul to the pure joy of fighting without being aware of an audience." When this occurred during his appearance at Seville he found himself talking to a bull as he had done when he used to play them as a boy in the country:

"'Come on, little bull, catch me. . . . This way, little bull. Charge me nicely. Nothing's going to happen to you. . . . Here you are. Here you are. . . . Do you see me, little bull? . . . What? You're getting tired? . . . Come on! Catch me! Don't be a coward. . . . Catch me.'

"I was executing the ideal faena, the faena that I had seen so often and in so much detail in my dreams that every line of it was drawn in my brain with mathematical exactness. The faena of my dreams always ended disastrously, because when I went in for the kill the bull invariably caught me in the leg. It must have been some subconscious acknowledgement of my lack of skill in killing that always dictated this tragic conclusion. Nevertheless, I went on realizing my ideal faena, placing myself right between the horns of the bull and hearing the acclamation of the crowd only as a distant murmur; until at last, exactly as I had dreamed it, the bull did catch me and wounded me in the thigh. I was so intoxicated, so outside myself, that I scarcely noticed it. I went in for the kill, and the bull fell at my feet."

The spectators rushed into the arena, seized Belmonte, lifted him up and bore him twice around the ring. All the matador recalls of the confused faces and frenzied shouts is: ". . . an old aficionado of the classical breed, with his broad brimmed hat pushed onto the back of his head and his hands raised toward the sky, calling heaven to bear witness to the marvel that his eyes had been spared to see, with the tears streaming down his face."

Thus Juan Belmonte, with a great hooked nose, big mouth, jutting chin, frail stunted body, stooped shoulders, scrawny, bandy legs, and sallow complexion was transfigured into the Phenomenon, the Earthquake, the Cataclysm, the Cataract, the Tornado, the Dominator.

"I felt myself dragged along in the grip of a cyclone of popularity," Belmonte writes, "that would have been enough to turn anybody's head, however firmly it might have been screwed on; and I, a bewildered boy, was naturally lost in this strange new world of frenzied enthusiasms, inexplicable adulation and incomprehensive homage. The only thing that saved me was my hopeless inability to carry off the arrogance that I should have liked so much to assume, my childishness that came from dreaming of a childhood I had never had, and the bitterness and suspicion that had been bequeathed to me by the failures and injustices of my hard apprenticeship."

But there came a time when the great Belmonte began to slip. At his first 13 appearances during the 1917 season there was nothing worth seeing. He nearly always felt apathetic, cold and indolent during his fights. His friends besceched him, "Make up your mind to fight or quit — don't make a fool of yourself."

When he appeared at a charity performance in Madrid with Gaona and Joselito, they outdid him, winning much applause from the spectators. The crowd even began to yell, "Out with Belmonte! Send him away!" Belmonte, leaning against the barrera with head bowed, wondered to himself; "Am I nobody? Is it true that I am a back number?"

It came time for him to meet his second bull. He started with two veronicas that silenced the crowd's jeers. Then he gave the bull three more veronicas, "so smooth and gentle that while I was doing them I was aware of the thrilled silence of 13,000 people breathlessly following my every movement." He followed, he says, "with such a fortunate recorte that it left the impression that the bull was a plastic mass easily molded into the fantastic arabesques shaped by my cape and my body."

Then followed naturale after naturale that had the aficionados and even the royal family in a delirium before the kill. "A moment like that," Belmonte writes, "is worth all the bitterness of a torero's life."

BELMONTE defends the bullfight spectators as a whole, remarking that while they have been rated universally as an example of mob passions at the worst, he feels that they are only giving expression to their sincere feelings. He concedes that there are some types so "absolutely abominable" that the torero would assassinate them cheerfully. One type, he says, is the aficionado who feels bound to show his superiority by disagreeing with the spectators on every phase of the fight—"the most divinely inspired faena would still arouse his noisy disapproval.

Another type the matador lists is the city aficionado who is satisfied when at his own ring but who goes to provincial corridas to express disgust with such shouts as, "We're not all country bumpkins."

But in a corrida at Gijon, Belmonte met one ardent fan who outdid all the rest. Although Belmonte was fighting but "two inches from the horns," a stentorian voice kept shouting, "Closer!" As Belmonte was leaving the ring, he saw the owner of the loud voice.

"Where have you ever seen anyone fight closer?" Belmonte demanded, as he shook his fist in the man's face. "Tell me when, damn you! Who was it?"

With a smile on his "wide, idiotic face," the former critic explained, "I wasn't asking you to fight closer to the bull. I wanted you to come closer to where I was sitting so that I could have a good view."

DIGGING FIVE MILES of SEWER UNDER the CITY'S STREETS

The Adventure of Constructing the Southern-Arsenal Drainage Tube That First Was Proposed During the Civil War.

DURING the Civil War, Truman Homer, then city engineer, proposed the digging of a sewer to drain the Southern and Arsenal districts. At that time this was a rolling pastoral area, one of the most promising in the growing city of St. Louis. Driving his rickety wagon through those hills Ulysses Grant had, years earlier, mused the victories he was now winning. And passersby took him for a dreamer and a ne'er do well. That Truman Homer subsequently changed his mind about that sewer was unfortunate. The streets he'd intended to drain later became regularly pestered by floods, partly due to the lack of such a sewer, partly to certain absurdities of the city plan.

About a year ago they began digging the Southern-Arsenal relief sewer, largest of a series of long deferred drainage improvements. The hoists, sheds and scaffolds that jutted up like grotesque peg-legged mushrooms on the street corners roused little curiosity. To the general public these structures had the same dreary insignificance such projects always have. Nothing could, on the face of it, have a more uniformly deadly lack of imaginative appeal than the digging of a sewer. True, Rome's Cloaca Maxima figured imposingly in Latin literature; the sewers of Paris furnished Victor Hugo with a setting for several more or less lively chapters in "Les Miserables." In general, though, no word could stir less interest than the two syllables of that word, sewer.

So it wasn't until a young PWA worker came in with a handful of snapshots and began, with an enthusiastic glitter in his eye, to expatiate on the marvels of the new tunnels, that the subject seemed to merit special attention. His point was that the engineering problems involved when 700 men begin to blast a hole five miles long through the bedrock under a city are spectacular in themselves — no matter what the tunnel's for. He made all this sound provocative enough to catch the imagination of sewer-unconscious laymen who'd ordinarily feel tired at its mere mention.

That is how we happened to find ourselves pulling on sweaters and rubber boots and hard little hats in a tar paper shack near the head of the big shaft on Potomac street and Nebraska avenue one recent morning. The party of five that was to make the descent included L. E. Pettus, Divisional Engineer of Sewers and Paving, Nick Forbes, the general superintendent in charge of the contract, and our special guide, an engineer from City Hall who prefers to remain anonymous. His twisted heavily seamed engineer face beamed with pride in spite of itself. He seems to be intimate with every worker on the project.

The shaft we were about to descend is a vertical excavation about 140 feet deep—roughly seven to 10 stories, as buildings go. Our elevator was a dripping steel bucket suspended from a heavy chain attached to a whirring cable. In deference to vertigo, the man in charge of the engine room was ordered to make the descent extra slow. Clinging to the steel bar in the center with arms full of camera, tripod, flashlight bulbs, no one minded the extra time spent in transit. The shaft, our guide remarked, is the only dangerous part of the trip. One of the two men who have been accidentally killed since the project began met his end at its bottom after suffering a heat stroke at the edge. One thought about him deferentially as the bucket touched the floor.

Once down, the prospect looked safe enough. The tunnel stretched away to east and west. The east section was a rough cut through the rock. The west was already covered with a concrete facing so highly polished that it glittered in imitation of the string of bright little electric bulbs suspended down one side.

The tunnel is horseshoe shaped. Its floor is still covered with a few inches of water that seeps in and has to be piped away. The walls and vaulted ceilings are made with painstaking finish. All the air holes, it was explained, are on the surface. The concrete has to be inspected inch by inch with a ringing steel bar. Every time the inspector finds a hollow place, the facing is broken off, the hole filled and the spot newly finished. Since the tunnel is an 11-foot arch and will be about five miles long, from the river to Grand boulevard, with two long branches to the north, such perfection is tedious. One asked why it was necessary, why the concrete facing was included at all?

The answer is simple. A tunnel that is to carry water must be as nearly as possible frictionless. Anything that protrudes into the stream sets up eddies and tendencies to back water. These slow the stream just as a sharp upright face slows a hull passing through water—or a vehicle through air. The streamlined interior of this tunnel will increase its efficiency 42 per cent. It would have to be a great deal larger to carry the same amount of water if it weren't concrete faced.

AS WE walked on the magnitude of the job became more and more apparent. The section of finished tunnel was soon traversed. It's only a couple of blocks long. As the rough walls of the unfinished section are approached, one is more and more conscious of the difficulty of the tunneling process.

We were in a vault that runs between 130 and 150 feet below the level of the streets, farther down than any St. Louis sub-cellar or subway is likely ever to go. It stretched forward and backward as far as the eye could penetrate, straight as a die and lighted every inch of the way. The air down there was cleaner than what one breathes in the street, rather cool and damp, to be sure, but constantly circulating. Workmen trundling heavy carts down rickety tracks, which are frequently submerged by the ground water, passed only occasionally. The knowledge that between 600 and 700 men are employed on the job made the rarity of their appearances impressive. One became slowly accustomed to the idea that this tunnel is a kind of microcosm where men are living and working for two years on a project of which the people rolling around in the streets overhead are scarcely conscious. Even those who know that such a tunnel is being pushed slowly through the subterranean limestone, can have little conception of its appearance and the implications which are exciting to the men who are responsible for its construction.

To them (and this includes ordinary muckers as well as engineers) the fascinating thing about the carrying out of the plans is the precision with which they are accomplished. They don't say a great deal about it, but the few words they do say are eloquent. We came to a point on the northern branch of the tunnel where they had "holed through" the day before. The crew of men working there were still gay after the successful completion of that feat, which excavators of tunnels, tubes and mines always regard as particularly exciting. Months before the engineers had drawn on their plans the approximate point where two crews starting at distant points would come together and blast out the last remaining five or six feet of rock separating them. Yesterday a final blast had been set off and surveyors had checked the pegs that run down the ceiling to describe a center line, and found that they made one continuous straight line. This is regarded as a real feat, no matter how simple it sounds and how much accuracy the layman takes for granted. Our guide confessed that he had been glad to get it over with. He had done all one can do with a drafting board to see that the two tunnels met at the same level and on a straight line. He was certain his work was correct. "But if they hadn't holed through yesterday afternoon," he admitted, "I wouldn't have gotten much sleep last night."

The foreman of the gang who was clearing up the debris of the final blast was eager to elaborate. His name is Harold Allen and his last job was a huge relief tunnel at Boulder Dam, where two tunnels driven together met on a semi-circular curce.

Allen was as proud to have taken part in that job as a young apprentice who had kept Leonardo's brushes clean might have been proud of the Mona Lisa.

His men were so gay and enthusiastic that one was forced to compare them admiringly with crews one sees in the street. Allen was duly proud of their morale, even a little aggressive about it when he contrasted their pride in their jobs with the attitude of automobile assembly line workers, recently on strike. The men on this job, he explained, work only 30 hours a week. They don't stay below the surface more than five hours a day under any circumstances. No matter what happens to delay the project, nothing extra will be asked of them. They have warm shacks up above for dressing rooms. They get enough money to live decently — $18.50 to $40.50 a week. And they're sure of their jobs for a specified time. These working conditions, according to Harold Allen, make it possible to get through a great deal more work than one can accomplish any other way. The men are willing to give their best efforts all the time they're on the job. They don't feel rushed, but voluntarily they give more enegry than they would if they were always under pressure.

To illustrate his trust in the men, Allen accompanied us back to the juncture of the north tunnel and the main tunnel, then up the other branch, where a pair of men were drilling. He was eager to explain the mysteries of the drilling and blasting process. He crawled over a muck heap and shoveled it away himself so that the drillers would be visible to the camera. The air in this tunnel didn't circulate as fast as in the one where they had holed through. The only draft was forced through by an air pump and the exhaust from the pneumatic drill clouded the humid air with fog. While we were waiting for the camera lens to become as warm as the atmosphhere, which was 15 degrees warmer than street level and several degrees above that in the other tunnel, he gave a little lecture on the drilling process and blasting which no professor of civil engineering could have presented more simply and clearly.

THIS tunnel was smaller than the section we had first entered, only about five feet high. To blast a face this size, one sinks 21 drill holes. Each hole has a specific function, the whole design being calculated to act as a wedge, throwing the rock back into the tunnel. Five drill holes (four comprising a rectangle, the fifth above the center of the rectangle) are driven in on a bias, sloping toward each other. These are the "cuts" or "regulars." Six others flank these. They are called "releases." Seven others drilled as close as possible to the sides of the tunnel outline its shape; these are the "line holes." Three more are drilled parallel to the floor, the "lifters." Afterwards these are filled with powder and dynamite, the total charge being about 150 pounds, the sticks are tamped in as tightly as possible with sandbags, and the charge is set off.

The important thing about this is that the various sticks don't go off simultaneously, but in a certain prescribed order. First the regulars cut a slab out of the center. The releases follow in two separate blasts, widening the center hole. The line holes blow down the arch and the lifters blow up the floor and toss the muck away from the face onto a metal tray.

Allen was asked why this never blows up irregularly, making a messy hole wider than intended, or one-

PRESERVING RECORDS for SCIENTISTS of the YEAR 8113

How Dr. Thornwell Jacobs of Oglethorpe University Proposes to Make the Study of These Times Easier for Students Six Thousand Years Hence.

View of Oglethorpe University in Atlanta, Ga.

RECORDS OF LIFE, HABITS AND WISDOM OF 1937

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

ATLANTA, Georgia.

IF HISTORIANS and scientists of today could run across a hoary vault, filled with the lore of the earliest times, preserved from 4241 B. C., the first fixed date in history, the find would be of supreme importance. Instead of deciphering a stone here and plundering a pyramid there, we might have spread before us the entire culture of those ancient people.

And if the scientists and historians of the year 8113 A. D. could have a carefully preserved record of the life, inventions, habits and wisdom of the world of today it would be of incalculable value to them. Sixty-two centuries from now, on a planet whose face and whose people are almost beyond our imagination, the world of 1937 would be reconstructed, in effect.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University, has undertaken to provide the record of today for the men of 8113. With the help of the magazine, Scientific American, he has begun preparation of a crypt at the university and consideration of the material to be stored in it. The idea came to him last year. He fixed the year 8113 for opening of the crypt, because that would be 6177 years after 1936, which, in turn, was 6177 years after 4241 B. C.

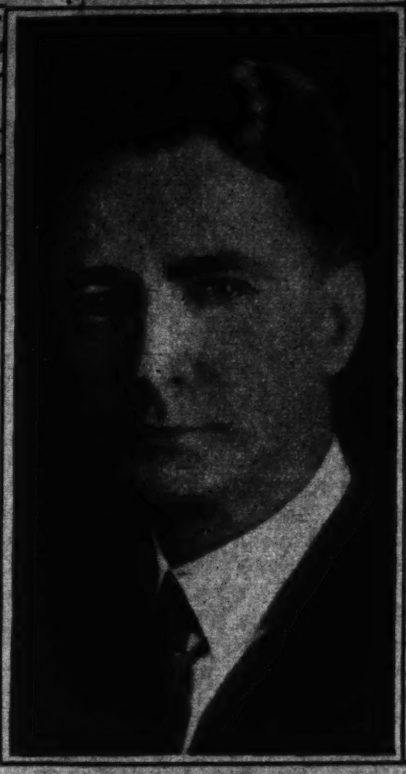
Assuming the crypt survives the ravages of time, is found by the supermen of the latter-day world and offers contents intelligible to them, they will not have to delve in the desert dust of the old Middle West to learn how St. Louisans lived in 1937, or dig volcanic lava for the records of California, or dive in the ocean for the tarnished gold and glitter of New York.

Dr. Jacobs' crypt is in the basement of the handsome granite library and executive offices of Oglethorpe University. The basement has been water-proofed as part of the university's co-operation in the plan. Site of the crypt is on the bedrock of the Appalachian Mountains, which is of ancient geological formation and believed capable of lasting 62 centuries or more.

The crypt, which is about as big as a swimming pool, would be lined with stainless steel. Once filled, it would be sealed, and a tablet of stainless steel would request all men to respect it until 8113. The crypt and its contents would be deeded in trust to the present Federal Government, its assigns and successors. Congress would be asked to pass a law to protect it from vandalism. In Dr. Jacobs' opinion, a university campus is the safest place for such a repository.

CONTRIBUTIONS of materials and of thought are being received by Dr. Jacobs and Scientific American. Assistance is being sought from philanthropists and industrialists.

"We have about decided," said Dr. Jacobs, "that the best way to preserve such a record of our times is through a combination of illustrated descriptions and models in monel metal or stainless steel of such inventions as airplanes, automobiles, etc., plus special descriptive editions of outstanding American newspapers, which will be selected with great care by the board. Copies of the newspapers, printed on special paper with special ink, encased in stainless steel receptacles from which the air has been exhausted and inert gases substituted, will be placed in the crypt.



Dr. Thornwell Jacobs.

"We propose to make available to some civilization now unthought of the running story of the life, manners and customs of the present civilization. We propose to collect a complete set of materials which describe and represent our lives and labors. It may be difficult for most of us to realize that our present civilization and all of its technical advances occupy only a few seconds in the vast spread of geological time. We are living in a geological epoch just as truly as did the brontosaurus and the pterodactyl.

"Such an epitome of the life of an old generation should include certain books; for example, encyclopedias. Motion picture films would, of course, be included, picturing the world of today and especially the physical features of our cities and countrysides, our industries and our social activities. There should be a phonograph or film record carrying a salutation from the President of the United States to the rulers, whoever and whatever they may be, of 8113. This future generation will be able to hear the voices of our President and King Edward VIII, of Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler; of the Emperor of Japan and the President of China.

"WE MUST include such homely every-day things as the foods we eat, our drinks, even our chewing gum. We must describe and illustrate our sports and recreations, our buildings, and their furniture, our engines, printing presses and typewriters. There should be a complete model of the Capitol of the United States, which, within half a dozen centuries, will probably have disappeared completely.

"The problem of preserving the various materials used will require careful study and the complete co-operation of all those interested. A carefully selected board of judges will draw up a list of those things which should be preserved and decide which can best be preserved by written description and photographs and which should be in model form. Similar suggestions have been made in the past, but none as broad in scope. The record of each generation is full of interest and wisdom. Let us be the first generation to preserve, for the intellectual hunger of those who come after us, a complete record of our daily life."

WHY the SHAH of PERSIA IS MAD AGAIN

He Didn't Like a Parisian Pun on His Title So He Withdrew His Emissary From France.

Reza Shah Pahlevi, ruler of Persia.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS, France.

THE dignity of Reza Shah Pahlevi, King of Kings and ruler of all Iran (Persia), has been offended again and France's most polished diplomats are all atwitter as they endeavor to keep a Paris magazine's thoughtless joke from disrupting the commercial and diplomatic relations between the two nations. Apprehensively remembering how the tall, 59-year-old dictator fumed at offending Paris newspapers in 1925, foamed at Berlin newspapers in 1931 and sputtered at Washington newspapers in 1936, they are doing their best to see that the ruffled feelings of royalty's champion umbrage taker are soothed.

The anger of the Shah was aroused two months ago when the magazine "Revue de Paris" published an article that criticised the economic state of affairs in Iran and dwelt on the various occupations of Reza before he became Shah. Very expertly, the French Minister at Teheran, capital of Iran, smoothed this over. He even wrote and got the magazine to publish a most mollifying statement.

Rumpled feathers were in place again and the incident forgotten. Then, several weeks later, a columnist on L'Europe Nouville started the trouble all over again. He dashed off a short satirical article on the affair. Worst of all, it was headed with a pun on an old French proverb: "Il n'y avait pas de quoi fouetter un shah."

The last word of the proverb should have been "chat," meaning "cat," and pronounced the same as "shah." If the proverb had been written correctly it would have read, "There is nothing in that to whip a cat," meaning that something is only a trifling offense. But as it appeared it read, "There is nothing in that to whip a shah," suggesting the Shah made a fuss over nothing. There was enough in that to pique the pride of a Persian potentate.

Mirza Abolghassem Khan Nadjm, Minister to Paris, at once threatened to withdraw the 600-odd Iranian students attending schools in France unless "satisfaction" was given.

"A FRENCH military mission is training Iran's army," one of his attaches added. "Frenchmen are running Teheran University; a Frenchman is financial counselor to the Iranian National Bank; there are many French commercial organizations waiting over there for orders, and Frenchmen who want to construct a railway connecting the Caspian Sea with the Gulf of Persia.

"Think about all that and you can but regret with me over the incident which just occurred."

The Minister hied himself to Teheran on the Shah's orders. The Shah also has withdrawn Iran's entry in the forthcoming Paris Exposition.

Diplomats at the League of Nations chambers in Geneva are wondering whether the Iranian delegate there will be recalled as a result of a story told right after this incident by a South American delegate. The story, based on "a former Shah's intention to take a 301st wife," caused the Iranian delegate to arise in the chambers and protest.

These diplomats, and the flustered ones in Paris, remember that Reza expressed his indignation soon after he assumed the throne because of another French proverb. Referring to Sultan Ahmad, the Shah before Resa, the papers came out with "La nuit tous les chats sont gris." Literally it meant, "At night all cats are gray." As a pun: "At nights all Shahs are drunk." Sultan Ahmad, beyond any doubt, set a record as a playboy in Paris.

Everything was quiet from then until October, 1931, when Berlin diplomats awoke one morning and found it was up to them to sooth the ruffled feelings of Shah Resa. It seemed that a group of Persian exiles, printing a propaganda sheet known as Peykar, urged a communistic revolution in their old homeland. To make matters worse, German papers in Munich and Berlin then came out with articles assailing Reza as an oriental despot. The German Foreign Office promptly suppressed Peykar and made amends that completely satisfied Reza.

Ghaffar Khan Djalal. Persian Minister to the United States, who was also recalled from his post.

Reza's choler was not stirred again until his Minister to the United States, Ghaffar Khan Djalal, was arrested by a Maryland constable in November, 1935, on a charge of speeding. His plea of diplomatic immunity was recognized, the Governor of Maryland apologized and the constable was fired, but the comment in American newspapers nullified all this. Two months later, the Khan Djalal closed the legation and departed for Teheran. The Shah was through with the United States.

That is why French diplomats are in trepidation as they seek to pour the oil on troubled waters.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

MARY HEATON VORSE
FANNY HOLTZMANN
JOHN C. ROBINSON

From Victorian Lady Into Labor Veteran

WHEREVER there is a picket line, men and women marching, strike committees, crowded meetings in smoky halls, there Mary Heaton Vorse will be found. She has spent the past 20 years of her life on the labor front, first as an observer, an outsider, and then later as an active and ardent participant in labor's struggle for union recognition and collective bargaining.

And that, if one looks back to her childhood and youth, seems very strange, for she was born into a conservative New England family and given the careful upbringing of a gentlewoman. She remembers the serene, spacious houses in which her family and her friends lived in Amherst, Massachusetts, the calm and the quiet ease of that life. Going calling with her mother in the family Victoria, long afternoons in the vine-covered summer house listening to the governess read Louisa May Alcott.

The span of her activity since that time has taken her into every part of the world, into revolution and war and the aftermath of war, the great steel strike of 1919 and the automobile strike. And yet there is in her manner much of that earlier life, a calm, a quality of gentleness, a deliberate, clearly enunciated speech, and, perhaps out of that early environment in which there were so many individualists, an abiding interest in human beings of every kind and description.

She is, of course, an authority on the American labor movement. But unlike many authorities she has known her subject, and many of the principal figures in it, at first hand and she recalls them with great vividness. With gestures she gives you an old time Chicago labor leader who in his late years has studied elocution. He is introducing Mrs. Vorse as the speaker of the evening in the local labor temple. "This old sister," gesture to heaven, "has witnessed the immemorial struggles of the working man," imploratory gesture to the audience, "and she knows more about it than any of you birds will ever know." Fist hammered down on the rostrum. "Yes, a battle-scarred veteran . . ." his arm sweeping in a broad arc in the direction of the slight figure on the platform who waits for this barrage of oratory to subside.

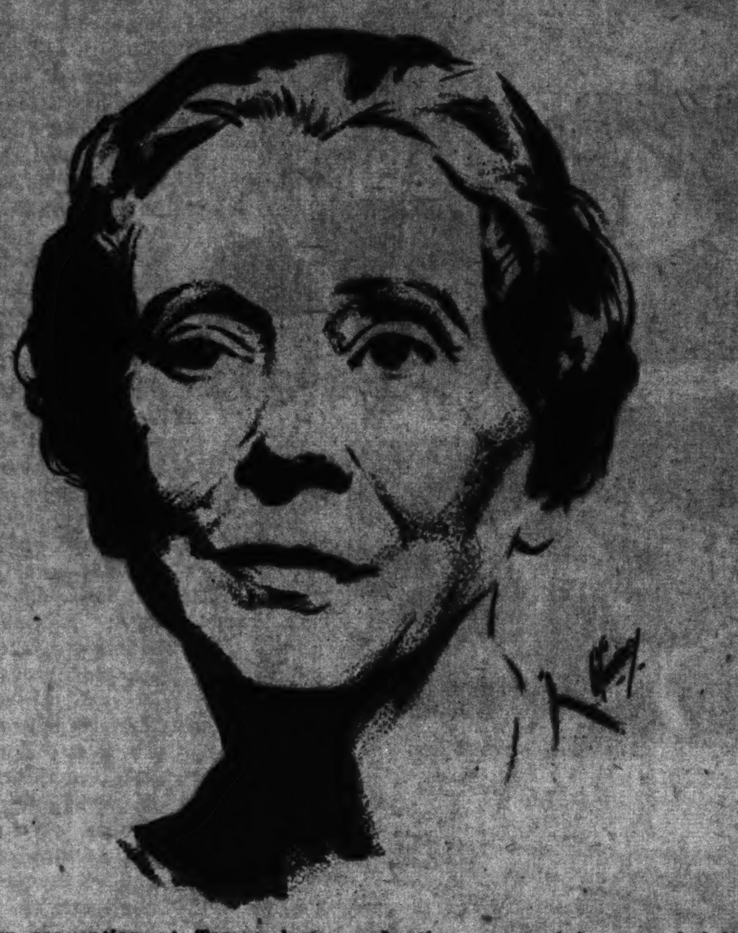
In her latest book, "A Footnote to Folly," Mrs. Vorse tells a great deal of her life. In fact her publishers insist it is an autobiography. The author herself says it is more nearly an account of the labor struggles of the past 25 years. Reviewers have been inclined to take the publishers' side of the argument and certainly it is true that her rich personality and the vivid, exciting quality of her life come through whether she intended that or not.

At the end of her book, and it is often a painful narrative because of the bitter cruelty and the stark horror that she has seen, she comes to the conclusion that her interest in the labor movement has grown out of her feeling about children and their lot in the world. In the closing pages of "A Footnote to Folly," she writes:

"MY BOOK was almost finished before I realized that while I thought I was writing about the labor movement, about imperialism, or of war, all the time I was in reality writing about children.

"For when you come down to it, the labor movement is about children and about homes. In the last analysis civilization itself is measured by the way in which children will live and what chance they will have in the world.

"Sift things down, and all governments and all civilization ultimately come back to this: Are we going to live in a world where we release the limitless energies and talents latent in mankind, or are we going to live in a world which stifles these gifts? For the development and education of children has always been and always must be the keystone of any civilization."



Mary Heaton Vorse.

What happened to Mrs. Vorse when she attended the American Federation of Labor convention at Tampa last fall is typical. She went to observe and to write articles but she had not been in Tampa for many days before her interest and sympathy were enlisted by a strike of cannery workers. The union was not well organized and resources were pitifully small because wages were low. The A. F. of L. convention closed toward the end of November, but at Christmas time Mrs. Vorse was still in Tampa, organizing a Christmas party for children of the strikers, appealing to her friends and acquaintances in the North for funds. For a time she took the sun on a nearby beach. Then she went to Flint, Michigan, in connection with the strike in the General Motors plant there.

In the course of her crowded life Mrs. Vorse has been twice married and she has three children, Heaton and Ellen Vorse, and Joe O'Brien, by Mrs. Vorse's second husband. The focus of her private life for 30 years or more has been an old house at Provincetown, Massachusetts, the picturesque fishing village that has been in part taken over by summer visitors and artists from New York. It was in the old storage shed at the end of her fishing wharf that the Provincetown Players put on their first performances. It was a community venture, long before the mass invasion of artists and psuedo-artists. Eugene O'Neill, Edna St. Vincent Millay, George Cram Cook, Susan Glaspell, all the young playwrights and scene designers took part in this venture. From it came, of course, the most significant theater history recorded in this country thus far, the Theater Guild and the plays of O'Neill.

TO GATHER material for articles and books, and as a newspaper woman, Mrs. Vorse has spent several long intervals in Europe. She was in Europe not long after the outbreak of the World War and went from one war-torn country to another, crossing, through neutral countries, from the Allied to the German side, and having extraordinary difficulties and adventures at every border. Then later she was commissioned by the American Relief Association to go into devastated areas and write about what she saw so that the American public would understand the relief work that was being done. And after that she went into Russia as a correspondent for one of the news services. She saw and heard Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin.

But between the war and her Russian experience she returned to America and took an active part in the 1919 steel strike, working side by side with William Z. Foster, doing any kind of task that came to hand and watching, with disappointment close to despair, the force of the strike slowly ebb away. The strike ending in defeat, she went to work organizing employes of shirt factories in small Pennsylvania towns for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The Amalgamated was an "outlaw" union and so Mrs. Vorse had to be on guard not only for State troopers, but for hostile members of the old line garment workers' union. It was a full time job, night and day, and yet she had opportunity for the kind of human observation that has enriched her life:

"I remember sitting one Sunday in the house of a Scotch miner. He was an old man with silvery hair. He was reading his great Bible through gold-rimmed glasses. Never was there a better example of venerable piety. Tremont (Pennsylvania) was Molly Maguire country. The Molly Maguires had been one of the early labor organizations of America, a secret society and very militant. To make talk I asked Mr. MacGregor:

"'What did the Molly Maguires do?'"

He peered at me over the top of his gold glasses.

"'Whut did they do? They killed their-r-r bosses a n d they done r-r-right!'" he said and went on reading the Bible."

She is not optimistic about the future of the world, perhaps because she has seen so much of what has happened during the past 20 years. But her pessimism is tempered by an understanding of the ways of people and a kind of conviction that individuals are intelligent enough and decent enough taken as individuals but that all too often they are misled by false leaders.' There is great hope, she holds, in the American labor movement today and she confidently expects to follow this newest struggle, really just begun, from a position close to the front if not actually in the front line trenches.

MARQUIS W. CHILDS.

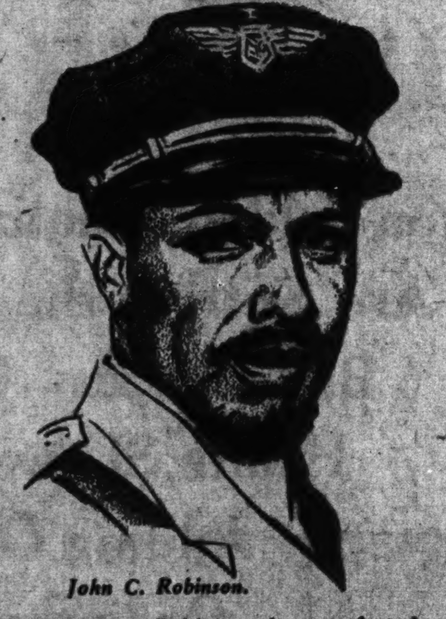
'The Brown Condor of Ethiopia'

AS THE only American to fly in the Ethiopian air corps during the Italian-Ethiopian war, John C. Robinson, young Chicago Negro, has come out of the conflict with the rating of hero among American members of his race, the title of Colonel, a smart uniform gleaming with gold emblems of the Conquering Lion of Judah, two bullet wounds, a rounded Ethiopian chin beard, and a fluent command of Amharic.

He was encountered recently at Lambert-St. Louis Field, where Robinson was chartering a plane for Red Cross flood service. It had been reported that Hubert Julian, who calls himself the "Black Eagle of Harlem," was out there, but it turned out to be Robinson, who has a pretty truculent title of his own, "The Brown Condor of Ethiopia," which he puts on his business cards for his air school in Chicago.

The confused identity touched Robinson on a rather tender spot, because he and the Black Eagle, a West Indian dandy who wears a monocle and changes his suits three times a day, were rivals over in Ethiopia. As a matter of fact, the Black Eagle was kicked out of the Emperor's air force and bundled off to the sticks in disgrace to drill rookie infantrymen, because, in a fit of jealousy, he assaulted Robinson. He accused Robinson of inspiring a derisive newspaper story about him. At least, that was reported in a dispatch at the time. Robinson wouldn't talk about the Eagle, except to remark with a grin that he was "rather a dudish fellow."

The Condor is an amiable, soft-spoken young man, instead of the flashy strutter his title might indicate, and full of politely elegant phrases like, "Revolutionaries within rather than the Italians without caused our much regretted defeat." He started flying in 1927 right after his graduation from Tuskegee (Alabama) University, where he had played end on the football team. Flying chartered planes, and later as an instructor at a Chicago aviation school, he rolled up 500 hours in the air before he went to Ethiopia early in 1935 to try to sell planes for a Chicago company to the Government. Letters of introduction to Emperor Haile Selassie from a friend, Dr. Malaku Bayen of New York, a nephew of the Emperor, preceded him. So he gained an audience with Haile Selassie the first day he arrived in Ethiopia, at a palace at Diredawa. He showed how he bowed several times in approaching the Emperor, whom Robinson always referred to respectfully as "His Majesty." His Majesty surprised Robinson by shaking hands with him, and pumping him about America. Robinson described him as "very intellectual, very kind, not at all vain or arrogant."



John C. Robinson.

The Emperor said he had big plans for importing American equipment and engineers, but Robinson soon found the French actually had the in at Addis Ababa. They were peddling 1929 Fokkers, worth about $800, to the Emperor for $5000 each, and had convinced army officials that American planes couldn't get off the ground. So, Robinson said, he joined the Ethiopian air corps in the hope of creating good will and getting a chance to demonstrate an American plane. He was made personal aviator for Haile Selassie and flew him to all parts of the empire for conferences with his chieftans.

THESE flights continued six weeks after Mussolini's troops started their invasion in October, 1935. But when Robinson and his royal passenger narrowly escaped being sighted by Italian planes three times, Haile Selassie's generals convinced him it was too risky, and he stayed on the ground thereafter.

The Ethiopian air force consisted of 24 ships, only half of them of military type, none of them except one American Beachcraft, which Robinson had imported later, capable of doing more than 120 miles an hour, so no attempt was made to fight off the Italian air force, which reached 500 planes before the war ended. The Ethiopian planes were used for transportation of medical supplies and to convey messages. If an Italian armada hove into view, the Ethiopian would scoot for the ground or duck behind a mountain. The Italians were cocky about it, and would raid the Ethiopian airports frequently, the pursuit ships swooping insolently to within three feet of the ground, spattering explosive bullets about while the bombers loafed above dropping Italian flags. Twenty-one of the Ethiopian ships were finally destroyed, either by the Italians or by crashing into mountain peaks. The Ethiopians were "excellent" pilots, however, Robinson said; most of them had been trained in France.

He himself never fired a shot during the war, and wasn't allowed to carry a machine gun because of his citizenship, he insisted, although dispatches mentioned him returning the fire of Italian ships on at least one occasion. His closest call came one day when he was flying over the airport at Dessie, which nestled in a bowl among the mountains 9000 feet up. Coming out of a cloud, he found himself in the middle of an Italian formation of 30 ships. A couple of them turned loose on him, and he made a steep vertical bank to get behind a mountain peak. Then Ethiopian rifles and machine guns opened fire from the ground.

HIS leather flying jacket became soaked with blood, and he realized he had been hit. The bullet tore through the plane and passed through the center of his chest, he said. He never knew if it was an Italian or Ethiopian bullet—frequently he was fired on by his own troops, because the haze that hung low over the mountainous country made planes difficult to distinguish, and the Ethiopians fired at every one they saw. Unable to land until the Italians left, he had to stay in the air two and a half hours, getting weaker all the time from loss of blood, he related. When he got down, he had the wound dressed, he said, and whent right back up again the next day.

A little taken aback, I said, "You must be a tough baby."

"Oh, I keep in good physical condition," he said calmly.

The other time he was shot was in a raid on the Addis Ababa airport when a piece of explosive bullet hit him in the hand. After he had been 13 months in the country, and the mobs began pillaging and murdering in Addis Ababa, with the Italians at the gates, he decided "his usefulness to the cause had terminated," and took the train out just before Haile Selassie did. He is still very loyal and denied the Emperor fled, or deserted his troops. "His Majesty decided to go to the League of Nations to put his case before it personally," he declared.

ACE WOMAN LAWYER

NEW YORK.

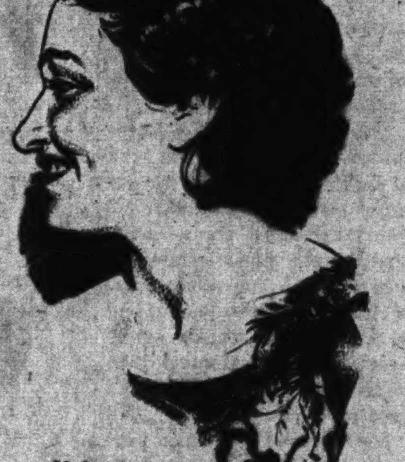
MISS FANNY HOLTZMANN, attorney, has had tea with royalty, thrown parties for nobility, been advisor-confessor for famous actors and actresses, and solved the copyright problems of world-renowned authors and publishing houses. Her spectacular career has been replete with drama, glamour and huge fees raked in from big names. But she puts a determinedly humble face on it all.

She insists on calling herself "just a little Jewish girl from Brooklyn." Her sharp, shrewd face wears an habitual mask of demureness that often leaves an opponent unprepared for a brazen demand. Short, inclined to buxomness and 35 years old, she affects simple, inexpensive girl's clothes. Probably the most wealthy and successful woman lawyer in the world, she contrasts her glittering life in London and Hollywood with a quiet existence at her home in New York. She lives with her parents in a not too large apartment in the upper West Side of Manhattan, does not own an automobile or jewelry keeps a homey, unostentatious set of offices in the Bar Building on West Forty-fourth street, not far from the heart of Broadway, and usually lunches in a department store restaurant. Her voice is soft and pleasant, but hard-boiled corporation lawyers despair of trying to outtalk her.

In most of her important cases, she doesn't even enter a courtroom. Usually, armed with a sure knowledge of the facts acquired by painstaking study, she breezily settles matters in conference, or, if it is a court fight, directs things from the background after filing petitions and briefs.

Take, for example, her most famous case, the $2,000,000 libel suit she filed for Princess Irina Youssoupoff, daughter of Grand Duke Alexander, uncle of the late Czar, against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, Ltd. Contending that in the M.G.M. motion picture, "Rasputin and the Empress," she was represented as the Princess Natasha, who was attacked by the mad monk, and that it constituted a reflection on her character, Princess Irina asked several New York attorneys to file suit for her against M.G.M. They turned her down, but she met Miss Holtzmann at a party at the Riviera, and found a more receptive listener. Miss Holtzmann stage-managed the affair into an international spectacle.

The suit was filed in London, and the trial had all the pomp of a coronation event. Princess Irina and her husband, Prince Felix, stayed as royal guests at a house on the Windsor Castle grounds during the trial. The blood relationship of the Romanoffs, including the plaintiff, to the English royal family was heavily underscored in Fanny's brief. An array of Russian and British nobles and high British officials testified for the plaintiff. Refusing to allow any name so plebeian as Fanny Holtzmann of Brooklyn to lower the purple tone of the proceedings, Fanny stayed out of court and had Sir Patrick Hastings, famous English barrister, present the case. Her name did not come up in the case until counsel for the film company suggested that Miss Holtzmann had "exploited" the Princess by persuading her to file the action. To reporters, he denounced her as a "charlatan and publicity hound," thereby assuring her of really widespread publicity.



Fanny Holtzmann

Prince Felix told from the witness stand his weird story of taking part in the murder of Rasputin at Youssoupoff's castle, December 16, 1916, by poisoning, shooting and clubbing the hardy monk. The vast majority of the movie-going public probably had never heard of Princess Irina until the suit was filed, and defense counsel, contending the character of Princess Natasha was purely fictional, pointed out caustically that Princess Irina produced not one witness to testify he thought less of her because of the movie. But the jury quickly gave her $127,000 damages. The Princess threatened to file 300 suits against exhibitors in England and the United States, and her claims were settled in full a few months later for $250,000 and $65,000 costs. Miss Holtzmann, who was said to have received half the settlement as fee, staged an all-night victory party at her London apartment, attended by Princess Irina, wearing the Romanoff emeralds, a swarm of Russian nobility, and such celebrities as former Mayor Walker of New York, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Gertrude Lawrence, Sophie Tucker and the hapless M.G.M. executives.

Often she gets as much as $25,000 for a case not even involving a suit—for spending 10 days on a clause in Fred Astaire's movie contract, she recently was paid $10,000 by the dancer. Sometimes her work is outside the strictly legal field, as when, without a fee and merely to please some of her friends in the English nobility, she persuaded Sam Harris, the theatrical producer, to change his "Jubilee" to have it take place in a mythical kingdom, so it would not offend the British by making King George V and Queen Mary openly the subjects of its ribbing. She brought Harris around by gently hinting at British retaliation.

But her specialty—one much in demand in the motion picture field—is copyright law. She has pending a suit in behalf of Francis Hackett against Alexander Korda and United Artists, charging Korda's "The Private Life of Henry VIII," was plagiarized from Hackett's biography of Henry.

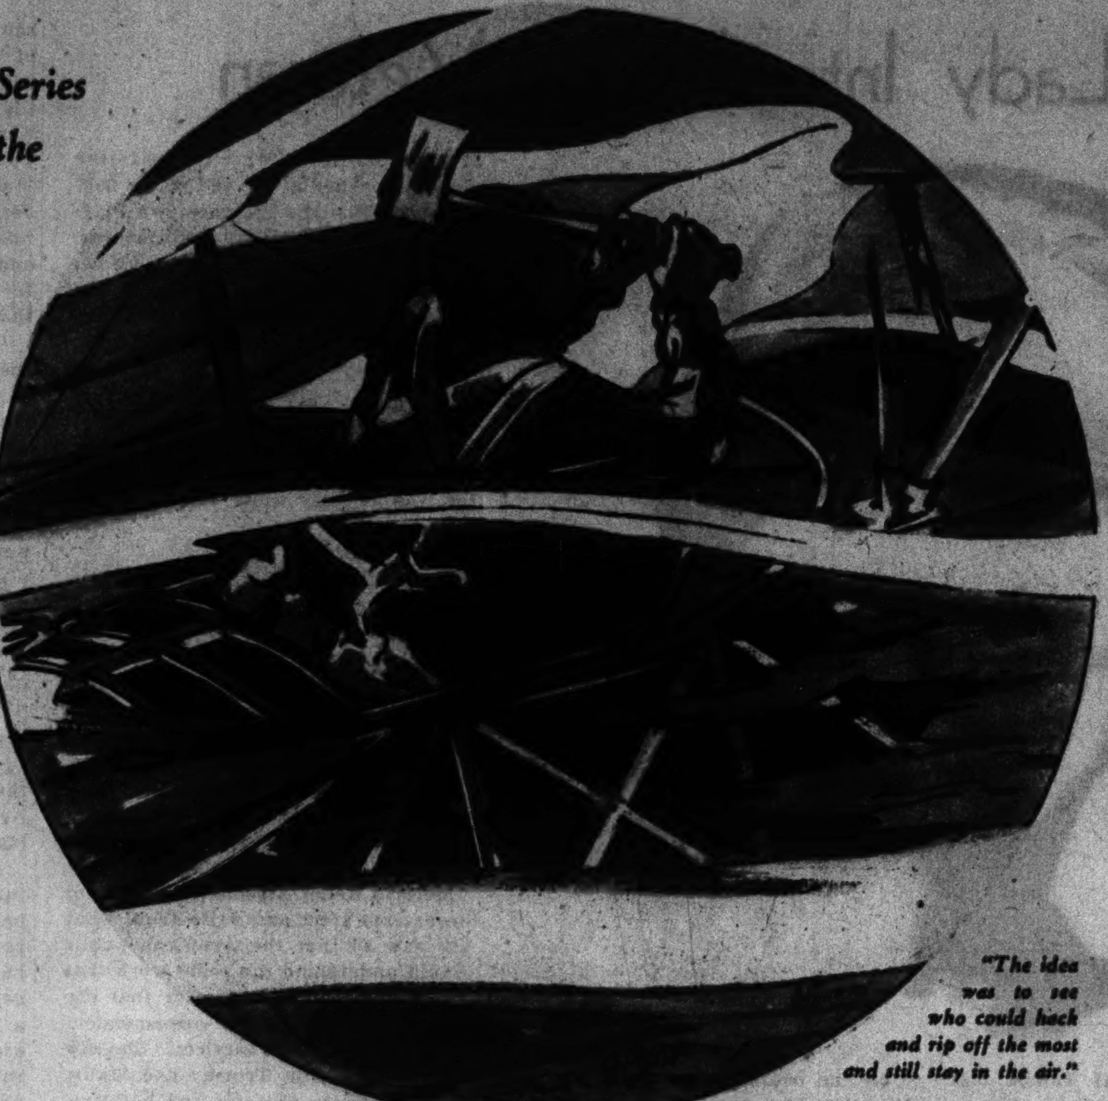
She was pretty successful from the start. She was the second youngest of eight children—three of whom became lawyers and four school teachers. Their father was a public school teacher and Republican politician. So anxious was she to get into law, that she left high school at 14 and got a job in a law office. By going to school nights, she completed her high school course and went through the Fordham University School of Law. Meanwhile she had become office assistant for a law firm which was retained by the Morning Telegraph, theatrical and racing daily. She early saw the fascination and profit in dealing with actors and writers who couldn't stay out of trouble of one sort and another, and, although not yet admitted to the bar, became manager of the firm's uptown branch, where, still in her teens, she gave motherly and strictly non-legal advice to members of the theatrical profession. The idea was, she says, to help them straighten out their financial affairs so the Telegraph could collect advertising bills from them.

AFTER she passed her bar examination at the age of 21, she set up her present offices and soon got such famous clients as Richard Barthelmess, Mae Murray and Somerset Maughan. Her English career started a short time later when she went to England as legal advisor for a rodeo backed by Charles B. Cochran, and successfully defended it against cruelty to animal complaints.

The New York and Hollywood sides of her business take most of her time—with work ranging from advising film magnates on the purchase of a play to handling some of the more important Hollywood divorce trade—such as the divorce of Ina Claire from Jack Gilbert in 1931. But London appeals more to her because of the sense of glamour that surrounds her life there. There she may lunch with the Duke and Duchess of Atholl, or the Duchess of Rutland, who has painted her portrait. There she might call on her good friend, the Grand Duchess Xenia, formerly of Russia, or virtually empty the swanker night clubs by staging a huge party in her Mayfair apartment. There she was invited to tea several times by the late King George V and Queen Mary. And that, to a "little Jewish girl from Brooklyn," was something.

DESTROYING a SHIP in the AIR—for 'FUN'

The Last in a Series That Concerns the Hazards, Thrills and Tragedies of the Flying Stunt Men.



"The idea was to see who could hack and rip off the most and still stay in the air."

By GENE AUSTIN

LIKE other rare birds, a stunt man has to be born, not made. He has to have something in the blood that makes him crazy for excitement and yet keeps him cool when it's happening. He has to like the idea of living on the edge of his grave all the days of his life. If he doesn't actually, really, deep down inside himself like it, he won't be able to stand the gaff. A man can't go on day after day shocking his nervous system into a St. Vitus dance unless he's built so that that kind of dance appeals to him more than the rhumba.

They tell me you can't shake an actor loose from his acting. He makes an entrance even through a subway door, even if the guard's foot is blasting against the small of his back and a gale of garlic is blowing down his neck and the guy in front is squashing his ribs into a beef stew. That's because he's born that way and that's the way he is and go fight city hall. Well, you can't stop a stunt man from stunting. The actor who shaves with flourishes and grace and eclat and emotion in the privacy of his bathroom when nobody at all is looking has nothing at all on the stunt man who goes out and breaks his neck for the fun of it and when he isn't paid to do it. It's happened before. It's happened many times. It'll happen as long as stunt men get born.

Myself, I'm pretty much businesslike about the business and when I go up alone I always have to soothe the better half of my nature with the statement that what I am doing is rehearsing. As a matter of fact, it's a good excuse because it's pretty nearly true. The best stunt I ever had in my bag came to me one lazy afternoon when I was up in the air with nothing to worry about except how next to shock myself into a state of nervous palsy. That was the "Three Turtles" idea and we toured the country with it for years. Perhaps you have seen it—three planes tied together with one-inch rope, taking off together, looping together, coming down together. Lazying up there in the warm sun over an earth blistered white by the pour of sunlight, I thought, "Well, now, that's something. Now there's a stunt that'll make every inch of the flight plenty exciting. Never a dull moment."

So I called up Lem Povey—a hardshelled nut that boy is, all right — and he said, "That sure sounds like an afternoon at the matinee," and we got another fellow and started practicing our timing. Timing's the point of the stunt and the real ticklish part of it is when you come in for the landing. There are no two pilots on earth that make a landing in exactly the same way. Now there had to be three.

WE REHEARSED the stunt plenty before springing it and once Lem pulled the plane in half when he dunked in an air pocket and I had to bail out and twice one or the other of us slewed sideways on the landing and pulled the others of us into a load of lumps and bruises and a plane repair bill. But once we got it down, we had something to keep us in bread and butter for a long time. And never a dull moment. Never a humdrum second because if it wasn't a bump it might be a pocket, and if it wasn't either it might be a conked motor with no chance to glide out of it. If anything went wrong up there, you'd be like a hooked fish trying to flit loose from an oncoming shark and the idea of that kept us on the edge of our seats through the whole fight, hoping, praying, sweating ourselves with worry. It was lots of fun.

But Lem Povey should be pretty nearly the subject and predicate of this little essay, because Lem is not only a natural-born stunt man, but he just can't learn to stop working at it when no one is paying to watch. I remember one time in 1933 when we were all down in Miami to compete in the All-American Air Races for cake money. Roy Hunt—famous for his consecutive outside loops and quite a card himself in the air—went up for a little tune-up hop in his specially designed plane, Butterfingers. Lem watched him stroll around among the clouds over the airport and got a little itchy and had the boys roll out his clip wing Waco. I knew what was coming and I said, "Lem, you take it easy now." We needed prize money badly. My goodness, we were always needing prize money in those days.

"Sure, sure," said Lem, "I'm just going up to blow some of that beach sand out of my hair."

But I knew different. I knew Lem plenty well. He was the kind of a guy who couldn't fly any way but upside down and if he were working for a trans-Pacific he'd barrel-roll and Immelman and loop-the-loop all those passengers clear across the Pacific and maybe wind up in Russia somewhere asking the customers why they're belly aching so much, don't they like caviar? So I said, "All right, boy, but let anything happen to you and I'd be mighty inclined to let you have it where it hurt," because we needed money real bad and that Waco was all the plane we had.

LEM—going up to blow the sand out of his hair—circled the airport once in a nice and gentle and very commercial way and then he started going amateur on a major scale. He made a dive for the field, a 9-G it was, meaning very nearly perpendicular, and the little cluster of grease monkeys and pilots and boys out sunning themselves scattered for various points on the horizon. But I stood my ground and shook my fist at him. "You so-an-so of a such-an-such," I yelled, "you come right down here." But he shook his fingers at me as he passed over head and his fingers were sticking out from the tip of his nose.

About 20 feet above the ground he leveled out, near enough to me so that the blast of air he carried along with him knocked me into one of the most prodigious somersaults ever made by a son of man, and by the time I got my scattered wits back into my skull I saw him heading straight on a bee line and going like a greased bullet for the hangars. He was hitting 200 miles an hour when he whipped the ship over into a vertical bank and tore back over the field, 40 feet high, his wings perpendicular to the earth, never gaining or losing altitude.

There are only two men I have ever heard of bladder brained enough to try it and at the same time skillful enough to get away with it. Al Williams is the other. The trouble with this stunt is you lose all the lift surface of your wings and have to rely on the stabilizers and ailerons of the tail assemblage and the side of the fuselage to keep you aloft. That's all right when you're 10,000 feet up and got room enough to play. But 40 feet over the ground where every air pocket and bump is a nod from the undertaker—well, I don't want any part of it. And I sat down on the gravel and sand of the field and watched Lem bat away like that, long streamers of dust whisking, curving, tearing, rolling his wake.

Roy Hunt, up 5000 feet, was watching Lem, too, and he decided he'd like a little exercise. I saw him diving down as Lem leveled off and I knew what was coming and I remember I couldn't say anything but "Oooooooh!" I said, "Oooooooh!" and held my head in my hands and thought the best thing was for me to go home and gets the news by telephone. But I stayed on. After all, when two of the best stunt men in the world square off for a dog fight, you want to see it even if the sight is likely to break your heart into little pieces.

I suppose that was something beautiful happening up there against the limitless blue curtain of a Florida sky. I know the boys at the airport stood watching with open mouths. My interest was a little mixed. I just couldn't get detached from what was going on up there and look on it as a connoisseur of the art of crazying your way through the air.

Lem saw Roy dive toward him and accepted the invitation. He went frisking upward like a puppy begging to play. Then the fun began. Every curve, twist, turn, drop, upshoot, inshoot, fadeaway, fall, hop, leap and flip-flop in the book and some that aren't and all done at speeds between 200 and 300 miles an hour when the wires in the plane shriek like a burning man and the metal seems like to warp under the stupendous buffets of the wind.

If it happened once it happened 100 times the boys pulled too close to each other and we thought sure they were going to rub noses and then they did. Lem did it. He came grinding down in a power dive and his right wing sheared through Roy's ship like an ax through butter. And there they were up in the air, Roy's ship flopping two ways at once and the right wing of Lem's fluttering down in wide, swift swoops. We saw Roy bail out, but no sign of Lem doing same and we thought sure he had been clipped in the crash and knocked unconscious. But he hadn't been. He was just thinking it was a shame to wash out a ship when all that was wrong with it was that it had one less wing than usual and he decided to bring it in.

How he did it I don't know and I guess he doesn't either. What we saw was him coming down in a tight bank and, as he nearly scraped earth, going into a wide spiral. He had a nasty ground loop to contend with at the landing, but it only shook him up a little bit and by the time he climbed out I was so palsy-walsy with palsy that I couldn't talk to him at all. I couldn't say nothing at all of what was on my mind.

The boys worked all night to get that Waco fixed up for the races and did it. But it was no good just the same. On the test hop, Lem flew upside down right across the whole city of Miami. He just couldn't fly sanely, he told the Department of Commerce lads, but they grounded him for 30 days anyway, by which time we were both goshawful hungry.

Dog fighting in the air is a favorite entertainment of the boys. You can no more keep them away from it than you can keep a proper lad from shinnying up a tree or walking a picket fence. I know that, but it doesn't make it any easier to take. Three of my best friends were killed just a couple of months ago scrapping playfully over Jamaica Sea Airport.

SOMETIMES the boys think up original amusements. I remember back in the old days when we flew Jennies which had all their control cables outside the fuselage, Mickey Ducet came out to the airport lugging a regulation riding saddle. "Gonna get you a hawse?" the boys asked him and Mickey shook his head. "No suh," he said, "just gonna get me a hawseback ride."

He took that saddle and strapped it on the tail of his ship. Then he fished back a throttle control, climbed on the saddle, roared, "Ride 'em cowboy," and up he went, hell for leather, as they say. He sure looked funny up there, sitting in his saddle way back of the cockpit, straddling the tail, holding the control wires in his hands as if they were reins and giddyapping and whoaing and r'aring all over the sky. He put his plane through bucks that would have broken a bronc's back. When he came down, I told him he had a sock stunt, but he said no, he guessed not. "I couldn't do nothing like that for a living," he said, "It ain't dignified. It's all right for playing around, but when you work you got to be dignified."

I knew a stunt like that would keep you in eats right across the continent and I tried it myself and found out what's the use of eating when you've got to eat off a mantel piece. So I decided to be dignified, too.

Perhaps the craziest things the boys ever did to keep themselves in high spirits were these dis-

Vitamin Shortage Can Keep You Below Par

You Seldom Realize Whether You Are Getting the Vitamins Your Body Needs—Until Injured Health Shows It. But, by Adding One Food to Your Ordinary Diet, You Can Assure Yourself an Extra Daily Supply of These Four Vitamins

D Not Enough Vitamin D

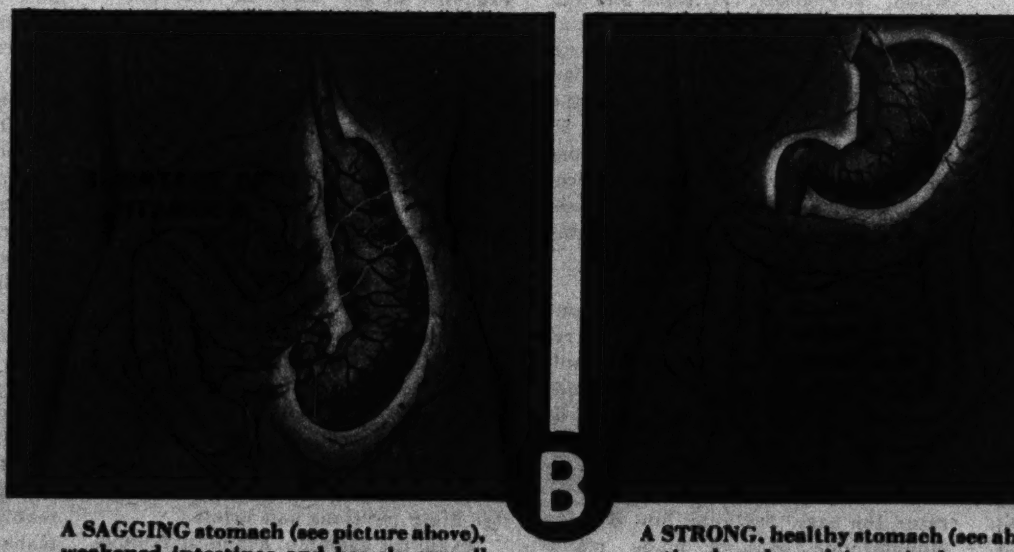
SOFT, POORLY FORMED TEETH may result from a shortage of Vitamin D—the important BONE VITAMIN. Growing children, especially, need plenty of Vitamin D to help in the formation of strong, attractive teeth. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast provides a rich supply of this BONE VITAMIN. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.

Plaster cast of poorly formed teeth



B

A SAGGING stomach (see picture above), weakened intestines and bowels can all come from an undersupply of Vitamin B—the NERVE VITAMIN.

A STRONG, healthy stomach (see above), active bowels and intestinal tract, and the normal functioning of nerves, need a rich supply of this NERVE VITAMIN. By eating Fleischmann's Yeast daily, you can increase your supply of Vitamin B. It is one of the richest known natural food sources of Vitamin B.

G Too Little Vitamin G means poor growth

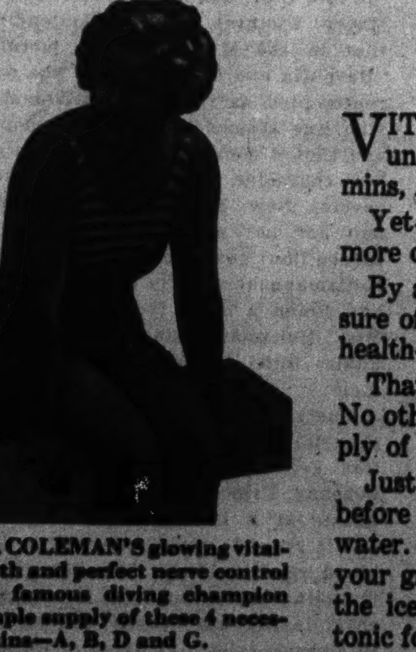
WEAK, undernourished children are often inadequately supplied with Vitamin G—the GROWTH VITAMIN. A generous supply of this vitamin is needed to aid in the proper development of body tissues. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in Vitamin G. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.



GEORGIA COLEMAN'S glowing vitality, strength and perfect nerve control show this famous diving champion gets an ample supply of these 4 necessary vitamins—A, B, D and G.

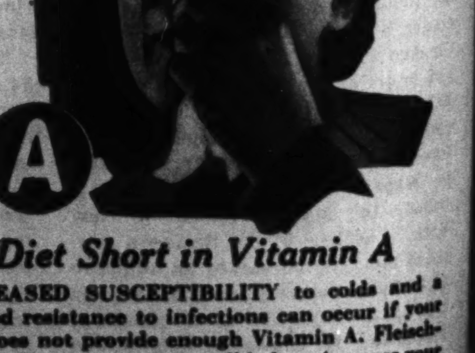
VITAL PARTS of your body can be partly starved unless you get enough of these 4 important vitamins, A, B, D and G, each day.

Yet—our ordinary meals may be deficient in one or more of these necessary food elements.

By adding one food to your daily diet, you can be sure of a regular EXTRA supply of each of these 4 health-building vitamins.

That one food is FLEISCHMANN'S fresh YEAST. No other one natural food gives you such a rich supply of these 4 vitamins combined.

Just eat 3 cakes every day—a cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water. Order two or three days' supply at a time from your grocer. Fleischmann's Yeast keeps perfectly in the icebox. Start eating it today. Let this famous tonic food help to increase your vitamin supply!



A

Diet Short in Vitamin A

INCREASED SUSCEPTIBILITY to colds and a lowered resistance to infections can occur if your diet does not provide enough Vitamin A. Fleischmann's Yeast eaten daily will help to increase your supply of Vitamin A.

mantling contests they held in the old days when a junked plane wasn't worth even the haulage. You'd slip on a parachute and take an ax and get into one of these crates and have plenty of fun. It was exciting to watch, too, but you couldn't hold a dismantling contest at an air circus. To many pieces would be flying in too many different directions and injuries to customers on the ground would eat up your profits.

The idea was to see who could hack and rip off the most plane and still stay in the air and by the time the boys got to the danger point they sure had the moltingest looking planes you ever did see anywhere. They looked like something with all the feathers off, kicking, squawking, bounding and tossing its head so far into the air it never did come back and recontact the neck.

You'd rip off all the fabric of the fuselage first, then throw out the seats and chop out the ribs you didn't think you'd need. Then you'd drop off a fin, bat off the ailerons and bend way over and hack off the landing gear. By that time you felt just like a college boy going to college in one of those lizzies that used to be so unpopular with their girl friends. What you saved for last was the wings because when they went you had to go, too. But at last you got them off and came floating down feeling all fizzy inside. Let me tell you I'd sooner dismantle a plane in mid air than do anything else I can think of because that's real fun, good and clean and crazy enough to be right up a stunt man's alley.

BUT there's one bit of madness that I never could understand and it's not the stunt men who do it, but the so-called safe and sane guys who make it their business to make flying something as prosaic as a choochoo train. That is, going up without a parachute. I'm looking forward to the day when an airplane would no sooner take off without a parachute for every occupant than a ship would go to sea without life boats.

It's a favorite remark of the layman, pointing to a 'chute, and saying, "Boy, I'd hate to be up there with one of those," and it's a favorite reply of the rest of us, "Boy, I'd sure hate to be up there without one." There's more truth than not in that wisecrack.

I've been preaching this up and down the country for pretty nearly as many years as I am alive, making a nuisance of myself I guess. But I learned about it the hard way. I learned about it from the best friend I ever had, Buddy Bushmeyer, a king of the air and an ace stunt man.

Buddy went up for a little joyride one day without a parachute and came down three minutes later in a tailspin. I dug him out of the wreck and rode to the hospital with him in the ambulance. I was holding his hand and crying. My goodness, I don't think I ever cried so much in my whole life and suddenly I noticed that his eyes were open and he was looking at me and his lips were moving weakly.

I bent over to hear him and he was saying, "I know . . . you . . . told me so." And stopped and my tears dropped hot on his face and he began again and said, "Gene . . . when I was up there . . . I never reached so hard . . . in my life . . . for a parachute."

Those were the last words I ever heard Buddy say. He died that afternoon.

DIGGING FIVE MILES of SEWER UNDER the CITY'S STREETS

sided. "Well," he answered patiently, "anything breaks to the weakest point, you see. If we line up the cut holes properly and the blast exerts even pressure, the wall is bound to tumble out in regular wedges."

But at the same moment we were aware of a continuous ominous clinking that distracted attention from the lecture. It was a metallic rhythmical sound that seemed to come from overhead, from the walls and the floor and the unfinished face—all at the same time. Seeing our apprehensive upward glance, Harold reassured us. That tiny clinking sound was made by a churn drill about 30 feet out front and 30 feet up, a point below which the tunnel would lie in just about two days—for the blasts burrow in about five feet and the average progress of the tunnel is 15 feet a day. "And what is a churn drill?" "Oh," said Allen, seeking a definition, "It's a pair of cuttin' bits with a weight of about 3000 or 4000 pounds on it, and it makes about 1500 to 2000 hits to cut six or seven feet." Here was another bit of precision, possibly even more startling than the holing through, but one couldn't resist another apprehensive glance toward the low ceiling. If there had been an error in this dead reckoning, that drill point under its three or four thousand ton load might crash through the ceiling any moment. One hastened to think of something else.

A demonstration of the pneumatic drill helped. It blotted out all sound and vision instantly. The exhaust filled the little cavern with fog. The fog is created by oil and water forced through the drill point. This stream of water keeps down dust, provides a faster cutting edge, prevents silicosis. The drill eats into the rock at a rate of about five feet a minute and seen at this close range is more formidable than one would imagine. The racket it makes forces the men to communicate in a special sign language. Translated literally into spoken language this would be incomprehensible to anyone outside their guild. The drill looks a devilish engine, but its efficiency is a source of pride to those concerned with operating it. "Just to think," Allen remarks, "that they used to have to cut holes like that by hand." He didn't know the meaning of the word silicosis, one of the most ghastly of industrial diseases, which turns men's lungs to rock.

As we walked away from the drill, I asked about the dangers of blasting in such tunnels. It seems that these are negligible. The men guard against the concussion by sticking their fingers in their ears, and blowing hard against tightened lips to equalize the pressure on their eardrums. If they're rather close to the blast, they stand on tip toe, to keep from being blown off their feet. Drastic as all this sounds, the blasting is taken quite for granted.

SUDDENLY, in the middle of a question, a thunderous roar split the air, followed a moment later by two more. Our guide was amused as the visitors buried their heads in their arms. He pointed grinning to a couple of Negro workers calmly filling in concrete. The one on top of the stepladder hadn't even blinked. We argued as to whether there had been three or four reports. The engineers finally settled this by admitting that there had been just one—a single stick of dynamite set off to knock a little projecting ledge off the side of a tunnel, blocks away. A flat dead echo filled my ears for the rest of the day.

Sloshing around in our big boots, blinking under our hard round little hats, I put a last question to our guide as we emerged into the street. What will they do with the shaft when the tunnel's finished? He said there will be narrow steel steps down to the sewer, so that anyone who wants to make an inspection can get down to it—"not that there will be any need to." And what will be visible from the street, when they finish? "Nothing," he answered. "Just a manhole cover. . . ."

A word about the purpose of the relief sewer. It drains an area of about 1600 acres, only a tiny square compared to the huge River des Peres district, which stretches from Easton and Hodiamont avenues to the river front suburb of Luxembourg. The River des Peres drainage system is much larger and more complex, but it lies near the surface and its huges pipes are an altogether different type of construction. The whole sewage system of St. Louis leads directly into the Mississippi. There is no plant to purify it, and the amount of water that drains out of the city is the only circulating and diluting medium. But so much water passes through the city that such a tunnel as the Southern-Arsenal always has a fairly strong current. The sewage that mixes with the river water is so well diluted that it is not obnoxious.

The tunnel itself is part of a sewer building program that will cost about $2,500,000, of which $738,000 is supplied by the PWA, the rest by benefited property owners and the city.

After the trip I asked our patient guide about the openings of the sewage system on the river front. Had he ever heard of criminal refugees hiding out in the sewers? "No," he said. "The only case of that kind I ever heard of was the one in 'Les Miserables.'"

Afterwards we drove over to the churn drill that we had heard from the end of the central tunnel as we chatted with the drillers. A heavy arm chugged up and down, dropping the drill point on the limestone, below which we had squatted a few minutes before. The engine that powered it sang a monotonous chant as it worked. After a moment the chant resolved itself into words, as clear as an orator's. "How'm I doon? How'm I doon? How AM I doon?" it said over and over and over. We glanced at the engine, doubting our ears. It is named "Hercules."

The Trojan Horse

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Long ago in the land of Greece, a great king married a sea-nymph. To the wedding feast all the Gods and Goddesses were bidden, save Eris, Goddess of Discord. When the feast was merriest, Eris threw a golden apple into the midst of the goddesses. The inscription on it read, "For the Most Beautiful."

Three of the most powerful goddesses immediately claimed it. They were: Juno, wife of Zeus and queen of heaven; Athena, goddess of wisdom; Venus, goddess of love. Unable to agree as to who should get the apple, it was decided that a mortal, named Paris, would judge the question. Juno promised Paris power and riches. Athena promised him glory and renown. Venus promised him the most beautiful woman for his wife. Paris awarded the golden apple to Venus.

Venus told Paris to sail for Sparta and find Helen—the most beautiful woman. Paris went to Sparta and with the help of Venus won the heart of Helen and bore her away. He took her to the city of Troy, over which her father was King.

Helen already was married to a great Greek general, Menelaus. He appealed to all the Kings of Greece. The Kings responded and a thousand warships, filled with soldiers sailed to Troy.

The war that ensued lasted 10 years. Fortune favored first one side, then the other, but never did the enemy enter the walled city of Troy.

Ulysses told them to build a wooden horse large enough to hold 100 men within it. This they did. Soldiers entered the wooden horse secretly. The next morning the other Greeks set sail and were soon lost to sight. The Trojans came out to investigate and found the horse. They made a great hole in the wall and dragged the horse into the city.

When the city finally slept the 100 Greeks emerged by a concealed door in the horse's side, and lighted a signal fire. This was seen by the others in the ships which had returned in the darkness. The Trojans were slain or taken captive and their city destroyed. Paris was slain and Helen returned to Menelaus.

DIRECTIONS—Mount upon very thin cardboard and cut out all the parts. Cut on the heavy dotted lines of the door on the right side of the horse. Fold back on the dotted line. Be sure to cut all the slits also. Now fold on dotted lines and paste (stars indicate paste) the parts together. Make the body first. Paste the head next—then insert it (from inside the body) into the opening at the neck. Paste the ears: "A to A" and "B to B." Take the mane and insert the three tabs into slits on neck. Fold the tail on dotted lines and paste together (do not paste tabs)—then insert into slit and paste tabs to inside.

Finally take the little picture and put paste on the gray edge—paste to inside of body so that picture will be seen when the door is opened.

HIPPERTY HOP—A badly shaken little frog.
WILLIE WEB-FOOT—Hipperty's dizzy duck companion.
BUBBLES AND RIPPLE—Two deep diving, swift swimming mermaids.
LARRY LOBSTER—A talkative old bodyguard.

When Hipperty Hop left Hickory Hollow riding on the back of his fast-flying friend, Willie Web-Foot, he never dreamed that he and his friend would have the strange adventures they are having. The first one for Hipperty, when they arrived in the Sunny South, was landing in the ocean. Hipperty got his mouth full of salt water and he didn't like it. Then as he stood on the beach complaining about it to Willie, a turtle, one of King Neptune's [illegible] came along and changed them [illegible] the ocean to face the stormy old sea king. Neptune took a great fancy to the two strangers and gave them the run of his court. He ordered Bubbles and Ripple to show them to their quarters, and the mischievous mermaids took the frightened frog and the dauntless duck on their backs and swam swiftly away. What a ride they gave them. We see them nearing their destination as

THE PLAY BEGINS

RIPPLE—Hold tight, Willie, I'm going to loop the loop again—We-e-e-e-e! (She loops the loop.) Wasn't that fine? (Poor Willie can't answer. He isn't feeling well at all.)

BUBBLES—Now watch me! Hold on tight, Hipperty, we're going to play crack the whip. (And away she goes with Hipperty holding on for dear life. This goes on and on, until at last the mermaids stop, and a very sick frog and a very sick duck stagger to their uncertain feet, dizzy as can be.)

HIPPERTY HOP—Whew! That was an awful ride. It sure feels good to walk on solid ground again.

WILLIE WEB-FOOT—Yes, it does, but my head is still swimming. I feel terrible.

RIPPLE—(Laughing.) You'll be all right after a while. You're just a little seasick. Come, Bubbles, let's put them to bed. (So Bubbles and Ripple, with the help of Larry Lobster, tuck the unhappy strangers in bed. Then the mermaids swim away. Larry remains as bodyguard.)

You'll be all right after King Neptune [illegible] fish tails like the mermaids [illegible] as well as they can them. [illegible]

Don't think "Air-Spun"* is just a new face powder. It is actually a new cosmetic—it is so amazingly different from all other powders.

Only a new method, a new invention, could make "Air-Spun" Powder possible. And that is what the exclusive Coty process is—the most daring powder innovation in a century!

Coty goes far beyond merely grinding and sifting powder! Now, the powder is placed in sealed chambers . . . torrents of air are released . . . which swirl the powder at incredible speed! Each tiny particle is softened . . . each tiny surface buffed . . . thousands upon thousands of times!

A texture of "impossible" smoothness results. Powder becomes so soft and luscious that even the driest skin looks less powdered! So warmly tinted . . . that it makes even sallow skin look clearer, younger.

And as a final luxury, Coty gives you "Air-Spun" in fourteen flattering shades . . . in L'Aimant, Emeraude, L'Origan, "Paris" and other precious Coty odeurs . . . $1.00.

Fascinating Facts about "Air-Spun"

Air streams traveling at a speed of over 1000 miles an hour bombard each particle of powder, to create "the smoothest texture ever made." • The air is purified through three filters before it touches a particle of powder! • The "Air-Spun" method reduces powder particles to uniform size and clinging softness.

KINDA LIKE PLYMOUTH'S FLOATIN' RIDE, EH POP?

No Orchids FOR HER!

ORCHIDS from the one and only man! The girl never lived who didn't thrill at the thought.

But there's one girl who can never have this thrill—for men avoid her.

She is the girl who is careless about herself; who has allowed the disagreeable odor of underarm perspiration to cut her off from good friends and good times.

What a pity it is! Doubly so, since perspiration odor is so easy to avoid. With Mum!

Quick to use; lasts all day. Just half a minute is all you need to use this dainty deodorant cream. Then you're safe for the whole day!

Harmless to clothing. Another thing you'll like—use Mum any time, even after you're dressed. For it's harmless to clothing.

Soothing to skin. It's soothing to the skin, too—so soothing you can use it right after shaving your underarms.

Doesn't interfere with natural perspiration. Mum, you know, doesn't prevent perspiration. But it does prevent every trace of perspiration odor. And how important that is!

Don't let this personal fault come between you and the popularity you ought to have. Depend upon the daily Mum habit! Bristol-Myers Co., 630 Fifth Ave., New York.

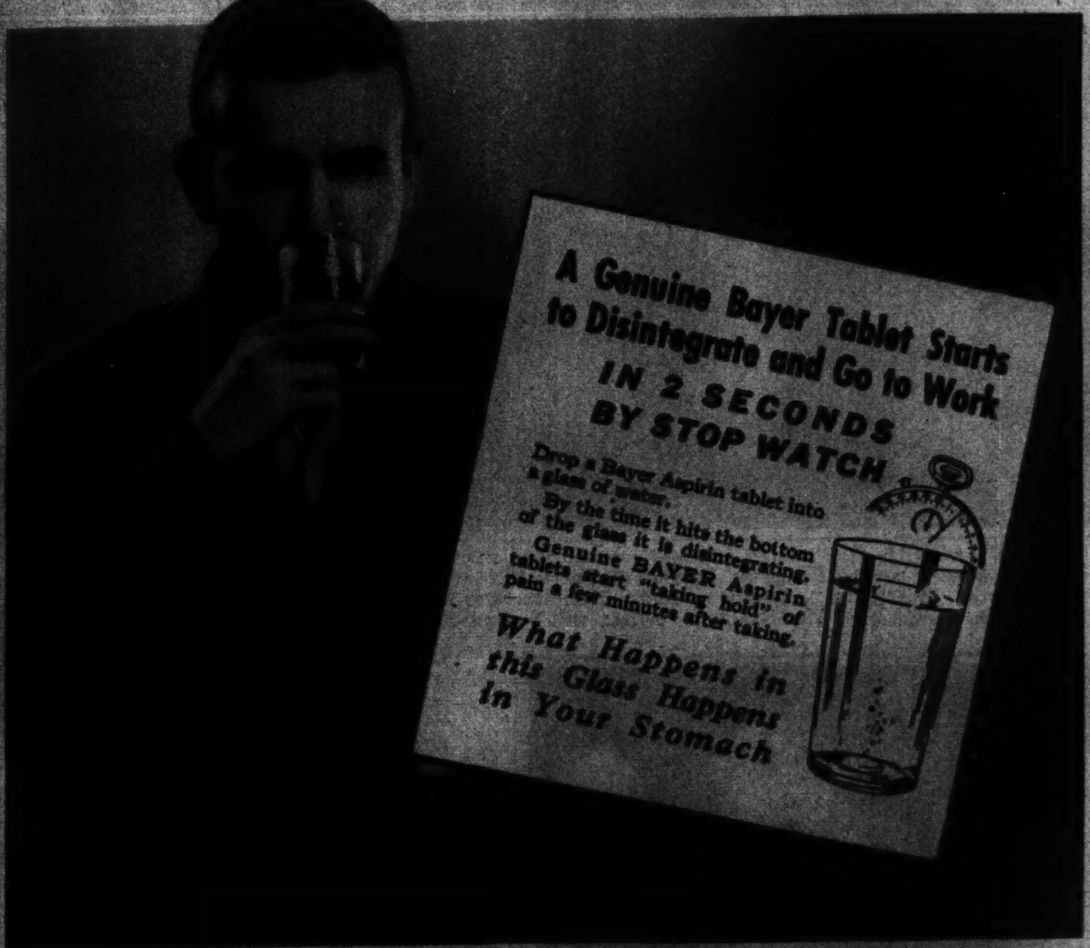
DO THIS when you wake up with a Headache



A Genuine Bayer Tablet Starts to Disintegrate and Go to Work IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

What Happens in this Glass Happens in Your Stomach

Enjoy Relief Before You've Finished Dressing

If you wake up with a headache, just do this: Try two quick-acting, quick-dissolving BAYER ASPIRIN tablets with a little water. Take them the moment you get up — before you start dressing.

By the time you've finished dressing, nine chances in ten, you'll feel relief coming. You'll meet the day with a clear head instead of suffering for hours.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin provides this quick relief because it is rated among the quickest methods for relief science has yet discovered. And — because real BAYER ASPIRIN tablets are ready to start working almost the instant you take them. (Note illustration.)

So, next early morning headache you have, try this way. Get real Bayer Aspirin now for only 15¢—two full dozen for a quarter. Ask for it by its full name BAYER ASPIRIN; not by the name "aspirin" alone.

THESE GERMS FOUND IN MRS. ROBINSON'S WASH!

STREPTOCOCCUS
(Commonly found in throat infections)
BACILLUS COLI
(Commonly present in intestinal infections)
STAPHYLOCOCCUS ALBUS
(Commonly present in skin infections)

Above are shown microphoto reproductions of three of the dangerous types of germs which were found in a sample of Mrs. Robinson's weekly wash. This germ analysis was made by a leading scientific laboratory, and is one of many similar tests being made upon the wash of average careful housewives.

READ MRS. ROBINSON'S OWN STORY by

Mrs. Calvin Robinson

Palo Alto, California

"When a man from the laboratory called for a sample of my wash, I was very certain that he would find no germs. I take pride in the up-to-date, spotless cleanliness of my household, and all my family were in the best of health at the time. Later I received a call to come to the laboratory and see for myself the results of the test. When I looked through the microscope—I was horrified!" . . .

Molly Magic PLAYS CUPID
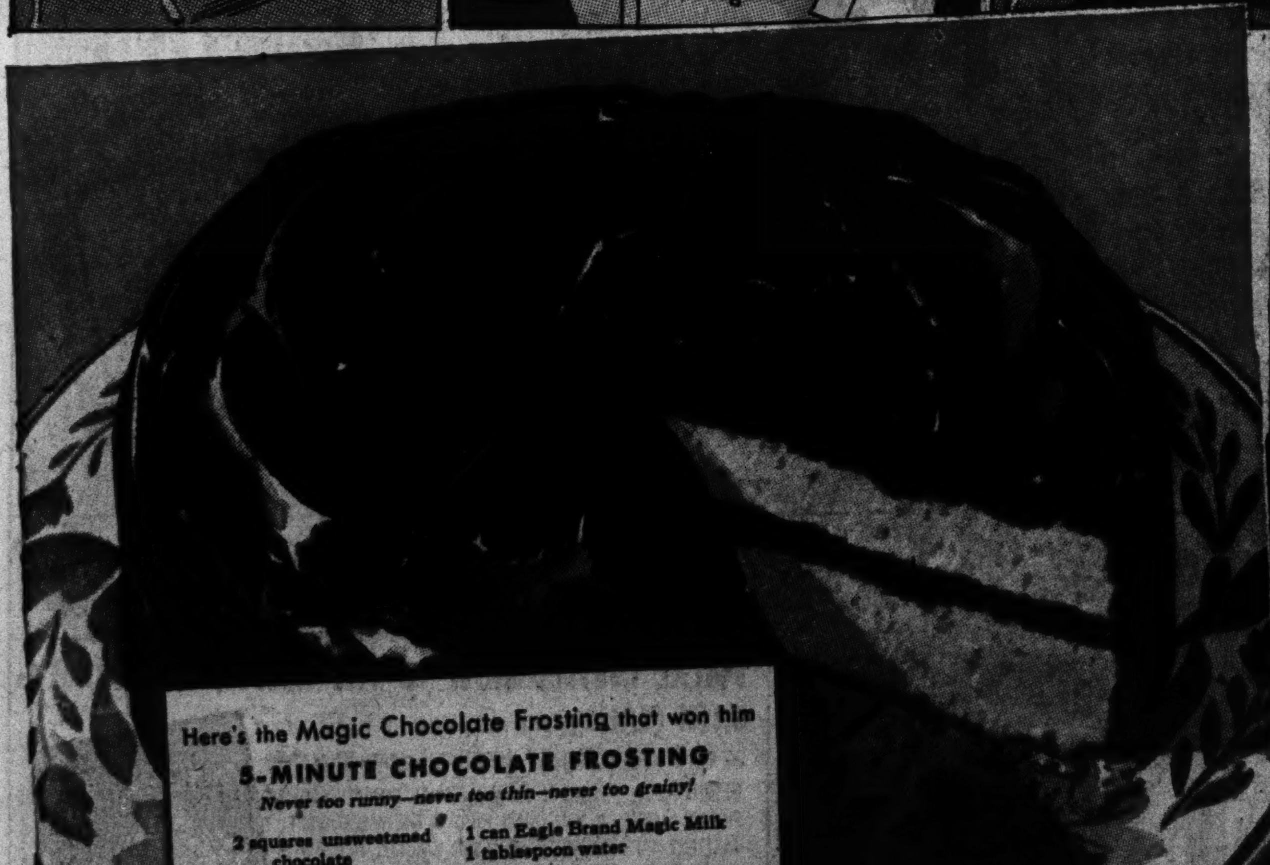
WHY SO INDIGO, MARY? ISN'T THE O AND O COMING TODAY?
IF YOU MEAN THE ONE AND ONLY, YES, MOLLY. IN 15 MINUTES. AND WOULDN'T YOU KNOW? MY CHOCOLATE FROSTING'S GRAINY AND THICK!
OH! OUR HERO HAS AN UNNATURAL PASSION FOR CHOCOLATE CAKE, EH? WELL, WE'LL JUST MAKE ANOTHER CHOCOLATE FROSTING, ON THE DOUBLE!
ANOTHER? IT'LL TAKE A GOOD HALF HOUR AND IT MIGHT NOT BE ANY BETTER THAN THIS!
IT WILL BE BETTER MADE MY WAY. KEEP YOUR EYES ON ME WHILE I BLEND EAGLE BRAND MAGIC MILK AND CHOCOLATE. IT NEVER FAILS, IT NEVER FAILS!
MOLLY, YOU'LL HAVE TO COOK AND COOK, AND THERE ISN'T TIME!
SEE? IT'S THICKENING UP ALREADY! HOW LONG HAS IT BEEN ON THE STOVE?
ONLY 5 MINUTES! WHY THAT'S MAGIC!



Here's the Magic Chocolate Frosting that won him

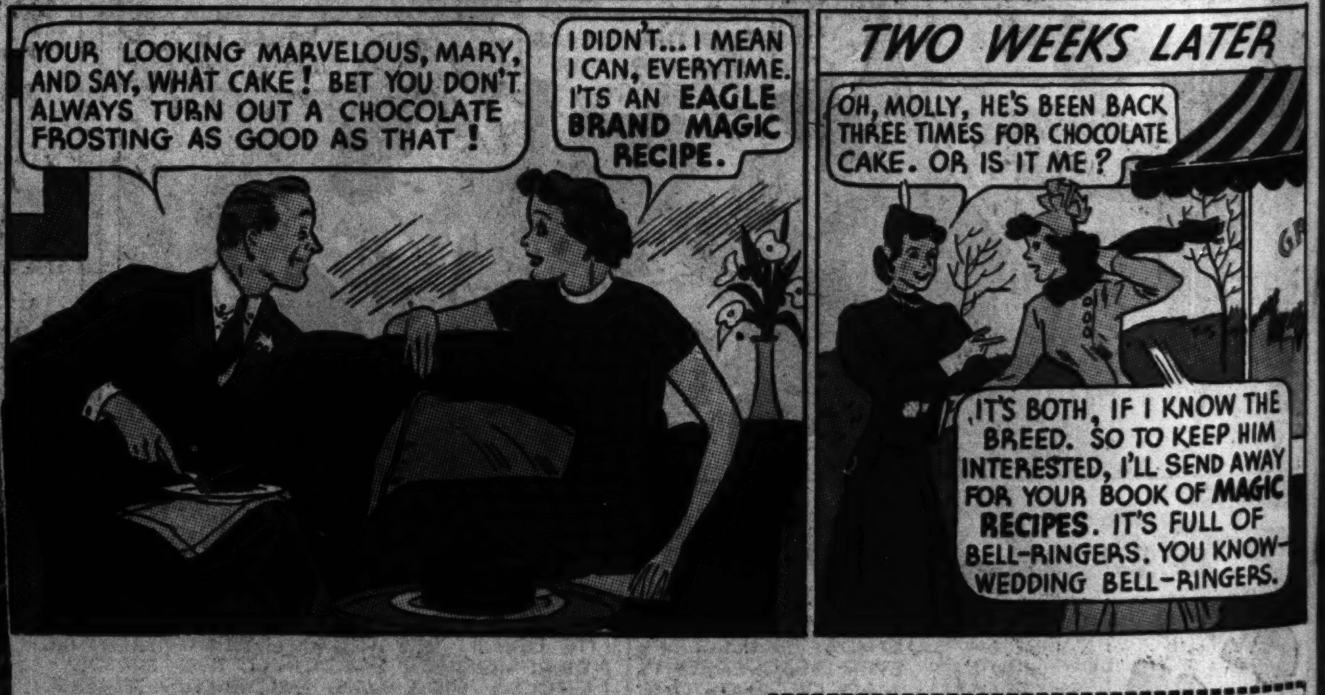
5-MINUTE CHOCOLATE FROSTING

Never too runny—never too thin—never too grainy!

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 can Eagle Brand Magic Milk
1 tablespoon water

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add Eagle Brand Magic Milk, stir over boiling water 5 minutes until it thickens. Add water. Cool. Spread on cold cake. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of 2 (9-inch) layers, or top and sides of loaf cake generously, or about 24 cup cakes.

CAUTION: Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. Use Eagle Brand Magic Milk (Sweetened Condensed).



YOUR LOOKING MARVELOUS, MARY, AND SAY, WHAT CAKE! BET YOU DON'T ALWAYS TURN OUT A CHOCOLATE FROSTING AS GOOD AS THAT!
I DIDN'T... I MEAN I CAN, EVERYTIME. IT'S AN EAGLE BRAND MAGIC RECIPE.
TWO WEEKS LATER
OH, MOLLY, HE'S BEEN BACK THREE TIMES FOR CHOCOLATE CAKE. OR IS IT ME?
IT'S BOTH, IF I KNOW THE BREED. SO TO KEEP HIM INTERESTED, I'LL SEND AWAY FOR YOUR BOOK OF MAGIC RECIPES. IT'S FULL OF BELL-RINGERS. YOU KNOW-WEDDING BELL-RINGERS.

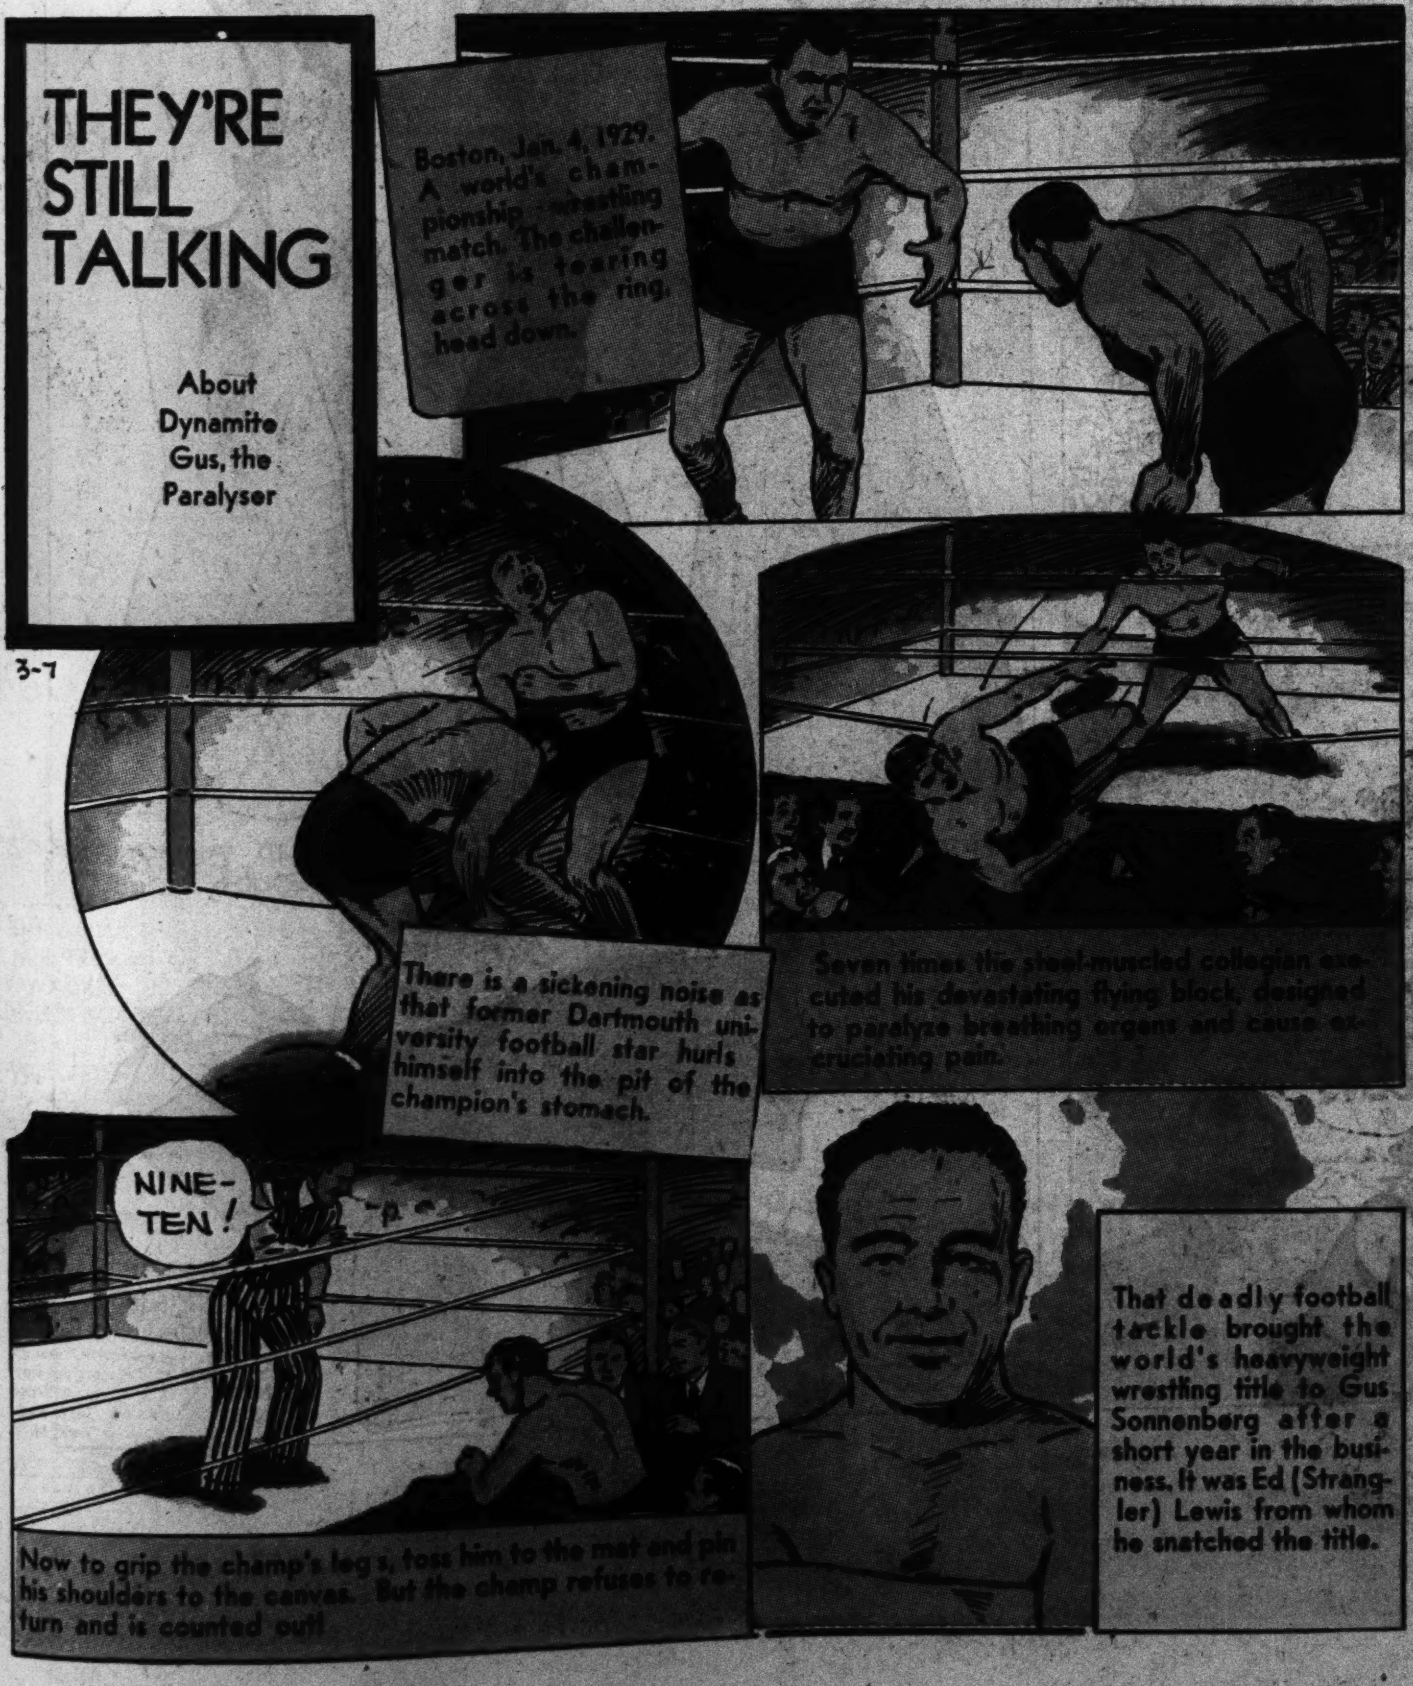
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About Dynamite Gus, the Paralyser



Boston, Jan. 4, 1929. A world's championship wrestling match. The challenger is tearing across the ring, head down.
3-7
There is a sickening noise as that former Dartmouth university football star hurls himself into the pit of the champion's stomach.
Seven times the steel-muscled collegian executed his devastating flying block, designed to paralyze breathing organs and cause excruciating pain.
NINE- TEN!
Now to grip the champ's legs, toss him to the mat and pin his shoulders to the canvas. But the champ refuses to return and is counted out!
That deadly football tackle brought the world's heavyweight wrestling title to Gus Sonnenberg after a short year in the business. It was Ed (Strangler) Lewis from whom he snatched the title.

NAN STARTS a LUCKY QUARREL
WHY, NAN, DIDN'T YOU HAVE A GOOD TIME AT BETTY'S ?
IT WAS HORRID. I HATE HER OLD PARTIES.
I WANTED TO BE SNOW QUEEN. BUT BETTY SAID MY DRESS WASN'T WHITE ENOUGH AND I HEARD HER MOTHER SAY ALL YOUR CLOTHES ARE FULL OF TATTLE-TALE GRAY.
THE CAT! I'LL NEVER SPEAK TO HER AS LONG AS I LIVE.
CUT YOU DEAD? YOU BET I DID. TELLING PEOPLE I'M TOO LAZY TO GET MY CLOTHES CLEAN.
WHY, NANCY LANE. I DID NO SUCH THING. COME ON, AND I'LL TELL YOU ABOUT IT
WHAT I SAID WAS THAT YOUR CLOTHES HAVE TATTLE-TALE GRAY. THAT'S NOT YOUR FAULT–IT'S YOUR SOAP'S, FOR LEAVING DIRT BEHIND IT.
BUT I'VE TRIED ALL KINDS OF SOAP CHIPS, AND POWDERS, AND...
BUT YOU HAVEN'T TRIED MY KIND. ITS BRAND-NEW. FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS, THEY'RE CURLS OF RICHER, GOLDEN SOAP AND PLENTY OF NAPTHA. THEY WASH A MILLION TIMES CLEANER.
THERE'S NO SNEEZY DUST IN FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS EITHER. AND IF SOAP HURTS YOUR NOSE, THINK WHAT IT DOES TO YOUR CLOTHES.
GROCERIES
HEY, DROP ME OFF AT THE GROCER'S, WILL YOU ?
I WAS A GOOSE TO BE MAD, HELEN, AND I'M GETTING SOME OF THOSE NEW FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS RIGHT NOW.
YOU'LL LOVE 'EM. THEY'RE NICE TO HANDS, TOO. THERE'S SOOTHING GLYCERINE IN THEM.
FEW WEEKS LATER
GEE, BETTY CAN'T POKE FUN AT ME TODAY. NO DRESS EVER LOOKED SO WHITE.
I'LL SAY SHE CAN'T! THOSE NEW FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS CERTAINLY CHASED TATTLE-TALE GRAY OUT OF MY CLOTHES.
FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS
ISN'T SHE BEAUTIFUL? SHE'S MY FAVORITE MOVIE STAR
SHE CERTAINLY DRESSES LIKE A MILLION DOLLARS. LOOK AT THAT SPORT HANDKERCHIEF PEEKING OUT OF HER POCKET.
HEY, THAT'S JUST WHAT I NEED TO PERK UP MY SUIT–A SPORT HANDKERCHIEF.
ME TOO! AND SOMEBODY TOLD ME FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS ARE GIVING AWAY THE NEWEST HOLLYWOOD SPORT HANDKERCHIEFS. LET'S GET A BOX RIGHT AWAY –AND GET A HANKY FREE!
FREE! HOLLYWOOD SPORT HANDKERCHIEF

for the bottom from one large-size package of Fels-Naptha Soap Chips

"Brighten your costumes with a perky sport handkerchief," say Hollywood's loveliest stars.

So we took the idea—and had these new Hollywood handkerchiefs specially designed for you. They're beauties—made of soft, dainty lawn printed in bright, fast colors. The patterns are new. And exclusive! You can't buy these patterns anywhere. So get one before they're all gone. Mail bottom from one large box of Fels-Naptha Soap Chips with your name and address to Fels & Co. Dept. 2-B, Phila., Pa. (Offer ends June 14, 1937.)

BOYS AND GIRLS! GET A WONDERFUL 2-INITIAL SIGNET RING LIKE THIS...

FOR ONLY 10¢ AND SEAL FROM CAN OF OVALTINE

MOTHERS! Ovaltine is a delicious pure food beverage first created in Switzerland (now made in the U.S.A.) It contains more than 15 food elements essential to the diet of the growing child—and is particularly valued because of the noticeable increases in appetite and weight which so frequently occur when Ovaltine is added to a child's regular daily diet.

Ovaltine is also highly recommended as a strengthening food-drink for convalescents, and the aged—and for sleeplessness, when taken as a hot drink at bedtime.

Ovaltine is very inexpensive to serve—and can be obtained at all drug and grocery stores. You simply give it mixed with milk—either hot or cold—and children love its delicious taste.

TIME TURNS BACK 1504 YEARS

Capt. Frank Hawks has installed the Time Ray in his airplane—an amazing invention that turns time backward or forward. Today, Hawks and his friends, Tim and Patsy, charter members of the New Sky Patrol, go back 1504 years to the Roman province of Gaul, the country we now call France. At the time our friends arrive there, Gaul is being invaded by Attila and the Huns, and the Romans have sent Gen. Aetius to drive them away! Near one of the Roman Army camps, Capt. Hawks has landed his plane...

CAPT. HAWKS' Time Ray

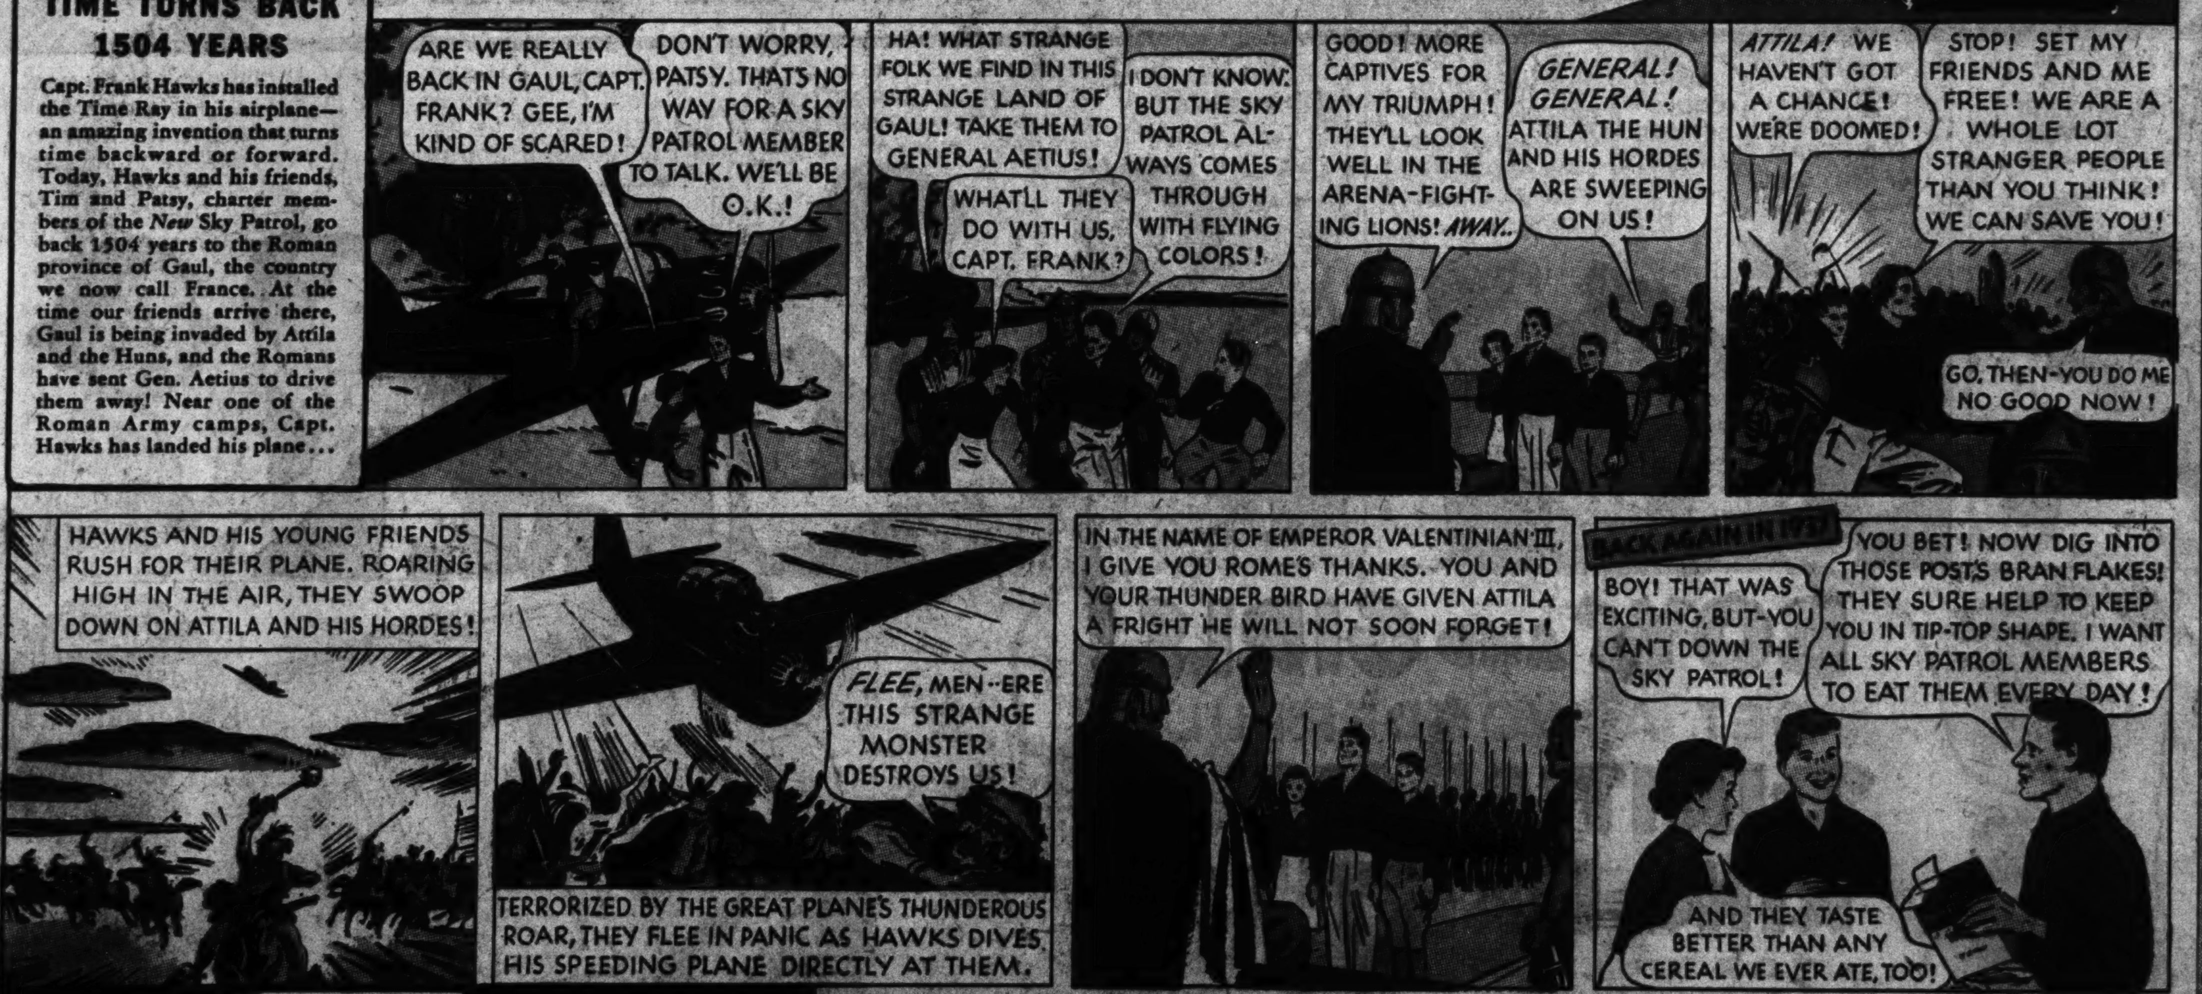
BACK TO THE DAYS OF ATTILA THE HUN



ARE WE REALLY BACK IN GAUL, CAPT. FRANK? GEE, I'M KIND OF SCARED!
DON'T WORRY, PATSY. THAT'S NO WAY FOR A SKY PATROL MEMBER TO TALK. WE'LL BE O.K.!
HA! WHAT STRANGE FOLK WE FIND IN THIS STRANGE LAND OF GAUL! TAKE THEM TO GENERAL AETIUS!
WHAT'LL THEY DO WITH US, CAPT. FRANK?
I DON'T KNOW. BUT THE SKY PATROL ALWAYS COMES THROUGH WITH FLYING COLORS!
GOOD! MORE CAPTIVES FOR MY TRIUMPH! THEY'LL LOOK WELL IN THE ARENA-FIGHTING LIONS! AWAY..
GENERAL! GENERAL! ATTILA THE HUN AND HIS HORDES ARE SWEEPING ON US!
ATTILA! WE HAVEN'T GOT A CHANCE! WE'RE DOOMED!
STOP! SET MY FRIENDS AND ME FREE! WE ARE A WHOLE LOT STRANGER PEOPLE THAN YOU THINK! WE CAN SAVE YOU!
GO, THEN-YOU DO ME NO GOOD NOW!
HAWKS AND HIS YOUNG FRIENDS RUSH FOR THEIR PLANE. ROARING HIGH IN THE AIR, THEY SWOOP DOWN ON ATTILA AND HIS HORDES!
FLEE, MEN--ERE THIS STRANGE MONSTER DESTROYS US!
TERRORIZED BY THE GREAT PLANE'S THUNDEROUS ROAR, THEY FLEE IN PANIC AS HAWKS DIVES HIS SPEEDING PLANE DIRECTLY AT THEM.
IN THE NAME OF EMPEROR VALENTINIAN III, I GIVE YOU ROME'S THANKS. YOU AND YOUR THUNDER BIRD HAVE GIVEN ATTILA A FRIGHT HE WILL NOT SOON FORGET!
BACK AGAIN IN 1937
BOY! THAT WAS EXCITING, BUT-YOU CAN'T DOWN THE SKY PATROL!
